BRITISH MINE WORKERS TO MEET OWNERS TOMORROW

Notices Sent to District Officials by Union Leaders Urging Abstention From Action That Might Endanger Safety of Mines.

HOPE THAT STRIKE WILL BE SETTLED

Agreement for Conference Expected to Result in Preventing of Walkout by Members of Triple Alliance

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 9.—The strike of the coal miners, which threatened to carry with it a general strike of the railway men and transport workers, seems now to be in a fair way of settlement through negotiation.

The dispute throughout has been fruitful of surprises, and another one was sprung tonight, when, after conferences and interviews between the parties concerned, lasting all day, and when it was supposed that all efforts to move the miners had proved ineffectual, it was suddenly announced that the miners had yielded and that a conference with the coal owners had been arranged for Monday to discuss the questions involved, while notices were sent to the mining districts urging abstention from any action that would interfere with necessary measures for the safety of the mines.

Safety of Property Assured.

The only explanation yet available as to what inducements were offered to the miners to remove their rooted objection to assenting to steps assuring the safety of the mine owners' property is the somewhat cryptic statement of Frank Hodges, secretary of the miners' union: "The conference was arranged unconditionally."

Whether the rumors that the Government is willing that the wage question should be adjusted on a national basis may be held to explain the change in the situation is unknown. If, as Hodges suggests, the Government and mine owners have really agreed to an unconditional conference, that would be sufficient to induce the miners to yield the pumping point. In any case, the unexpected agreement gives the liveliest hope that the struggle, which would have swept the country, will be averted.

Arthur Henderson, the labor leader, who is in close touch with all the negotiations, although not personally concerned in today's meetings with Premier Lloyd George, is confident that there will be no general strike Tuesday.

Agreement for Conference.

The Executive Committee of the Triple Alliance, after a conference with the Premier, issued the following statement tonight:

"It has been agreed that: First, the Government shall summon a conference of representatives of the Miners' Federation and the coal owners at the Board of Trade at 11 o'clock Monday morning to discuss the question in dispute between the two parties, and, second, the Miners' Federation shall tonight issue notices to the federation's branches, urging the miners to abstain from any action interferring with measures necessary for ensuring the safety of the mines, or necessitating the use of force by the Government."

The statement was issued by Hodges and J. H. Thomas, secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, and Thomas, in an interview, said it was the result of negotiations between the railwaymen, transport workers and the Government, and had been accepted by the miners.

The triple alliance will remain in permanent session during the negotiations in order, if necessary, to give effect to their previous decisions.

Hope for Settlement.

Concerning the probability of a settlement, the Press Association says: "There is definite hope that the negotiations will proceed smoothly and that not only will active intervention by the railwaymen and transport workers be averted, but that the miners' stoppage will be ended. The early return of the pump men is possible."

Throughout the day the representatives of the triple alliance continued their efforts to bring about negotiations between the miners and the Government. After the third interview between a deputation of railwaymen and transport workers with the Premier at Downing street lasting [illegible] minutes, J. H. Thomas and Harry Gosling, leader of the transport workers, reported that the deputation was going to discuss matters

Postal Employes to Be Armed to Stop Mail Robberies

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.

POSTAL employes will hereafter be armed and rewards given for apprehension of mail robbers.

Postmaster-General Hays today sent out an order posting a standing reward of $5000 for "any postal employe or other person who brings in a mail robber."

The order further provides for the arming of essential men in the service and gives notice that "every man is expected to uphold the honor of the service."

"Mail robberies must stop," Hays said, following a conference today with Rush D. Simmons, newly appointed Chief Inspector, and with other members of the department's police organization.

"We are going to use every power possible, no matter how drastic. The West knows how to handle these criminals, just as they used to in the old Wells-Fargo days."

FRENCH NOTE FAVORED U. S. AND JAPAN SETTLING YAP ISSUE

Communication Sent Before Hughes Sent His Notes to Allies on Subject.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9. — The French Government, it became known here today, sent a note to the United States some time ago, in which it expressed the hope that the controversy over the Pacific Island of Yap might be settled by direct negotiation between the United States and Japan.

The French note was received before Secretary Hughes sent his four communications on the Yap question and the subject of mandates in general to Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan, and is understood to have been in reply to the communication sent by Secretary Colby last February to the League of Nations protesting against the Yap mandate.

France was said to have expressed the hope that the Yap question might be settled without involving that Government as a principal in the discussion. It is not thought likely that the note will be replied to in view of Secretary Hughes' decision to treat the Yap issue merely as a part of the general mandate subject.

ROOSEVELT TO INSPECT FLEET

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt will leave Washington April 20, to review the Atlantic fleet at Guantanamo, Cuba, and make the return trip north with it. He will travel to Miami, Fla., by train, and thence to Havana, Cuba, by seaplane. The trip to the fleet base will be made on a destroyer. Roosevelt will be accompanied by Lieutenant-Commander C. J. Warren.

Roosevelt probably will arrive on board the dreadnought Pennsylvania, flagship of Admiral H. B. Wilson, Commander in Chief of the fleet, April 25. The fleet will start north under full power the next day and probably will break up off the Virginia capes April 30 or May 1, the various divisions scattering to their home yards for overhauling. Secretary Denby returned this week from a tour of inspection of the fleet and shore bases in Cuba, Haiti and San Domingo.

BONUS BILL TO BE OFFERED

WASHINGTON, April 9.—A soldiers' bonus bill will be introduced in the House early next week by Chairman Fordney of the Ways and Means Committee, who initiated the adjusted compensation measure that was passed by the last House, but failed to receive Senate approval.

MRS. LEATHE SAYS FOURTH HUSBAND HAS ANOTHER WIFE

St. Louis Woman Makes Known Her Intention to Seek Annulment of Marriage to C. G. Hoover.

STORY CORROBORATED BY OTHER'S LAWYER

Neither Mrs. Leathe Nor Mrs. Mary Tobias Hoover Wants Divorce, According to Attorneys.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Mrs. Grace Augusta Leathe of St. Louis, made known today through her New York attorney that she is preparing to file suit for an annulment of her marriage to Clarence G. Hoover on the ground that when she married him, Jan. 9, 1920, he had given her to understand that his first wife had been dead 25 years, whereas, she now learns, the first wife is alive, and residing in New York.

This latter fact is given emphatic corroboration by the first wife, Mrs. Mary Tobias Hoover, herself, who, also through her attorney, stated that, so far as she knows, she has never been divorced by Hoover. At the time of their marriage, in 1888, he gave his age as 27 and hers as 32, which would make him 60 and her 65 at this time. Mrs. Leath is 54.

Mrs. Leathe's attorney said that she has retained much of her wealth, being worth about $1,000,000 at this time.

Plans to Seek Annulment.

She had never doubted Hoover's statement concerning his first wife, the lawyer said, until about a month ago. At that time Hoover disappeared, and she has heard nothing from his since. Upon making inquiries a few days later, she learned that his first wife was living. She immediately started an investigation, which culminated in the announcement that she would seek an annulment. She has no desire to bring any legal action against him except so far as is necessary to annual the marriage, the lawyer said.

Nor does Mrs. Mary Tobias Hoover wish to begin any legal action. She was concerned, first, with letting her friends in St. Louis and Kansas City know that she was still alive, and was not divorced, as they might assume from the fact that her husband had married again. Mrs. Mary Tobias Hoover is as reluctant to discuss her case as is Mrs. Leathe, and her side of it is told by her attorney, R. W. Joyce. The matter attained publicity through a letter written recently by Mrs. Mary Tobias Hoover to the Post-Dispatch, declaring that Mrs. Leathe's new husband had no legal right to marry. The letter was undated, though the envelope was postmarked New York. It was in checking up this letter that a Post-Dispatch reporter ascertained the facts as set forth.

Mrs. Leathe's Fourth Husband.

Joyce, speaking for his client, agrees with counsel for Mrs. Leathe that Hoover is not a millionaire, as was announced after the marriage. He also quotes the first Mrs. Hoover as declaring that when Hoover left her he was $40,000 in debt to her. But, says Joyce, she is in comfortable circumstances and wants nothing from him, not even a divorce. Her letter to the Post-Dispatch he ascribes to a desire on her part to set herself right in the eyes of St. Louis friends. After her marriage to Hoover the couple moved to Kansas City, where he was living at the time. He left her about 1908, and in the twelve years they were together they made their home alternately in St. Louis and Kansas City.

Hoover is Mrs. Leathe's fourth husband. Major Oscar Wilson, U. S. A., her first husband, died, leaving her two daughters. After his death she married Capt. James H. Henry of Indianapolis in 1889, and was divorced from him in 1903. In January, 1904, she married Samuel H. Leathe of St. Louis. Leathe, a '49er, an art conosisseur and a millionnaire, was then 79 years old. Within a year the couple had separated. Then they became reconciled after she had withdrawn a divorce suit she had filed. At the time of this marriage she was described simply as the "widow of Maj. Wilson." The facts about the marriage to Henry did not come out until 1911. Leathe died in 1907, leaving an estate valued at about $3,000,000. A widow again, Mrs. Leathe, called the "richest widow in Missouri," was soon plunged in litigation. She hired several experts to help her to look after her realty which was heavily mortgaged. Some of it was redeemed and some of it sold.

It was in litigation with one of her managers, William Irvine Edwards, that much publicity was given to Mrs. Leathe's marriage to Capt. Henry, and her subsequent

RAIL UNION MEN TELL OF EXPULSION FROM ARKANSAS

Labor Officials Were in Harrison Conducting Strike of Employes of Missouri & North Arkansas Road.

WILL APPEAL FOR FEDERAL PROTECTION

Leaders, Now in Joplin, Mo., Assert They Will Return and Resume Their Assignment.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JOPLIN, Mo., April 9.—The five railroad union executives who were compelled by citizens of Missouri and Arkansas last Wednesday at Harrison, Ark., to leave Harrison and the State, where they were conducting a strike of trainmen, shopmen and other employes of the Missouri & North Arkansas Railroad, have applied to the heads of their respective organizations to appeal to Washington for Federal protection so that they may return to Harrison and resume their assignment to that situation.

In the meantime two of the executives are in touch with the strike from Joplin, and they announced today that L. J. Sheppard, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, is now on his way to Washington to lay the matter before the Department of Justice.

The Five Officials Expelled.

The five expelled from Arkansas are Martin C. Carey, Port Huron, Mich., vice president, Order Railway Conductors; L. M. Eddy, San Francisco, vice president Order Railroad Telegraphers; W. J. Potts, Little Rock, vice president American Train Dispatchers' Association; W. E. Horne, Kansas City, of the Railway Department American Federation of Labor, and J. L. Saxe, Fort Worth, vice president Brotherhood of Railway Clerks. In the party were Mrs. Saxe and S. E. Brassfield, Searcey, Ark., general chairman of the striking telegraphers, who are also made to leave Harrison.

The strike leaders denied that the crowd of several hundred citizens which ordered them to get out of the State was an orderly one. Pistols and shotguns were displayed by men maddened by whisky drunk from fruit jars, the labor men said, and pistols were pressed against the bodies of one of the leaders to impress the demand that they leave the State of Arkansas and never return.

Residents of Harrison who also witnessed the expulsion, said the labor leaders were self-contained throughout the proceeding, and before leaving counseled the strikers to refrain from any overt act of protest against the action.

Strikers Advised by Leaders.

It was also learned that the labor leaders had advanced information that special trains bearing men from outside points were to be run to Harrison that day, and heard rumors that 3000 men would be in Harrison to insist in a body that they quit the State. As a precaution against trouble, the leaders called a meeting of the strikers and requested that an oath be taken that they would all go to their homes and remain off the streets whatever took place, Carey telling them that if a lynching occurred any interference by the strikers to prevent it would only cause more bloodshed and greater disgrace to the State.

After the meeting the leaders returned to their hotel and the strikers to their homes. Carey, Eddy, Potts, Saxe and Brassfield were in conference in a second floor parlor and Horne was in the lobby when two trains, from the north and south, operated by nonunion men and laden with citizens, reached Harrison about 2 o'clock. The trains did not go to the passenger station, but were backed into the yards where the citizens alighted and were given tags bearing the printed names of the counties from which they came.

The citizens conferred among themselves in the railroad yard for more than an hour, and then, wearing their tags, marched to the hotel where the labor leaders lived and surrounded the place. They were forbidden admittance in a body by the hotel proprietor, but many of them endeavored to force entrance at the rear, but were held for a time by a porter, whom they threatened to kill unless he desisted. The crowd was finally prevailed upon by the proprietor to select a representative committee and not resort to violence. This was accordingly done and 11 men were admitted to the second floor parlor, where they met the labor leaders, refused to parley and presented the ultimatum to leave the State.

Refused to Hear Union Men.

The spokesman of the citizens committee said he was Judge Han-

Woodrow Wilson's Message to National Democratic Club Dinner

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 9.

WOODROW WILSON'S message to the annual Jefferson Day dinner of the National Democratic Club tonight was as follows:

"It is interesting and stimulating to reflect that when we celebrate the memory of one of the great founders of the republic, we undertake, if we are sincere, a solemn obligation to perpetuate and set forward the work which he did.

"Jefferson conceived it to be the mission and destiny of the United States to make it easier for men everywhere to attain liberty and the blessings of genuine self-government and to render justice imperative in the dealings of nations and peoples with one another, as well as in the dealings of governments with their own subjects.

"Do we? If we do, what do we mean to do about it?"

CARPENTIER TO BOX JACK DEMPSEY IN NEW JERSEY, JULY 2

Rickard Will Select Site Later—Newark, Jersey City and Atlantic City Mentioned.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Tex Rickard, who will have sole control of the arrangements and presentation of the world's championship bout between Jack Dempsey, champion, and Georges Carpentier of France, challenger, announced today that the heavyweight boxing contest would be held in New Jersey on Saturday, July 2. The exact location of a specially constructed arena will be announced later. According to Rickard's statement the selection will be confined to Atlantic City, Newark and Jersey City. It is understood that the last named city is favored.

Sixty percent of the gate receipts will go to Dempsey and Carpentier, the fighters' share to be divided, 60 per cent to Dempsey and 40 per cent to Carpentier. Prices for seats will range from $5 to $50.

Governor Edwards of New Jersey, dispatches received here today said, has declared he has no objections to the bout being held in New Jersey, if it is conducted according to the law governing boxing contests. According to the State law, no decision could be given after the contest, and therefore the title could not change hands unless Carpentier scored a knockout or won on a foul.

Full details of the plans for the contest will be found on the sport pages.

CAVALRY BRANCH OF POLICE DEPARTMENT TO BE MOTORIZED

Six Mounted Sergeants Ordered From Saddles to Tour Precincts in Auto.

The cavalry branch of the Police Department is to be motorized. The transformation was begun yesterday when six Sergeants of the Mounted District were directed to give up their saddles and tour their precincts in touring cars. Only two automobiles will be used in place of six horses, as the horses, like their riders, worked eight-hour shifts, while the automobiles will be in service 24 hours every day.

There are only two Sergeants on duty at one time, one south of Lindell boulevard and the other north of North Market street, and under the three-platoon system six Sergeants are required to cover the territory. On horseback, the Sergeants were able to cover their precincts only once a day owing to the vast area, but with the aid of the automobiles, the Police Board believes they will be able to get around more frequently.

The innovation followed an investigation of the Mounted District by President Miller and Philip H. Brockman of the Police Board, who said that if the experiment proves satisfactory the police horses may be done away with altogether and additional automobiles furnished for the patrolmen.

MAN GETS SEVEN YEARS FOR KILLING ANOTHER WITH AUTO

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 9.—Barney Wiley, charged with killing Joseph Raleigh last January by striking him with an automobile in Jackson, Ky., was sentenced to serve seven years in the State Reformatory at Frankfort by the Breathitt Circuit Court. This is the first case of this kind on record in Eastern Kentucky.

Raleigh, 58 years old, a miner, was convicted in 30 minutes by a jury on the charge of manslaughter. Raleigh, driving an automobile at a rate not exceeding 20 miles an hour, according to witnesses, struck Bernie Wiley, 20 years old, as the youth was crossing a business street in Jackson, the county seat, last March. The prosecution contended that Raleigh was driving carelessly. Raleigh's defense was that Wiley stepped from behind a wagon directly in front of his car. Raleigh's attorneys announced that they will appeal.

LEAGUE OF JUSTICE WILL HEAL WORLD, COLBY DECLARES

Wisdom of Events Shows It to Be Solution of Perplexities, He Says, at Jefferson Day Dinner.

ARTFUL SUBSTITUTES ARE 'CRUMPLING UP'

Day at Hand When America Will Speak, He Asserts, and Democratic Party Can Afford to Wait.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Organized peace and a league of justice will heal the world's afflictions, Bainbridge Colby, former Secretary of State, told more than 1000 guests tonight at the annual Jefferson day dinner of the National Demicratic Club.

"The great idea of an organized peace and of a league of justice," Colby said, "is today even greater and more impressive than its builders dreamed. Almost hour to hour, the wisdom of events, which is often greater than that of men, declares it to be the only solution of the world's perplexities, the only cure of its woes. One by one, the shrewd evasions, the artful substitutes, the loud puffing and pompous alternatives crumple up under the test of actualities.

"The Democratic party can afford to wait in patience and confidence. The dawn is approaching. The day is at hand when America will speak to her afflicted brethren throughout the world in the language of honor and justice; of generosity and unselfishness; of performance and fulfillment."

Wilson's Message Read.

Other speakers were Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland; Alfred E. Smith, former Governor of New York; Dr. Henry Vandyke and Charles B. Alexander, president of the club.

Woodrow Wilson sent a message, which was read after a toast had been proposed to him.

A telegram sent to the former President then was read:

"Members of the club," it said, in part, "send you their felicitations and hope for your speedy restoration to perfect health. They cannot forget the exalting vision which characterized your career in the Presidential office."

Colby asserted the party which is right can wait, but not so the party which is wrong.

Attitude of Democrats.

"We are now the party of opposition," he continued. "Our system of government proceeds upon the assumption that a party of conscientious opposition is hardly less essential to the due working of our institutions than a party of responsibility and initiative. I say 'conscientious opposition' because there is another type of opposition against which the Democratic party must sternly set its face. I refer to the opposition that is so debased by party rancor as not to deserve the dignified name of opposition. It is only faction. The spirit of faction is black. It thinks little of the country's welfare. It cares less even about the country's honor and its reputation for consistent and enlightened dealings with other nations. Faction and its evil spirit are a danger to America. The Democratic party will never descend to it.

"Therefore, we will support the party in power when it is right, or even when it is trying to be right. We will endeavor to sustain the men in it who are struggling for the right against difficulties and enmeties within their own party. When America speaks to the world on a question of principle, let us hope that it will not be with the sound of many and confusing voices. It should sound a clear and unmistakable note."

Civilian Clothes for Navy Officers.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, April 9.—Naval officers again may wear the civilian clothing that has been in moth balls since the declaration of war, followed by orders to wear uniforms at all times. Orders were received at the navy yard from Washington today giving them permission to wear civilian garments when not on duty.

GERMAN FOREIGN MINISTER DETAINED BY ITALIAN POLICE

Dr. Walter Simons, However, Soon Convinces Officers He Is Not "Suspicious Character."

By the Associated Press.

BERNE, Switzerland, April 9.—The German Foreign Minister, Dr. Walter Simons, declared today that Germany would make provision for the reparations due the allies, adding that the German Government would soon take occasion to prove its good will.

Dr. Simons made this declaration in a conversation with Dr. Motta, chief of the Swiss Political Department. He also conferred with President Schultess and Vice President Haab.

Dr. Simons, who is on his way to Berlin after a rest of several days at Lugano, recently was detained as a suspicious character by the Italian police on the Italian side of Lake Lugano, it was learned today.

With two German friends, Dr. Simons, while in a motorboat on Lake Lugano was overtaken by a storm. They were forced to put ashore on the Italian side of the lake. As the Germans had no passports and spoke no Italian, the police marched them four miles through rain and darkness to Ponte Tresa, where the authorities scoffed at the claim of Dr. Simons that he was the German Foreign Minister. Finally Lugano was called on the telephone and the Germans were vouched for. They reached their hotel in Lugano at midnight worn out and drenched.

PAPER MILL WORKERS REJECT 30 PER CENT WAGE REDUCTION

Unions Are Told Work Will Cease If Agreements on Cut Are Not Reached.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Union representatives of the workers in the paper and pulp mills of the United States and Canada at a conference here today unanimously rejected a proposal submitted by the mill owners calling for a 30 per cent wage reduction and increasing the working day from eight to nine hours.

The action of the representatives now will be submitted by referendum to the rank and file of the workers of the various unions for their approval or rejection with the understanding that in case "satisfactory agreements are not made between now and the time of the expiration of the present agreements, work will automatically cease in the mills of the companies."

SILENT CROWDS VIEW MILITARY CORTEGE; BUSINESS PAUSES 2 MINUTES

Bodies of Four Soldiers, Who Were Killed in Action, Are Carried on Caissons in Solemn Procession to Moolah Temple, Where Oration Is Delivered by C. M. Hay.

CROWD AT CITY HALL AND ON 12TH STREET

Barracks Soldiers, First Regiment, Legion Men and Policemen and Mayor March — Relatives Take Charge at the Burials.

A public funeral for four St. Louis soldiers, so conducted that the entire population could participate in some way, yesterday concluded the period of formal mourning which the city entered Friday at noon as a mark of gratitude and homage for more than 500 of its sons who made the supreme sacrifice in France.

The ceremonies began at noon with a two-minute period of silence, during which industry was expected to supend, business to pause and citizens to stand with bowed heads wherever they happened to be. The bodes of the four men then were carried in military funeral procession from the city hall through Twelfth street, which two years ago was a court of honor for the march of those other heroes who came back, westward to Moolah Temple, where public eulogies were pronounced, after which they were given over to relatives for private burial.

Church Bells Are Tolled.

The procession moved along the entire route slowly to the music of dirges played by military bands, above which rose the tolling of church bells. The three blocks in Twelfth street were traversed between lanes, five and six persons deep on either side, of men, women and children who stood in silence and bared and bowed their heads as the four caissons bearing the bodies passed them.

The lines of people were unbroken along Locust street to Eighteenth street, but thinned perceptibly thereafter. Large groups stood at the principal thoroughfare intersections, but, though the sun shone brightly, a chilling wind and a temperature of 42 degrees made standing out of doors uncomfortable. There was a large gathering awaiting the cortege at Moolah Temple, and that portion of the auditorium given over to the public during the services there was filled to capacity.

So slowly did the procession move that the march from the city hall to the temple, which is at 3821 Lindell boulevard, required one hour and 10 minutes. Though the procession was not long, it required 22 minutes to pass one point. When the two mounted policemen bringing up the rear turned into Locust street from Twelfth, the mounted police, leading, were crossing Jefferson avenue.

Crowd Outside City Hall.

People went in great numbers yesterday morning, as they had Friday, to the city hall rotunda, where the caskets containing the bodies rested for 24 hours. As noon approached the crowd in and about the rotunda had pre-empted virtually all the standing room outside a police line drawn about the caskets. Several hundred others looked down from the balconies above and several thousand were in the street outside the Twelfth street entrance.

As the City Hall clock struck 12, a bugler blew the melancholy notes of "taps." The guard of honor, which had ben at ease, came to attention, and the crowd stilled. At 12:02 o'clock "taps" again was sounded. Color bearers of the American Legion advanced to the seventeen American flags and seventeen Legion banners, which had stood near the bodies, and carried them through the east entrance into

CENSUS VALUES ON FARMS GREATER THAN ASSESSMENT

"True Value Equalization" in Missouri $1,221,388,971 Under the Government Estimates.

PROTESTS, HOWEVER, FROM SOME COUNTIES

Board to Hear Complaints on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of This Week at State Capital.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 9.—Total values placed on farm land in Missouri by the State Board of Equalization, and given out as a "true value equalization," are nearly one and a quarter billion dollars less than the total value placed upon the same property by the United States Census. The Board of Equalization placed the figures at $1,841,538,729, while the United States census fixed them at $3,062,967,700, a difference of $1,221,388,971.

Members of the State board, which is composed of Gov. Hyde, Secretary of tSate Becker, Auditor Hackmann, Treasurer Thompson and Attorney-General Barrett, sent out a letter last Saturday with certificates of the equalization, stating that they had complied with the law, which requires that property be assessed at its true value.

Three Members Silent.

Three members of the board, when asked yesterday if they regard their figures as an actual true value equalization, were unwilling to answer affirmatively without qualification.

Gov. Hyde, Hackmann and Barrett, interviewed separately, each said that their equalization is as near true value as "it is humanly possible to come."

Residents of some of the cities where large increases have been placed upon the assessed values of town lots are inclined to feel that the equalization is not a fair one, from their standpoint. In St. Louis, for instance, town lots have been increased from $634,689,260 the valuation for purposes of taxation in 1920, to $855,691,200, which is greater than the entire valuation of all property for 1920, which was $752,806,434.

Comparison of Figures.

Counties, picked at random from throughout the State show much the same comparison between the Federal figures on farm land, and those fixed by the State board. A few of those follow:

Adair County, $19,282,382 by board, $29,797,490 by Federal census.

Christian County, $5,312,631 by board; $15,060,991 by Federal census.

Dallas County, $6,675,423 by board; $10,465,298 by census.

Grundy County, $20,198,795 by board; $36,615,137 by census.

Barton County, $13,828,596 by board; $22,199,104 by census.

Cape Girardeau County, $13,033,571 by board; $23,780,179 by census.

Randolph County, $14,909,031 by board; $27,456,459 by census.

Polk County, $9,003,496 by board; $23,977,258 by census.

Census Figures Used.

Figures of the census on farm land as well as other questions of agricultural values were used by the Tax Commission in making its estimate of $2,109,985,204 upon the value of Missouri farm land.

The increases which were placed upon the counties in the interior of the State, however, have brought from many of them a loud and prolonged protest, which has resulted in the members of the board fixing Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week to hear representatives of all of the counties which have a complaint to make about their valuations.

Members of the board, asked yesterday whether they can undo the valuations which they have fixed, said that "we can correct errors."

Attitude of Barrett.

Attorney-General Barrett said that he did not speak for the board, but only for himself.

"My attitude toward true valuations is unchanged," he said, "and I intend to maintain the same attitude I did maintain in first fixing the valuations. If erroneous valuations have been fixed, they, of course, should be changed."

Barrett said that the board, being a constitutional body, is its own judge as to what would constitute an "error."

BURLESON TO TOUR EUROPE

Will Endeavor to Find Suitable Market for Texas Cotton.

By the Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., April 9.—Former Postmaster-General Albert S. Burleson will leave immediately on a tour of Continental Europe, in an endeavor to find a suitable market for Texas cotton, and at the same time dispose of approximately 2,000,000 bales remaining unsold from last year's crop, according to announcement made today by the president of a local bank which has engaged Burleson and is backing the enterprise. He will be accompanied by N. C. Schlemmer of Austin.

H. A. Wroe, the bank's executive, said he plans to organize a cotton exporting association, provided Burleson's investigations merit such an organization.

Points at Issue in British Strike and the Number of Workers Involved

THE coal miners, with a membership of 1,200,000 men, struck April 1, and the Triple Alliance, the most powerful labor organization in England, has voted a sympathy strike to take effect at midnight next Tuesday.

The Triple Alliance has a membership of 3,000,000, embracin all men employed in the mines, and all those engaged in any kind of railroad work. The third branch of the alliance is the transport men, including taxicab drivers, underground railroad employes, and all those engaged in tramways, waterways, shipping docks and power stations.

While the men are demanding a standard wage scale, regardless of production, with other reforms, the strike in reality is an echo of the strike last August, when the Government was in control of the mines, under an emergency act growing out of the war.

The miners went out in August to enforce a demand for an increase of 50 cents a day and a reduction in the price of coal to the workers. The strike was called off by William Brace, general secretary of the miners' organization, after which he resigned from the organization and accepted a Government position. The miners, however, were given the increase of two shillings (about 50 gents), on the day.

When the Government relinquished control over the mines, and the shafts reverted to private ownership, it was announced that a reduction in wages would be made at the expiration of the existing agreement, April 1.

The men are demanding a national board representing the owners, the workers and the Government, with authority to regulate wages. They are also insisting that the earnings of all the mines be pooled, so as to enable a national wage scale, applicable to the workers in poor as well as rich shafts. The Government subsidy to be replaced by subsidies from one mining company to another.

The mine owners have refused these demands, and announced that the wage scale would be based upon production, increased production to bring increased pay. The Government has declined to nationalize the operation of the mines with Government supervision.

Negotiations looking to the adjustment of the controversy collapsed when the miners refused the Government's first request which was the resumption of pumping to clear the mines of water. The miners contended that they could not be restricted to the discussion of a single phase of the controversy, and the Government's insistence that the national interest—the preservation of the mines—was paramount, ended the negotiations.

again with the miners, but would not see the Premier again until tomorrow.

At this conference Sir Eric Geddes, Lord Birkenhead, Sir Robert S. Horne, Austen Chamberlain and other members of the Government were present. After this conference the Prime Minister went to Buckingham Palace and had an audience with the King.

Protection for Volunteers.

During the course of the day it was reported that, provided the pumping difficulty could be surmounted, the Government was not averse to negotiating the wage question on a national basis, as claimed by the miners. It is not absolutely certain, however, that the Government will go that far with respect to wages.

The cabinet today sanctioned measures to ensure the safety of the mines and batches of naval ratings were sent to Wales and Scotland to protect the volunteers and pumpers, together with additional troops to aid the civil authorities, in the maintenance of public order and essential national service.

Preparation for Emergency.

Preparations for an emergency, including action of the Prime Minister in telegraphing to the Lord Lieutenants of England, Scotland and Wales impressing upon them the urgency of encouraging recruiting of the emergency force and requesting them to persuade employers of labor to release men for this purpose and hold their positions open to them.

The War Office announced that the response to the call for recruits in London and the provinces had exceeded all expectations. The printed supply of attestation forms was exhausted as early as noon today.

The Department of Mines of the Board of Trade has sent out circulars urging the utmost economy in the use of coal.

From the Board of Trade also came an order prohibiting any household purchasing more than one week's supply of food at a time and forbidding food hoarding.

BALLOON PICKED UP IN GULF, BUT NO TRACE OF CREW FOUND

By the Associated Press.

PANAMA CITY, April 9.—The naval balloon which has been missing with five men since it left the Pensacola naval station March 22, was picked up in the Gulf late yesterday by a fishing boat and brought here today. No trace of the crew was found.

Capt. Roy Eckert of the boat which found the gas bag said the top of the bag was above water, held up by the little gas remaining, while the car was still attached and riding 3½ fathoms below the surface. He brought the balloon into port with him.

The balloon was commanded by Pilot G. K. Wilkinson of Houston, Tex., when it took the air. With him in the basket were four student pilots, R. E. Eland, Belleville, Ill.; E. L. Kershaw, Payne, La.; J. E. Elder, Lebanon, N. Y., and W. H. Trefrey, Salem, Mass. The only word ever received of them came by carried pigeon messages two days after they left the station, saying the baloon was sinking and drifting out into the gulf.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The Navy Department today received confirmation of the finding of the missing navy balloon A-5597 by the fishing boat Electra off Cape San Blas last night. The gas bag and basket were intact, the messages said, but no trace of the crew of five men was found. The finding of the big balloon at sea shattered the last hope held by naval officers here that the crew might be found alive. The general supposition was that the balloon had been in the water for two weeks and that the five men were drowned. A seaplane has been sent to Panama City, Fla., to take possession of the balloon.

36 FOUND GUILTY OF $1,000,000 THEFT PLOT

Georgia Federal Court Jury Deliberates 28 Hours in Express Conspiracy Case.

By the Associated Press.

MACON, Ga., April 9.—Verdicts of guilty on all five charges of the indictment were returned in the Federal Court here today against 36 persons accused of conspiracy to rob the American Railway Express Co. of property valued at $1,000,000. The jury deliberated 28 hours. Four of the 64 persons indicted were never arrested; nine were found not guilty by the jury, nine verdicts of not guilty were directed by Judge Evans, five pleaded guilty and one case was nolle prossed.

The trial consumed four weeks, witnesses from all parts of the United States having been called to complete the chain of evidence.

The list of defendants included express messengers, station agents, conductors, baggage men, news butchers, negro porters, garage owners and hotel proprietors. The conductors were some of the best known in the Southeast.

W. A. Hughes, messenger, furnished the bulk of the evidence for the Government. He was on the stand for nearly a week, and told of transactions with practically all of the accused men. Hughes confessed to numerous thefts himself.

The Government's evidence showed that there was a system of signals used in the conspiracy. "Will he ride?" was a query to determine whether a person alluded to was "all right," the "all right" being an answering signal.

Judge Evans announced that he would sentence the convicted persons April 30. The maximum sentence is two years in the penitentiary or a fine of $10,000, or both. Practically all of those found guilty are residents of Georgia and Alabama.

dealings with him. In this suit Edwards testified that at one time Capt. Henry had lived "under cover" for 10 weeks in the Leathe residence. He also testified that she had given him a commission to recover certain letters she had written Capt. Henry, notably one in which it was alleged she promised to marry him again as soon as Leathe died.

When she was married to Hoover it was announced that he was a millionaire oil man from Hollywood, Cal., whose interests were so extensive he always took his lawyer with him when he traveled. It was said that he had promised to straighten out Mrs. Leathe's affairs, remove the encumbrances from her property and guarantee her future. It was reported a year or so ago in St. Louis that Mrs. Leathe's total estate had been dissipated in shrunken values, lapsed mortgages and tax bills, so the assurance of her lawyer that she is now worth "approximately $1,000,000" will be gratifying news to her friends.

To Inspect Mission Work Abroad.

The Rev. Frederick Brand, first vice president of the Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio and other states, who recently has been elected director and general secretary of foreign missions, will depart next week for China and India to inspect the foreign mission work of the Missouri Synod. He also will visit Japan and Australia and other countries. A special service will be held this evening at 8 o'clock at the Emmaus Lutheran Church, Jefferson avenue and Armand place, to which all Lutheran churches of the city have been invited. The Rev. Mr. Brand will speak on foreign missions.

MISSOURIANS SEE EFFECT OF HEAVY TRUCKS ON ROADS

Ralph Legislative Delegation Spends Day in Testing Laboratories of the Federal Bureau of Roads.

CONCRETE SHOWN TO BE BEST MATERIAL

Junket to Proceed to Massachusetts Where the Roads Leading Out of Boston Will Be Viewed.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

WASHINGTON, April 9.—A study of the effects of truck traffic on various types of roads occupied the Ralph legislative delegation from Missouri yesterday and today, the delegation devoting the greater part of the two days to observing experiments in the testing laboratories of the Bureau of Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture and in examining various stretches of road which had been put to tests by trucks of different weights and moving at different rates of speed.

While the principal purpose of the Ralph delegation is to study the road laws of the states it visits to obtain ideas as to the provisions which should be incorporated into the proposed new law under which Missouri will expend its $60,000,000 of road bond money, an invitation from Earl B. Smith, senior assistant testing engineer of the Bureau of Roads, to observe experiments being made under his direction was accepted.

Heavy Trucks Destructive.

Engineers of the Federal bureau advised the delegation that the heavy truck was the most destructive agency using the roads, and that, if Missouri failed to construct roads which would withstand the constant impact of truck wheels, its roads would be torn to pieces in very little time.

The engineers explained that one of the greatest advantages a State could derive from good roads would be the opportunity they would afford for the establishment of regular truck lines which would provide interior towns with truck service from the railroad towns and the larger cities, but they also said this truck service would quickly wear out all except the best of roads.

The experiments observed by the committee had principally to do with concrete construction. By means of a plunger set in a piece of experimental concrete road, it was shown to the committee that an unloaded three-ton truck moving 15 miles an hour, bouncing back on to the pavement after striking a one-inch obstruction had sufficient force to flatten to a wafer less than one-sixteenth inch in thickness a pure copper cylinder which had been one-half inch thick.

This experiment was made to show the committee the effect on any road of truck traffic and to indicate the rapidity with which a road would would be destroyed by trucks.

Material Tests Studied.

In connection with this the committee saw experimental construction in which there were stretches of brick, granite blocks, concrete and various forms of patented materials. Over this had been run steel wheels weighing one ton each. Six thousand trips had been made by the wheels, which had literally cut the brick to dust on some stretches, had cut deep ruts into it in other, had ground ruts in granite blocks and cut away entirely the patented surfacing materials which had been used. On this experiment the wheels had made little impression on the concrete.

None of the members of the delegation has expressed an opinion regarding the material which should be used in constructing Missouri's roads and it is not probable that they will report to the Legislature in favor of any particular material, though it is expected they will incorporate into a report a statement of their observations of the various processes of road construction.

So far the delegation has not given much time to automobile riding over the good roads to be found in the East. In Indiana they drove about three hours, and yesterday they drove from Washington to Mount Vernon, a part of the distance over an excellent concrete road, a part of the way over a macadam road which had been torn to pieces by heavy traffic and a part of the way over an asphaltic surfaced macadam road which was in even a worse condition than the part which had not been treated with the asphalt surfacing.

To Visit Massachusetts.

Up to this time the delegation has been in "concrete territory," that is, localities in which the road building authorities contend that only concrete will build good roads. Monday the delegation will view roads in Massachusetts, principally roads leading out of Boston. That, the delegation understands, is "Warrenite territory," where Warrenite, a patented road surfacing material, is extensively used. Later on the delegation will get into "brick territory," and "gravel territory."

Representatives of concerns interested in road building materials are meeting the delegation in the cities visited and pointing out the good points of their products.

St. Louis County in No Danger of Losing Federal Road Fund of $850,000

WASHINGTON, April 9.

THOMAS H. MacDONALD, chief of the Federal Bureau of Public Roads, today said that $850,000 had been set aside in the United States Treasury for Federal aid for four roads in St. Louis County, and that the aid would not lapse if the roads were not constructed immediately. There has been a report in circulation in St. Louis County that, if the roads were not built by June, the county would not receive Federal aid.

One of the roads, the St. Charles, already is under construction. The Manchester, Gravois and Le May Ferry roads have been advertised for bids which will be opened in Clayton next Saturday. If the bids are considered too high, or exceed the estimates materially, the Court can readvertise without fear that delay will mean the loss of the Federal money.

MacDonald's statement was made to Raymond A. Walsh, manager of the Federated Roads Council in St. Louis, and who as a Judge of the St. Louis County court had an active part in St. Louis County road building. MacDonald told Walsh that the funds for St. Louis County were set aside in the Treasury when the road projects in the county were approved and that they never will lapse or be used for any other purpose than the road projects for which they were allotted.

GOVERNOR OPPOSES ANY BIG ROAD LAW FUND

Says Opportunity Will Be Given at Special Session to Present All Proposals.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 9.—Gov. Hyde today said he was opposed to the collection of any large fund designed to be used in obtaining road or any other legislation at the special session of the Missouri Legislature, to be convened probably about May 1, to enact measures to put into effect the $60,000,000 road bond issue authorized by vote of the people last November.

The Governor had been informed that an organization of which I. R. Kelso of St. Louis is president and A. Lymon Donlin, also of St. Louis, is secretary-manager, was endeavoring to obtain $10 or more from each of the 9486 school districts of the State for the avowed purpose of opposing adoption of a primary and secondary road system and obtaining instead some plan of "equitable distribution" of the bond money.

"The legislators are elected to represent the people, and there will be plenty of committee meetings and hearings and full opportuinty for a fair discussion of all proposals," said the Governor. "So it is neither necessary nor advisable to collect any large funds for obtaining legislation here and no good can come of it."

The Kelso-Donlin organization yesterday issued a circular in which it suggested that the $60,000,000 in bonds be not sold, but only issued and placed in the hands of the State Treasurer, to be canceled as they matured, and that the receipts from the automobile license tax be applied to a road program as it accrued, which is much the same system being followed now.

The Kelso-Donlin organization has announced a convention to be held here the opening week of the special session for opponents of a primary road system.

Meeting in County Indorses Federation Road Proposition.

A convention of representatives from the 93 school districts of St. Louis County met yesterday at the courthouse at Clayton and approved the scheme of the Federation of Commercial Clubs of Missouri for the disposition of the $60,000,000 in road bonds authorized by the people last November. The federation wants a bill introduced at the special session of the Legislature to provide that the bond issue remain in the State treasury.

The convention commended the Federation for its efforts to have the road money distributed to every county. Another resolution called on the Legislature to define "hard surface roads," and a third one recommended the organization of a committee in each school district of St. Louis County to aid in the sale of the $2,000,000 in bonds remaining unsold of the county's $3,000,000 road bond issue.

Probate Judge Hodgdon of St. Louis County presided at the meeting. He and two representatives from each of the five townships were chosen to visit the Legislature at the special session in furtherance of the convention's wishes.

Chicago Turns Down $3,500,000.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 9.—The City Comptroller today refused to accept from the two street car companies more than three and one-half million dollars, the city's share of the transportation concern's receipts last year. The money was refused on the ground that acceptance might jeopardize the city's fight on eight-cent car fares.

Maxwell Receiver Named.

DETROIT, April 9.—Appointmenet of H. Ledyard Mitchell, president of the Maxwell Motor Co., as receiver of the company under friendly proceedings to facilitate its reorganization was announced today.

ORGANIZATION OF HOUSE SHAPED FOR SESSION TOMORROW

Republicans and Democrats, in Party Caucuses, Name Gillett and Kitchin, Respectively, for Speaker.

LATTER TO LEAD MINORITY ON FLOOR

Majority Committee Assignments Made in Line With Committee Recommendation.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Republicans and Democrats, meeting separately, put things in shape today for the organization of the House of Representatives Monday.

Speaker Gillett, nominated by the Republicans, will be opposed for reelection by Representative Claude Kitchin, Democrat, North Carolina. Gillett will be elected, and Kitchin, by reason of his nomination, will become Democratic floor leader. In the new House the Republicans have 301 members and the Democrats 131. At Kitchin's request Representative Garrett, Tennessee, was named as acting leader.

At their caucus, Republicans ratified the action of the committee on committees and adopted the report on standing committee assignments. The action of the general committee in giving representation to labor and agriculture on the Steering Committee was approved. Representative Nolan, California, who holds a union card, and Representative Anderson, Minnesota, long active in urging legislation designed to aid the farming industry, were added to the committee, along with Representative Greene, Vermont, who succeeds Chairman Winslow of the Interstate Commerce Committee. Other members hold over.

Representative Mondell, Wyoming, the Republican leader, and Representative Knutson, Minnesota, Republican whip, will serve again, both having been re-elected.

Seven new members were placed on the Agricultural Committee, which will report out the packer control bill, which failed to reach the House last session. They are: Williams, Illinois; Sinclair, North Dakota, the only nonpartisan Republican in the House; Hays, Missouri; Thompson, Ohio; Gernard, Pennsylvania; Clague, Minnesota, and Clarke, New York. Representative Robertson, Oklahoma, the only woman member, was put on Indian Affairs, where she wanted to be.

New members of the Naval Affairs Committee are Burdick, Rhode Island; Patterson, New Jersey; Kline, New York, and Swing, California.

Two committees which were expected to be dropped, woman suffrage and alcoholic liquor traffic, need of which, it was said, had passed, were continued. Representative Mann, Illinois, retired as chairman of the former and returned to his old status as a House free lance without assignment.

Representative Pat Nolan was made chairman of labor and Representative Knutson of Pensions. The Census Committee, which must prepare a bill for House reapportionment, has three new members—Beedy, Maine; Faust, Missouri, and Wyant, Pennsylvania.

Senate Committee Hearings on Tax Revision Plan This Week.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Progress toward formulating a Republican plan for revision of internal revenue taxes was made at a conference late today between Chairman Penrose of the Senate Finance Committee and Secretary Melon of the Treasury Department. President Harding has indicated he will discuss tax revision with Congress.

The concensus of Republican opinion, it was said, is toward several definite principles for tax revision. These include primarily repeal of the excess profits tax, reduction of surtaxes on the larger incomes, repeal of special consumption taxes, such as those on transportation and certain stamp taxes, and elimination of several commodity taxes. Imposition of a sales tax is being agitated strongly, but without certainty of adoption in the Republican program.

Senator Penrose said the Senate Committee's hearings would begin next week and that the sales tax would be taken up first, with advocates and opponents invited to present their views. Hearings on the income tax schedules, he said, would follow.

Reduction in army and navy appropriations and those for Government bureaus is being advocated by Senator Penrose.

"No sane man contemplates another great war in the lifetime of the present or the next generation," he said.

"The Federal Trade Commission has been a national stench and scandal," the Senator stated. "Another board that ought to go is the Railroad Labor Board, and a scrap heap ought to be got ready for what remains of the Shipping Board, which is gigantic evidence of incompetency and is beyond rescue.

Rail Union Men Tell of Their Expulsion From Arkansas

ley, Carey related today, and said he did not care to hear the union side of the question discussed, as he knew the other side and was satisfied with that.

"The man calling himself Judge Hanley informed us that although the citizens had no evidence that we had violated the law, which he informed us was because we were too clever," Carey said, "yet the citizens believed us guilty of attempting to destroy the railroad and wreck their homes, and for this reason we would have to leave the State.

"We requested five minutes to confer among ourselves, and this was denied us. One young man threateningly remarked that the citizens didn't give a damn how we felt about the situation, we were to depart without further ado and would have to make our decision there and then.

"During this time there was a great uproar in the crowd surrounding the hotel, and it was evident that the citizens had bloodshed in their hearts. We asked for time to pack our belongings, which was granted, and we then agreed to obey the request to leave. As I was giving the committee our decision to go, a man who was standing near me with his right hand in his coat pocket poked me in the side with something he held in that hand, which I presumed to be a revolver, and Horne, who was in the lobby most of this time, said several of the citizens thrust revolvers against his body and made threatening remarks. Other men in the crowd appeared to be armed, and we saw one man with a sawed off shotgun.

"We departed about 4:30 o'clock in two motor cars, driving directly to Branson, Mo. Changing our plans after leaving the hotel, where we had promised to go to Eureka Springs for the night.

Not Followed When Leaving.

There was not much disorder upon our departure and we were not followed. Potts went to Little Rock, Brassfield to his home at Searcy and the others to Joplin.

"It is a mistake to say there was no disorder. We were in imminent danger of our lives at the hands of that crowd. We left to avoid what would have been a more disgraceful affair. For those men were inflamed and determined to make serious trouble had we declined to comply with their demands.

"Our presence in Harrison was at the insistence of citizens of Arkansas—our brotherhood members on strike, who sought our counsel in dealing with the receiver of the railroad who persistently ignored the rulings of the Railway Labor Board. The strikers are not violent men and none of them has committed any depredations in this trouble. Nor has any of the men who were sent out of the State ever been arrested. Seventy per cent of those men own their own homes.

"We expect to return to Harrison as soon as Federal protection is obtained and resume our assignment to that strike."

Tillman Jines, president and chairman of the federated shops crafts on strike, said many men in the crowd were armed with shotguns and revolvers and whisky in fruit jars was passed among them in the railroad yards and in front of the hotel. Jines held a meeting of the strikers as usual yesterday. He lives in Harrison. He said he had heard that agents of the railroad brought the crowd to Harrison to intimidate the strikers, but that the strike would continue until Receiver Phelan conformed to the transportation act and the rulings of the Railway Labor Board. He had no evidence that the railroad agents had promoted the demonstration. Jines said he would have "got out and swapped off licks with the mob" had it not been for the counsel of Carey to keep out of trouble.

Road in Hands of Receiver.

The Missouri and North Arkansas Railroad operates in Southern Missouri and Northern Arkansas, from Joplin, Mo., to Helena, Ark., a distance of over 300 miles. Its shops and general offices are at Harrison, and it had been in the hands of a receiver since 1912. It was promoted chiefly by the late Richard Kerens, once Ambassador to Austria-Hungary, and the late John Scullin, capitalist, both St. Louisans. It represents an investment of $11,000,000, including $2,000,000 receivership certificates. The mortgage is held by the St. Louis Union Trust Co. and the Scullin estate is the largest stockholder.

Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Co., St. Louis, was receiver from 1912 to April, 1920, when his manager, C. A. Phelan, of Chicago, was appointed receiver and general manager. Phelan said 800 persons were employed, 600 of whom went on strike, and that he is operating with men obtained in St. Louis and Kansas City. He said the American Railway executives did not have authority to place the Missouri and North Arkansas Railroad under the jurisdiction of the Railway Labor Board, and for this reason he questions the legality of the rulings of that commission as applied to this railroad.

"The road has never been a paying venture," said Phelan, "and cannot pay the standard wage scale of other railroads. Our financial condition made a reduction of at least 20 per cent imperative, and when we attempted to enforce this reduction the workmen quit.

"An Open Shop Road."

"This railroad is an open shop. We are under the jurisdiction of the Federal Court, and not the Railway Labor Board. Judge Trieber, at Little Rock has approved what we have done, and this is sufficient authority for our actions.

"We will never return to the principle of collective bargaining. When a man wants work he asks for it and we tell him what wage he shall receive. There is no contract, no agreement. He works for what we think is just and are able to pay. The reduction of 20 to 22 per cent is now in effect, and when we get the situation well in hand there will be another adjustment of wages to conform to our ability to pay, for wages are still too high. I will stop the operation of the road before I again accept collective bargaining.

"The strikers or their agents have employed ruthless methods in this trouble. Spikes have been drawn from ties, switches opened, water tanks emptied and pumps destroyed, obstructions placed on tracks, wires cut and recently two bridges were burned in one night.

"Public sentiment did not appear to be on our side, and it became necessary to arouse the citizens to the seriousness of these depredations, so we stopped operating for a few days to impress upon them what it means to be without a railroad and to prevent serious accidents.

Citizens Patrolling Road.

"The people at once awakened to the situation and we resumed operations with the people patrolling the road. Then this body of citizens was formed to request the labor leaders to leave the State. I believe this action will serve a good purpose in that it will put an end to interference with our employes by the strikers."

Phelan said he did not know who organized the citizens and induced them to go to Harrison, and denied that officials or agents of the road had any connection with the demonstration.

The citizens immediately after the labor leaders departed from what they term the Harrison Protective League, the announced purpose of which is to preserve order, but which the strikers say is for purposes of intimidation. One hundred and sixty-eight men, many of them merchants of Harrison, signed a paper with the following text, Friday evening:

"We, the undersigned citizens sanction and approve every action of the Executive Committee of the Harrison Protective League, and hereby delegate to them full power and authority to act for us in any way they deem best, and hereby pledge to said committee our undivided support, both financial and otherwise."

Protective League Statement.

The Executive Committee above referred to is the committee that told the union leaders to leave the State. J. D. Eagle, member of the Protective League, issued a formal statement for the league, which reads, in part, as follows:

"These citizens of our Commonwealth recognized that the question in dispute has been settled, and that by our highest tribunal, the courts, and that further countenancing the intolerable situation here, but meant ultimate business stagnation and the loss of the railroad.

"It is up to every citizen of our town and county, and every man's interest is at stake to assist in every way possible these men who have so often stood for fair play, for the rule of the majority and for the best interests of this county throughout the years that have gone even as they are now doing, both in time and money.

"It is no time now to qualify, to placate or pacify where the interests of all are so unmistakably involved. No use to wait until you see the grass growing knee high between the ties and moss creeping over the trestles or our railroad."

All the citizens spoken to were of the opinion that the town was in danger of losing the railroad, and admitted that the thought there was nothing to do but take the law in their own hands.

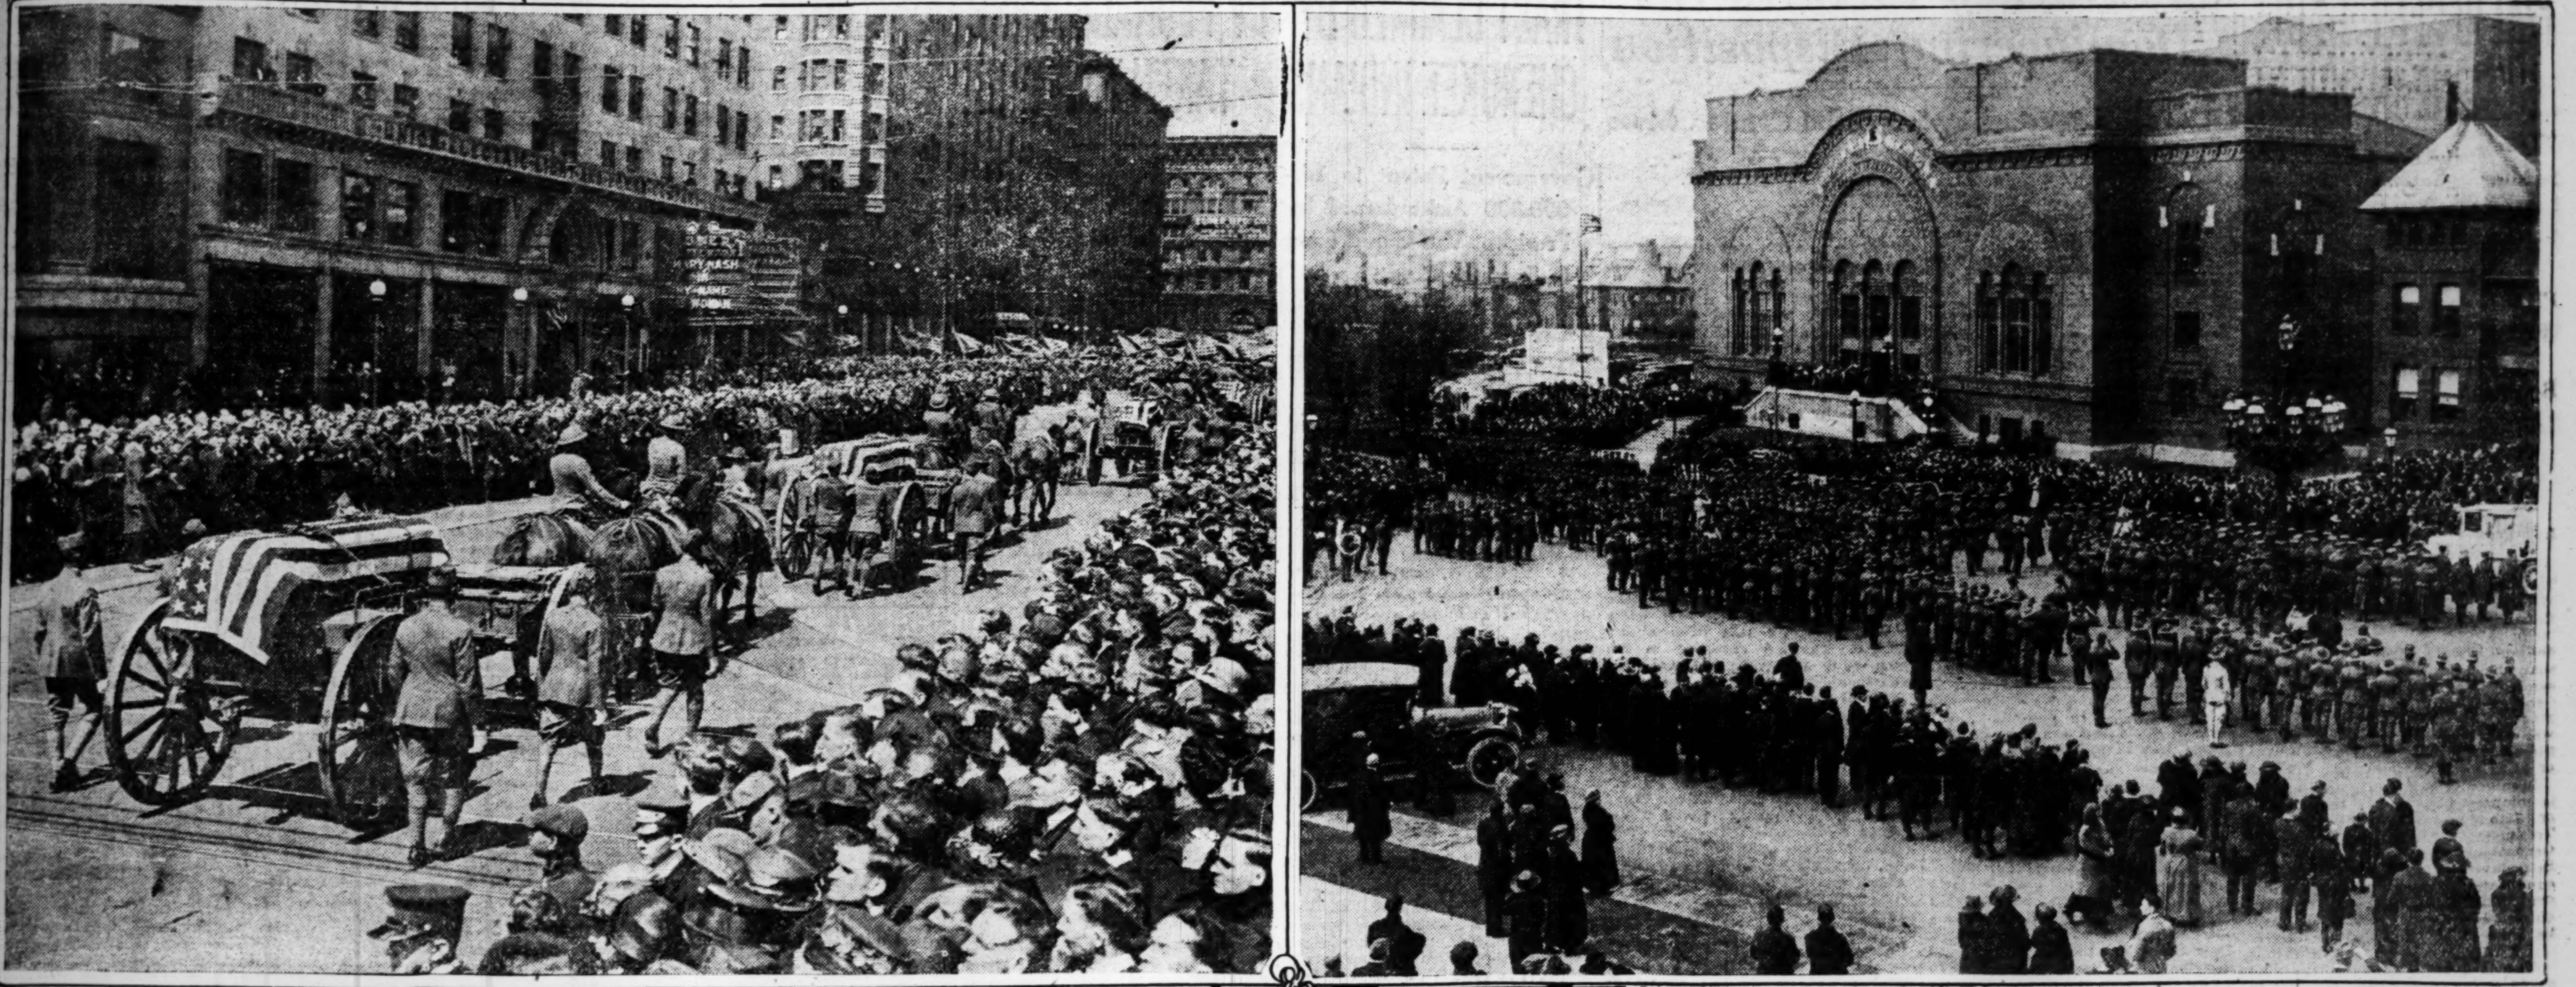
Fallen Heroes' Funeral Procession in 12th Street and Military Formation at Moolah Temple to Receive It



Funeral Oration Delivered by Charles M. Hay at Services for Men Who Died in France

Lawyer, Reciting Lines From "In Flanders Fields," Says American Citizens Are in Duty Bound to Work for Peace.

Charles M. Hay, an attorney, in delivering the funeral oration yesterday in Moolah Temple, over the bodies of four St. Louis soldiers who fell in France, for whom a public funeral was held, chose for his text, McRae's lines:

If ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep,
Though poppies grow in Flanders fields.

He interpreted the obligation placed upon American citizens by their sons who died as the promotion of peace, which might be accomplished, he suggested, through universal disarmament. The text of the oration follows:

Hay's speech, in full, follows:

"It is fitting that we gather here with uncovered heads and grateful hearts, in honor of those who in war's grim service made the supreme sacrifice. The sacred dust that rests here, for a moment, comes back to us freighted with the story of their daring and vocal with a challenge to our patriotism. It bids us pause, amid our cares and toils, and take note of the cause for which they fought, of their services and sacrifice, and of the ideals they sought to realize for their country and humanity.

"These, our sons and brothers, were suddenly called to war's arduous service from a land of peace. They, in common with their countrymen, loved peace and abhorred war. They preferred not to go to war. Their country and ours cherished no ugly ambitions and purposes—harbored no enmities and hatreds. We were friends of all nations and peoples.

All Belligerents U. S. Friends.

"When, therefore, the war in Europe began, we could not understand its cause or its purpose. We shared neither the ambitions nor the enmities of the contending peoples. All the belligerents were our friends. We numbered among our most faithful and honored citizens emigrants from all of them.

"Friends, as we were, of all nations, without understanding of the full meaning of the war, and sharing none of the ugly sentiments and spirit that brought it on, we chose to remain neutral, preserving ours as a 'nation that neither sits in judgment upon others, nor is disturbed in her own counsels, and which keeps herself fit and free to do what is honest and disinterested and truly serviceable for the peace of the world.'

Force Pitted Against Force.

"But as the months, filled with wounding and death, wore on, we came to understand. Germany, her mask at last torn off, stood naked in all her hideousness before the world. We saw, then, what she meant, what she had meant from the beginning. We know, all the world knew, then, that it was a war between free peoples and 'autocratic governments backed by organized force, controlled wholly by their will, not by the will of their people.' We came to know that the German menace extended, not alone to Belgium, France and England, but to our own shores—to every country whose people cherished liberty, self-government and peace.

"Knowing these things, we resolved to fight. Whereas, with matchless eloquence our cause and humanity's had been stated with the pen—while we sought to avoid force, we now resolved to use force, 'force to the uttermost, fore without stint or limit.'

"Having so resolved, we called these fallen ones, with their brothers, to the colors. They came, by the tens of hundreds of thousands—by the million. On one day, in answer to their country's call, 10,000,000 of them registered for service—even unto death. That was the day when the homes of America answered the question—timidly asked by our friends, insolently asked by our foes—'Will America Fight?' The answer rang through the shadowed homes of allied peoples, and the sun of hope broke through the clouds. It rang along the lines at the battle front, and men who fought with their backs to the wall straightened and took heart. It rang through the street of a hostile capital and the crown of an emperor shook in its place. That was the day when it was determined that America would fight.

"But it was not known that these millions who so loyally offered to fight—could fight. They were not trained for war. They were trained for peace. They knew not arms. They knew the hammer, the ax, the saw—the implements of honest toil. They had not drilled on the parade grounds and in camp. They had built muscle and sinew on playground and farm, in mine and shop. But they were free men, with the free man's spirit and the free man's mind. They were the sons and grandsons of men who had fought to gain liberty and to preserve it.

"These were the men our country took to the training camp; these the raw recruits, out of whom, within 18 months, 4,000,000 soldiers were made, 2,000,000 of whom were transported overseas to do and to dare as the bravest of the brave.

"Would they fight? Let Belleau Wood and Chateau Thierry answer. Could they fight? Let St. Mihiel and Argonne Forest answer. These raw recruits, turned veteran in a day, made a record of heroism, loyalty and effectiveness in war, that will live as long as men love liberty and admire the heroic in humankind.

Went to Battle Singing.

"All the world marked how well and with what spirit they fought. They went singing to the front and into the trenches, and over the top with a smile—and the world wondered why. I'll tell you why: They went smiling and singing into battle because they went as free men to fight for the freedom of humankind. They went as citizens of a great democracy to fight for the safety of democracy everywhere. They went as friends and advocates of peace to bring lasting peace to the children of men. They went without hate, save the hatred of war and oppression. Through the smoke of battle, they caught the vision of a world redeemed from oppression and uncursed by war. With that vision as their guide and inspiration, they fought and smiled as they fought.

"Through trench and mud and filth and fire and blood, they followed it—fighting as they followed, and crying unto men of faith and vision everywhere:

"Ye that have faith to look with fearless eyes
Beyond the tragedy of a world at strife
And know that out of death and night
Shall rise the dawn of ampler life—
Rejoice! That God hath given ye
This priceless dower—
To live in these great times and have your part
In Freedom's crowning hour—
That ye may tell your sons,
Who see the light high in the Heavens
Their heritage to take—
I saw the powers of darkness put to flight,
I saw the morning break.

"When that morning broke on the world, above the shattered remnants of German autocracy, and beneath the battle scarred but undefeated flag of their country, there stood alongside their brothers from many lands the heroic champions of world democracy.

"But some were not there. These, whose sacred dust we honor today, with thousands of their comrades were not there. They were heralds of the morning, but they saw it not. Yonder at Chateau-Thierry and Bealleau Wood, and Argonne they had fallen—fallen facing the east. They fell, but as they fell they flung to us 'the torch they bore with a challenge which rang then and still rings through the world:

"Be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die—
We shall not sleep.
Though poppies grow in Flanders Field.

The Living Must Keep Faith

"Two years and more have passed. These, our dead, come back to remind us of their sacrifice and their challenge. What answer have we to make? What of our stewardship? If beside their bier, stand invisible but sentient, the sprits of these fallen ones, what message have we to send to their comrades in immortality? Have we kept faith with them?

"What can we say of our unselfishness, of our forgetfulness, of partisanship? We sent them out with a challenge to their unselfishness and their patriotism. We bade them go to do and dare and die. They went, forgetting section, party, race, creed, everything save thier country and their humanity. For us and for our common country, they dared and died.

"Through the war, all save an ignoble and unmentionable few (slackers, traitors and profiteers), served and sacrificed with them. All together, master and servant, rich and poor, Catholic and Protestant, Jew and Gentile, Republican and Democrat, served our common country. We forgot our differences—we sank our grievances—we thought first of the common good.

"I would that in the presence of these representatives of our sacrificial dead, we could read the record of such service and spirit since the war. But to assert it here would be to mock the record of our immortals. Nor shall I wound your spirits or theirs by dwelling here on our selfishness, our partisanship, our class rivalries, our racial antagonisms, our religious jealousies, our loss of vision for which this precious dust moves us to shame and tears.

"Standing in this pathetic presence, we are deeply sensible that we have the same country and humanity to serve—the same principles to maintain, the same ideals to strive for as when war was on. In our hearts we know that the call to service is as imperative in peace as in war; that if we should think of our country first in war, so should we think in peace; that if we are brothers in war, we are brothers in peace.

"We are likewise deeply sensible that our brothers and sons were sent to make war on war. We pledged them that if they'd go, we'd keep faith with them—and carry on the work their sacrifice should begin. They forsook all; father and mother, wife and child, and went. They stood on the firing line, their souls naked before their Maker, all earthly things crumbling about them, smiling in the face of death, teaching this world how to die as a sacrifice to appease the wrath of the god of war.

The Lesson of the War.

"Their work is done. What of us? Shall we keep faith? Shall we carry on? Shall the swords now be beaten into plowshares and the spears into pruning hooks, or shall they be edged and whetted for another and bloodier conflict? Shall the hands of labor be set again to honest toil, or shall they be trained and kept in training for universal slaughter? Shall the people of the earth once more maintain great armaments—ever-present burdens in peace and the unfailing prophets and forerunners of war; or shall they join in universal disarmament? Shall the nations work together according to some plan to preserve the peace of the world, or shall they live again in suspicion and jealousy, senseless rivalry and hate—drifting ever to another conflict?

"These questions America and America only, can answer. When the world resounded with the question, 'Shall German militarism rule?' the soldiers of peace from America answered with an eternal 'No.' The world now trembles with the whisper, 'Shall militarism live again?' It is for the veterans who live and those who honor the veterans dead to answer that question.

"The nations stand ready to disarm.

"They stand ready to organize for peace.

"The world waits on America.

"Whither shall we lead?

"Let us lead the world wither the spirits of our dead would lead. We plighted faith with them; let's keep it! Spirits of the immortal dead, lead on! We followed you, as in the flesh we went to camp. We followed you as you crossed the sea. We followed you as you marched down the streets of Paris while little children strewed your path with flowers. We followed you as you went swinging to the front. We followed you as you went singing into the trenches. We followed you as you went over the top with a dare and a smile. We followed you from Belleau Wood to Argonne and on to the front on that November morning, when, beneath the stars of your God and your country, you stood triumphant over a broken autocracy, holding aloft your country's banner, the emblem of democracy, liberty and peace. We will not turn back from following now. We'll follow you unto that day when the war drum shall throb no longer and the battle flags are furled, in the Parliament of Man, the Federation of the World."

KILLS SELF FOLLOWING STROKE

Former Railway Mail Clerk Had Lost His Job.

Warren F. Pemberton, 55 years old, of 1909 South Compton avenue, a former railway mail clerk, was found at 7 p. m. yesterday dead in his bed with a bullet wound in his left breast and a revolver clasped in his right hand.

His wife, Ollie, told the police that he had recently suffered a paralytic stroke, but had recovered. However, he lost his job and had been despondent. She said that he had threatened to kill himself.

City Pays Impressive Tribute to Soldier Dead

Twelfth street. The Jefferson Barracks band, stationed on the steps, began to play a funeral march and the bodies were carried out to caissons of Battery A, Missouri National Guard.

The procession ahead of the caissons stretched in Twelfth street to a point opposite the west entrance of the Post-Dispatch building. There was a sharp command to mounted police; the bands struck up dirges; the bells of Christ Church cathedral began to toll; the procession moved. The bands, four in number, alternated in keeping the funeral music constant. The bells on Christ Church cathedral continued to ring until the last of the procession passed. By that time its head had reached St. Charles Borromeo Church, 2901 Locust street, and its bell took up the tolling. Soon afterward the bells of St. Francis Xavier's Church at Grand avenue and Lindell boulevard joined in.

Barracks Soldiers in Line.

The composition of the procession was almost totally military. It was led by Col. John H. Parker, commandant of Jefferson Barracks, with a group of his officers and Capt. Charles Vical, a French officer, now an instructor in Washington University, who wore the horizon blue of the French army. The slow, measured step of nine platoons of regulars behind the Barracks band imparted at once an atmosphere of solemnity to onlookers, accustomed to see the regulars pass with swinging strides. The men carried rifles and wore overcoats and garrison caps.

Next came the First Regiment, Missouri National Guard, its first public appearance since being "brought back" by a recruiting campaign and a War Department order establishing once more three platoons, instead of the one which has represented the city in the National Guard since the war. Twelve companies, not all at full strength, were in line, a total of approximately 500 men, under command of Lieutenant-Colonel Charles S. Thornton, with Majs. Allen, Kingsland and Goodman as battalion commanders.

Next came the tossing national flags of the American Legion posts and their blue post banners, mingling with banners of the G. A. R., Spanish-American War Veterans, Salvation Army, and a tricolor of France trimmed with crepe. This large group of more than 50 flags and banners was under a color guard of men in the uniform of the army, the navy and the marine corps, bearing rifles.

Soldiers' Bodies on Caissons.

Directly behind were the bodies of the four heroes. They were preceded by a field gun. The first caisson bore the body of Private Bollinger, drawn by four horses. The casket, wrapped in the flag, carried only a wreath of green leaves and a small bunch of flowers. Three pallbearers from the American Legion, wearing overseas uniforms, including trench helmets, walked on either side of the caisson. Two men astride the left-hand horses, wore trench helmets also.

The next caisson bore the body of Corp. Carter and the next the body of Corp. Alewell. The caskets were wrapped in flags and on them rested the simple wreaths and cluster of flowers. The fourth caisson bore the body of Private Linder and beside it walked negro overseas veterans in trench helmets. A field gun followed the caissons.

Whatever apathy there had been in the demeanor of the onlookers to the passing of the soldiers and even of the brilliant flags flying in the brisk wind, disappeared at the sight of the flags enveloping the caskets that came from France. All heads were bared; most were bowed. This held throughout the march.

Mayor at Head of Pallbearers.

Mayor Kiel walked at the head of 104 honorary pallbearers, chosen from the 30 posts of the American Legion in the city and from the ranks of other patriotic organizations.

The relatives of the four heroes and gold star mothers of other sons rode in 47 automobiles. The relatives of Private Bollinger rode in the first automobile, the relatives of Corp. Carter in the third and fourth, the relatives of Corp. Alewel in the fifth and the relatives of Private Linder in the seventh.

Next came the recruiting forces of the St. Louis offices of the army, navy and marine corps and a small group representing the Chamber of Commerce and the Junior Chamber of Commerce. The American Legion contingent was headed by the Legion band. The Legion had several hundred marchers, most of whom wore uniforms. A post of negro members of the Legion was in line. Spanish-American war veterans behind the fourth band in the procession were next and concluding the march were Salvation Army lassies and a boys' drum corps.

As the procession reached Moolan Temple the regulars and militia men drew up in company front formation in the center of Lindell boulevard facing the north curb. The Barracks band stationed itself on the steps and after the flags had passed into the building, began to play "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and continued until the fourth casket had passed the lines of soldiers and disappeared within the auditorium.

Caskets in Front of Stage.

The building had been closed prior to the arrival of the procession and the entire lower floor was reserved for relatives, gold star mothers, honorary and active pallbearers. The flags were carried to the stage, where they formed a background for the small group who were to conduct the services. A row of potted ferns were placed along the footlights. A small speakers' stand on which there were two bouquets of flowers was on the stage.

The caskets were placed in front of the stage, and in front of the caskets 100 chairs for the relatives and gold star mothers, the only seats on the lower floor except four rows of chairs encircling three sides of the auditorium. These were taken by the pallbearers, other gold star mothers and the band.

The general public was admitted to 1000 seats in the balcony. These were quickly filled, and many persons stood through the service, which began with singing by the Shrine quartet and an invocation by the Rev. Thomas D. Kennedy, chaplain of the Thirty-fifth Division in the war and now State chaplain for the American Legion.

The funeral oration of Charles M. Hay is given in full elsewhere on this page. The services were concluded with singing by a double mixed quartet and a benediction by the Rev. H. L. Reader, of Webster Groves, chaplain of the 138th (St. Louis) Infantry during the closing days of the war.

The services were finished at 3:15 o'clock. The audience remained in its seats until the four caskets were carried out. The bodies were placed in four hearses, which departed, followed by automobiles carrying relatives.

Two Funerals This Afternoon.

The body of Private Bollinger was taken directly to the new St. Marcus Cemetery, where it came to final rest after its long journey under a volley from rifles of members of the American Legion.

The body of Corporal Carter was buried in New Picker's Cemetery with military ceremonies.

Private funeral services for Corporal Alewel will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the home of his mother at 915 Elias avenue, after which it will be taken to Memorial Park for military burial.

The funeral of Private Linder also will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Negro posts of the American Legion and other negro societies will form a procession which will go first to the Central Baptist Church for services and then to Washington Park Cemetery, where military ceremonies will take place.

The bodies of Private Oliver B. Thuet, 25, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Thuet of 4747 Alaska avenue, and Private Gustav Spindler, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Spindler of 2811 McNair aevnue, which were expected to arrive for the public funeral but which were delayed, arrived in the city last night. Thuet served in E Company, 107th Infantry, and was killed in action Nov. 2, 1918. Spindler served in B Company, 162d Infantry, and was killed in action Nov. 3, 1918.

BUDGET BILL VETOED BY WILSON TO BE REINTRODUCED

Measure to Be the Same in Essential Details as One Passed at Last Session of Congress.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The budget bill which Chairman Good of the House Appropriations Committee expects to introduce Monday when Congress convenes, will be the same in essentials as the measure passed by the last Congress and vetoed by former President Wilson. It will provide, however, for a budget bureau with both its director and assistant appointed by the President, Good said today after a conference with President Harding. The vetoed bill contained a provision inserted by the Senate that the secretary should be the Secretary of the Treasury with an assistant appointed by the President.

The bill as completed today, Good said, would stipulate that Congress have authority to remove the Comptroller of the Currency from office. In vetoing the old bill Mr. Wilson objected to this clause on the ground that the power of removing the Comptroller should remain exclusively in the hands of the President.

HARDING'S VIEWS ON ROAD FUND ABUSES

Against Giving Federal Aid to States Except on Pledge to Keep Highways Built From It in Repair.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Good roads will form one of the themes of the message which President Harding, in person, will deliver to the new Congress Tuesday.

The President will express his conviction that not a dollar of Federal aid should be given a State for road building until the Government has assurance that the roads when completed will be maintained in a state of repair. It is "intolerable," the President thinks, that after the expenditure of millions of dollars for highways, a State should allow the roads to go to destruction before a quarter of the bonds for the building have matured. That is the condition, he has been told, which exists in some of the states that have drawn heavily on the Federal treasury for road building aid.

Congress will be informed of the President's conclusion, reached after recent consultation with road experts, that some way must be found to halt what has impressed him as the folly of spending huge sums on roads without proper provision for their maintenance. It ppears to him as "criminal waste" that roads costing $25,000 a mile, or more than it cost to build railways under difficult conditions 40 years ago, should oftentimes becomes useless through neglect in two or three years.

A state has no right to ask for Federal road aid, and the Federal Government has no right to give aid, the President believes, unless the state is prepared to give guarantees that its roads will have some degree of permanence.

The President concurs in the opinion of expert road men that roads must be watched like railway tracks. He would have the roads kept in constant repair by a "patrol" system, similar to that employed in Europe. The expense of maintenance, he thinks, should be borne by the main beneficiaries of good roads—the owners of motor cars and motor trucks. In many of the states, he has been informed, the motor license fees alone are ample to keep the roads in repair; in those states where they are not ample, he holds that they should be made so.

Any system of licenses, the President believes, should be graded to require heavy vehicles to pay more than light.

Stolen Auto Found Mired in Mud.

An automobile valued at $2500, stolen from the garage in the rear of the home of Hyman Cohen, 6212 Waterman avenue, was found yesterday mired in the mud four miles below Festus, according to telephone advices to the police here from A. W. Siegrist, Justice of the Peace. The identification was completed through the license numbers which still were on the machine when found. It was stolen Friday night. Detectives went to Festus to bring the machine here.

LISBON, April 9.—An imposing military procession accompanied the coffins of the two unknown Portuguese soldiers as they were taken today from the Parliament building to the railway station, where they will be taken to the Cathedral at Batalha for internment tomorrow. "BEARS" BLAMED FOR RECENT 40-CT. DECLINE IN WHEAT

Senator Capper Declares Such Hammering Down of Prices Means Breakdown of Farming Industry.

WILL REINTRODUCE ANTI-GAMBLING BILL

Kansan Says Measure Has Been Revised to Meet Criticisms of Legitimate Grain and Milling Interests.

By the Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—With the reopening of Congress Monday, Senator Capper of Kansas will reintroduce his anti-grain gambling bill, designed to eliminate gambling features of grain trading, particularly on the Chicago Board of Trade, which the Senator describes as "the greatest gambling house in the world." The bill has a number of new features, as compared with the bill which Capper introduced at the last session. These are calculated to meet some of the criticisms directed at the former bill and to make it unobjectionable to the legitimate grain and milling interests.

Congressman Tincher of Kansas, who introduced the Capper bill in the House last session, will father the revised bill. Tincher was able to obtain hearings on the measure in the House Committee on Agriculture at the last session. The Senate Committee held no hearings, but decided to have hearings early in the new session on this and other measures directed toward eliminating gambling from the trade in grain and cotton.

Features of Revised Bill.

"As revised, my bill will, I believe, meet the approval of the legitimate grain and milling interests," said Senator Capper today. "It already has the approval of all the great farm organizations of the country. It will not win the approval, of course, of the grain gamblers, for its chief purpose is the elimination of the gambler. It should not be objectionable to the legitimate grain and milling interests, for it doesn't interfere with legitimate hedging. This is accomplished by limiting the buying and selling of futures absolutely to those who are regularly engaged in the grain and milling business.

"The bill places the grain exchanges under the supervision of the Bureau of Markets of the Department of Agriculture, which will confine what speculation there is in grain to the regular boards of trade. This will end the activities of the private wire houses, where 95 per cent of the real gambling is done, and which, dotting as they do every State in the Union, make gambling easy. A tax of 20 per cent on all gambling transactions will be imposed. This tax is intended to be and will be prohibitive.

"Manipulation of prices is dealt with in the Capper-Tincher bill by requiring a public record to be made of all future transactions. This in itself will prevent manipulation, Senator Capper contends.

"If a man is undertaking to 'bear' the market and the whole world knows he is doing it," Capper explained, "his efforts are bound to fail. Secrecy is absolutely necessary in the success of such a program. That is the reason why the Chicago Board of Trade keeps no records."

Proposed Method of Control.

The Capper bill requires that the privilege of dealing in futures shall be withdrawn by the Secretary of Agriculture from any Board of Trade unless it enforces itself such rules as will prevent gambling and manipulation. It is claimed for this provision that it is better than outright Government regulation because it gets away from Government interference in business, but requires the Boards of Trade themselves to see that only honest trading is engaged in and that gambling and manipulation are eliminated.

Senator Capper promises to present some startling facts and figures in support of this legislation.

"The transactions in futures amounted to 51 times the actual amount of grain produced last year," declared the Senator today. "Everyone knows that the crop was not sold anywhere near that number of times. The number of bushels of grain dealt in on the futures market in Chicago last year was three times greater than all the production of the world.

"All the actual wheat available for the Chicago market amounted to 28-100ths of 1 per cent of the transactions in futures. While the country produced approximately 700,000,000 bushels of wheat, 9,000,000,000 bushels were traded in on the Chicago futures market alone. This is not taking into account the transactions on other boards of trade throughout the country.

Commissions of Brokers.

"Fifteen billion dollars are wagered annually in future dealings in Chicago, and the commissions of the brokers are three times as great as the earnings of the bankers at Monte Carlo, which heretofore has ranked as the world's greatest gambling resort."

Senator Capper asserted that the 40-cent decline in the price of wheat in the last 20 days has been due in large measure to the manipulation of the big bear speculators at Chicago, whose activities his bill is designed to curb. Such hammering down of prices of what the farmer has to sell means the paralysis and complete breakdown of our farming industry, if persisted in, Senator Capper contends, and he insists that such raids must be prohibited in future, either through his bill or some similar legislation.

LONDON, April 9.—Lytton Strachey's eagerly-expected "Life of Queen Victoria" is marked by the same impartial candor that made his "Eminent Victorians" so refreshingly readable and informative.

He has had access to much intimate unpublished information, including the suppressed volumes of the Greville Memoirs, which enables him to give the finishing touches to the picture of Victoria and Albert, with their court, already presented in outline in other memoirs.

His description of the domestic life and character of the Queen's father and uncles is perfectly remorseless, and on one page, referring to the death of her grandfather, he declares, "The long, inglorious, unhappy life of George III was ended."

In his next mention of Victoria the author says: "The child, herself extremely fat, bore a remarkable resemblance to her grandfather. 'She is the image of the dead King; she is King George in petticoats;' exclaimed the ladies of the court."

Victoria's childhood was passed in almost penury, and the body of her father, the Duke of Kent, was actually prevented, because of his debts, from being removed from Sidmouth, in Devonshire, where he died, to London, for interment.

Masterful Disposition.

From her earliest age Victoria had a supremely exalted conception of her own importance, and Strachey tells how, when little Lady Jane Ellice was playing with her in Kensington Palace, and began to make free with the future Queen's toys, Victoria exclaimed: "You must not touch those. They are mine. And I may call you Jane, but you must not call me Victoria."

This masterful disposition declared itself later with unpleasant results in her attitude toward Prince Albert, whom she frequently reminded of his inferior position as merely a Prince Consort and no King.

"When in wrath, the Prince one day locked himself in his room," the author relates, "Victoria, no less furious, knocked upon the door to be admitted. 'Who is there?' he asked. 'The Queen of England,' was the reply, but he did not move to admit her.

"Again there was a hail of knocks. The question and answer were repeated many times, but at last there was a pause, then a gentler knocking. 'Who is there?' Again came the relentless question. This time the reply was different: 'Your wife, Albert,' and the door was opened."

Though she was only seventeen, her advisers had difficulty in persuading Victoria because she was so tenacious of her position she did not wish to share its power with any one. Even when she had fallen in love with Albert she held out against marrying him, but finally could not resist the fascination of what she termed "the exquisite nose, delicate moustache and very slight whiskers, the beautiful figure with broad shoulders and fine waist."

Scottish Highland Castle.

Albert was considered "unEnglish" by the court, among whom he was unpopular because of his straitlaced and doctrinaire views, but he utterly captivated his wife. Their happiest days were spent at Balmoral, their Scottish Highland castle which had been built and decorated according to their own tastes. What these tastes were Strachey describes vividly:

The walls and floors were of pitch pine covered with specially manufactured tartans. The Balmoral tartan is red and gray, designed by the Prince, and the Victorian tartan with its white strips, designed by the Queen, were in every room. Everywhere were tartan curtains, tartan chair covers, even tartan linoleum, and in an alcove in the hall stood a statue of the Prince clad in Highland costume. Victoria declared it was perfect.

"The little Prince of Wales, afterward Edward VII, rebelled against the Prussian methods his father used in his up-bringing, and the more lessons Bertie had to do, the less he did them," Strachey tells us. The diary he was enjoined to keep when traveling abroad was distressingly meager. The boy froze up in the presence of his father, but was quite uninfluenced by his lectures and injunctions.

Albert Incessant Worker.

Albert undermined his own health by his incessant and fruitless work upon all manner of state subjects, for although his seemingly endless series of memoranda were always read, they were never acted upon. Before he contracted the chill that, developing into typhoid fever, killed him, he had been looking worn out. "There was something of the butler about him; a portly, flabby figure," the author says of his appearance at this time.

Everyone knows with what passionate devotion Victoria mourned his loss, and every bed in which she slept thereafter "had attached to its right hand side, above the pillow, the photograph of his head and shoulders as it was taken when he lay dead, surrounded by wreaths of immortelles. The suite of rooms he had occupied was kept forever shut, his clothing was laid out afresh each evening upon the bed, and water was set ready in the basin, this incredible rite being performed with scrupulous regularity for 40 years."

The book relates that the Albert memorial in Kensington Gardens, which has excited even more artistic criticism than any of London's states, was of his design, as he conceived it during his lifetime.

"He had designed and executed several silver cruet stands upon the same model," says Strachey.

"Crown Weak After Reign."

Victoria's active interference in affairs of state, her personal partisanship as between ministers and her obstinate resistence to progressive ideas were quite ineffectuual in maintaining the royal authority, so much so that "at the end of her reign the crowd was weaker than at any other time in English history. Yet it must not be supposed that she was a second George III. Her desire to impose her will, vehement as it was unlimited by any principles, was yet checked by certain shrewdness.

"She might oppose her Ministers with extraordinary violence and remain utterly impervious to argument and supplication; the pertinacity of her resolution might seem unconquerable, but at the very last moment her obstinacy would give way. Domineering, with an inordinate conception of the greatness of her position and a high sense of duty as she saw it, Victoria was a well-meaning woman whose ideals, fortunately for her country, were countered by her Ministers."

EFFORTS TO FIND CURATIVE FOR "SLEEPING SICKNESS"

Germs Transmitted From Man to Animal, Then to Other Animal, Hospital Chief Says.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Germs of the disease commonly known as "sleeping sickness" have been transmitted from man to animal and from one animal to another, it was announced here today by Dr. B. Sachs, chief of the medical staff of the Mount Sinai Hospital, who added an effort was now being made to find a curative serum.

The neurologists and pathologists of the hospital, Dr. Sachs explained, have established the fact that, while sleeping sickness in many cases follows influenza, the two germs are distinct. He declared great strides had been made in determining the nature of the germ and hopes were held that before long it would be possible to produce a serum that would effectively combat the disease.

DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CHIEF ANNOUNCES POLICY OF MINORITY

White Says Committee Intends to Help the Administration, "Which Will Need the Help of All."

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—George White, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, who is conferring with Democratic leaders in the Senate and House on the eve of the meeting of the new Congress, announced today that, aside from purely organization activity, the efforts of the national committee would "be intended to be helpful to President Harding." He added that he was sure that the administration, "with its manifold and conflicting obligations," would need the help of all.

"I am deeply gratified," said White, "at the record which has thus far been made by our late political enemies, now the chief of the nation, that they have by act indorsed the policies of the preceding administration which formerly they so bitterly assailed by words.

"To express this gratitude, we renew our pledge to refrain from partisan machinations to harass and obstruct, and reassert our purpose to aid in every proper effort for the nation's welfare. The minority in Congress will help build legislative construction but will, of course, resist attempts to destroy good laws simply because they had been of Democratic inception."

VAST PANHANDLE TRACT CLAIMED BY CHEROKEE INDIANS

Government Patent to 14,000,000 Acres Issued by President Van Buren Filed in Supreme Court.

RICH OKLAHOMA AND TEXAS LAND INVOLVED

Tribe Enters Litigation in Red River Case With Grandnephew of Zachary Taylor as Attorney.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Claim to 14,000,000 acres of land in Texas and Oklahoma, including the cities of Tulsa and Oklahoma City and practically the entire Burkburnett oil field, was filed in the Supreme Court today in behalf of the Cherokee Indian Nation, supported by a Government patent issued by President Van Buren and certified as authentic by the Interior Department.

The claim was in the form of a petition for permission to intervene in the Red River oil lands case, an original suit between Texas and Oklahoma involving jurisdiction over the valuable oil fields situated along the common boundary.

The motion was filed by John M. Taylor, a grand nephew of Gen. Zachary Taylor, as attorney for the Cherokee Nation. He said the patent was discovered accidentally among the papers of a deceased chief of the tribe.

Bearing the date of Dec. 31, 1838, the patent gave to the Cherokee Nation "forever," a tract about 500 miles in length through the Panhandle section, comprising in all 14,374,135 acres. Only the possibility that the statute of limitations will nullify the claim prevents the Cherokee Nation from having a "water-tight case," counsel said. It will be contended, it was added, that this statute does not apply, since the Supreme Court has held that it cannot be pressed against the Government itself, and that the Indian tribe, as wards of the Government, are possessed of the same rights.

Texas Attorney-General Declines to Comment on Claim.

By the Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., April 9.—Attorney-General C. M. Curton of Texas declined today to comment on the action of an attorney claiming to represent the Cherokee Indians in presenting a petition before the United States Supreme Court claiming for the Indians large land holdings in Texas and Oklahoma. Curton said he would await official notice that such a petition had been filed before making a statement.

Cherokee Claim as Viewed by Oklahoma Attorney-General.

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., April 9.—Doubt that the Cherokee Indian nation can lay claim to more than 14,000,000 acres of land in Oklahoma and Texas, as was done in a petition filed in the United States Supreme Court today, because it has no official status as a nation, was expressed today by S. P. Freeling, Attorney-General of Oklahoma. He said, however, it might be possible for individual descendants of members of the nation to support the petition.

The land in question, which includes the cities of Tulsa and Oklahoma City, and practically the entire Burkburnett oil field, has been patented by the Government since the Van Burean patent, according to Freeling. He declined, however, to interpret the law to show whether the Cheroke patent does or does not rank the later issue.

"The people of Oklahoma City and Tulsa need not worry about the property they own," declared the Attorney-General. "The Supreme Court has been admitting petitions by anyone praying intervention in the Red River case. Any man who thought he had a little land was allowed to file a case. The Red River case would not be affected, taking it for granted the suit by the Cherokee nation is valid.

"The litigation between Oklahoma and Texas," he continued, "is merely one of boundaries. No effort is being made to establish ownership of the property. The suit does not refer to title. I have no doubt that the case will be decided Monday and that commissioners will be appointed to run the line between Oklahoma and Texas."

TURNVEREIN MANAGER ATTACKED

Ralph E. Tremayne, 25 years old, of 1607 Texas avenue, a draftsman, was arrested yesterday on complaint of Robert Mayer, manager of the Tower Grove Turnverein, Grand avenue and Juniata street, who said Tremayne knocked him down and kicked him in the side at the dance hall of the building at 1 a. m. Thursday. He suffered a fractured collar bone and several fractured ribs and has been confined to his bed until yesterday, he reported.

Mayer said Tremayne and a young woman were dancing in an objectionable fashion and he ordered them to stop. The assault followed, he said. After he had been knocked down, he said, Tremayne kicked him and left the hall. Tremayne told the police he remembered some of the incident, but not the kicking, stating he had been drinking. He was held pending application for a warrant.

PLANTER CONVICTED IN PEONAGE CASE TAKEN TO PRISON

Georgian Given Life Term for Murder of Negro Expresses Confidence of Acquittal of Crime.

NEW TRIAL MOTION SET FOR APRIL 30

Prosecutor in Another County to Ask for Indictments Charging Murder of Total of 14 Negroes.

By the Associated Press.

COVINGTON, Ga., April 9.—Convicted of murder in connection with the Jasper County peonage cases and sentenced to life imprisonment, John S. Williams, plantation owner, was taken to Atlanta late today, to await in jail action April 30 on his motion for a new trial. Williams, before leaving here, expressed confidence that he finally would be cleared of the murder charge on which the Newton County jury found him guilty, with mercy recommended. He appeared to take his conviction calmly.

The conviction of Williams in Newton County brought from Solicitor-General Campbell of Jasper County, where eight of the bodies of negroes involved in the peonage investigation were found, the statement that indictments against Williams, three of his sons, and Clyde Manning, his negro plantation foreman, on charges of the murder of a total of 14 negroes, would be sought at the grand jury investigation beginning Monday at Monticello. Campbell stated he had evidence indicating that, in addition to the 11 negroes whose bodies were found, eight in Jasper and three in Newton County, at least three others were killed and their bodies thrown into a pond.

The trial concluded here today was the first arising from the accusations that Williams brought about the killing of the 11 negro farm hands after Department of Justice agents had started to investigate alleged peonage charges on his farm last Feb. 18. Date of the trial of Williams on the other two indictments here has not been set nor has the court announced when Manning will be tried, although it has been indicated the negro would face a jury before the regular July term.

Solicitor Campbell in his statement said that in addition to seeking indictments against Williams, his sons and Manning, he would attempt to obtain indictments against six or seven other Jasper County citizens on charges of lynching Eugene Hamilton, negro.

"The law abiding citizens will show to the world they believe in law enforcement," Campbell said. "A number of citizens are involved, and we have evidence sufficient to indict six or seven. We have the lynchers on the run and will clean up the county."

Georgia Farmer Acquitted of Peonage Charge.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 9.—Willard Connell, a Pike County farmer, was acquitted of a charge of peonage by a jury in the United States District Court here yesterday. They arrived in the afternoon at San Luis Potosi and were directed by the local Chamber on a tour of the city, visiting the former home of Juarez. The special train entered Guadalajara yesterday morning, and the St. Louisans were guests of the Chamber of Commerce at luncheon.

President Works on Message; Favors '2-Inch' Tariff Bill

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—PRESIDENT HARDING is devoting his attention to his message to the extraordinary session of Congress, which he is expected to deliver in person on Tuesday. He left the executive offices this afternoon and went to the White House to work on the message.

President Harding has given indication that he will mention a large number of subjects in his first message to Congress. He will map out a program that will keep Congress in session until midsummer.

The President is still understood to be in favor of some sort of a "two-inch tariff bill," which could be rushed through in the first five days of the session to afford immediate relief to agricultural interests.

President Harding also intends to discuss the care of disabled veterans and will probably urge passage of a bill along the lines of the Dawes Committee report. Taxation, budget legislation, reorganization of the executive departments and social justice are subjects he is also expected to discuss, in addition to international questions.

RESERVES REGARDED AS PRINCIPAL ARMY COMPONENT

Statement Issued by War Department to Clear Up Possible Misconceptions of Functions.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The army's organized reserves—made up of the officers' reserve corps and the enlisted reserve corps—were described by the War Department in a statement today as "the principal war component of the army of the United States, limited in strength only by the man power of the nation."

The statement, which was issued to clear up possible misconceptions as to functions of the reserves, declared they constitute the "nucleus" for a well-trained, well-balanced organization which may readily be expanded into an adequate war component or third line increment of the army which will be able to cope with any major emergency requiring the use of troops in excess of those of the regular army and national guard."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Reduction of the American standing army to a basis of 100,000 enlisted men will be urged by many prominent members of the Senate and House when the question of providing funds again came up. It is figured that this would save approximately $50,000,000. As it stands now the size of the army is fixed at 163,000 men, but this includes the Philippine Scouts and the real continental figure is placed at 156,000.

PRO-LEAGUE REPUBLICANS' MEMORIAL TO VIVIANI HELD UP

Disagreement as to Timeliness Delays Presentation of Plan for League With Reservations.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Several nationally known "pro-league" Republican supporters of President Harding, representing the Western and Middle Western States and New England, who had prepared a memorial to be presented to former Premier Viviani, have abandoned the plan because a disagreement as to the wisdom of presenting the paper at this time arose when the New York signatures were being obtained.

The memorial is described by some of the originators as being "very friendly to President Harding" and as the "first approach to an authoritative statement of the Pro-league Republican viewpoint and attitude since the election."

It declined to accept the election result as a mandate to enter a proposed new association of nations but rather as one to enter the League with the Lodge reservations "or such modification of them as changed conditions may require."

Whether the memorial will be presented to M. Viviani or when its full terms will be made public, if at all, are not known.

PENNSYLVANIA CLERKS REJECT CUT IN WAGES

Ticket Selling Forces of Chicago and New York Also Against the Decrease.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 9.—Representatives of three organizations of railway clerks and station workers, speaking for members employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., late today rejected the 12 to 20 per cent wage reduction proposed by the managers' committee of the road. Delegates for the New York and Chicago ticket selling forces also rejected the reduction. The company's proposals were accepted on behalf of 463 freight accounting clerks at Philadelphia, while representatives for the mutual association of workers announced that a counter proposition would be submitted later.

The proposed cut in wages, which would affect about 46,000 employes and amount to a reduction of $1 a day, was submitted to representatives of the workers by the managers at today's conference. In presenting the company's plan the managers cited rates of pay in outside industries and called attention to reduced living costs.

Statement by Employes.

In rejecting the proposed cut, railway and steamship clerks, freight handlers, express and station employes submitted a lengthy statement, countering the company's argument. J. F. Erhard of Philadelphia presenting the statement, which carried figures tending to show that the Pennsylvania clerical forces received smaller pay increases than clerks in certain outside industries.

Commenting on the statement of the managers as to the financial condition of the road, the statement declared that the employes "feel that such financial conditions are in no sense due to their inefficiency or disloyalty and earnestly protest against their being obliged to accept any decrease in wage or salary, thereby placing upon their shoulders the burden of lifting the industrial wheels of the Pennsylvania system out of the mire."

J. J. McNamara of Toledo, heading a committee of the American Federation of Railroad Workers, and claiming to represent 1500 of the employes affected, rejected the managers' proposals, as did W. L. Heacox of Chicago, representative of the Order of Railroad System Agents.

To Make Counter Proposal.

W. C. Long of Philadelphia notified the managers that his organization, the Mutual Beneficial Association of Pennsylvania Railroad Employes, should make a counter proposition at a later date.

Acceptance of the proposed cut was announced by C. A. Provo of Philadelphia, who said he represented 463 workers in the freight accounting offices in Philadelphia.

C. D. Althouse, delegate for the New York ticket selling force, and F. J. Burton, appearing for the ticket office workers at the Chicago terminal, rejected the company's proposals.

Representatives for 650 Altoona clerks appeared at the conference and launched an attack against the national agreement. They declared for a return to pre-war individual agreements but announced no decision on the wage question.

New York Central Subsidiary Employes to Resist Wage Cut.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, April 9.—Thirty thousand clerks, freight handlers, express and station employes on the New York Central subsidiary lines have organized a central association with headquarters here for concerted action in opposing wage reductions approximating 18 per cent and the abrogation or annulment of existing national agreements, as proposed by the railroad company.

Invitations have gone out to the federated shop crafts and organizations of all other railroad employes affiliated with the railway department of the Federation of Labor to send representatives to a meeting to be held here within two weeks, to extend the scope of the association to include all crafts.

BURROUGHS MEMORIAL PLANNED

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Plans are under way for the formation of a John Burroughs memorial association to take charge of "Slabsides," "Riversby," and "Woodchuck Lodge"—the three places most frequented by the poet-naturalist who died last week—it was announced here tonight.

Julian Burroughs, son of the great nature lover, and Dr. Clara Barrus, literary executrix of the Burroughs estate, have indorsed the plan.

POLICE TO ENFORCE NEW REVOLVER LAW

Chief Orders Notice to All Dealers in Firearms That Statute Is in Effect.

Chief of Police O'Brien yesterday started the machinery of the department in motion to put an immediate end to the sale of revolvers, pistols and other small firearms in the city to any but responsible or licensed persons who have first obtained permits to buy such weapons from the Circuit Clerk. The Chief's action follows closely on the signing by Gov. Hyde Thursday of the so-called Allender anti-revolver bill, which was passed by the last Legislature and carried an emergency clause.

In an order sent to the Captains the Chief says: "You will instruct your officers to immediately call upon all dealers in firearms on their beats and notify them that henceforth they must not sell small firearms to any person unless such person shall present a permit from the Circuit Clerk giving him the right to own such firearms.

"Small firearms include revolvers and pistols of every make and description."

A short time after the Chief sent out the order a number of daylight holdups were reported about the city and in each case a revolver was used. The Chief said the law would do much to prevent crime.

The idea was originated by Samuel Allender when Chief of Detectives. He had it introduced in the Legislature and it was passed, but was vetoed by Gov. Gardner.

Allender and Chief of Detectives Hannegan worked hard in Jefferson City for the passage of the measure at the recent session. It is expected that a movement will be started within the year to have other states enact similar laws.

The bill provides that all weapons of the kind must be registered by number and a record of sales kept. A person wanting a weapon must first apply to the Sheriff, who will investigate his character and right to possess such a weapon and will then, if he sees fit, issue a certificate of good character. This must be shown to the Circuit Clerk, who will issue the permits for the purchase. The Circuit Clerk receives 50 cents for each permit issued.

GOV. HYDE SIGNS PHYSICAL EDUCATION BILL; 2 OTHERS

One Regulates Railroad Livestock Car Service, Other Hotel Owners' Loss Liability.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 9.—Gov. Hyde today signed the physical education bill whose passage was advocated by the State Tuberculosis Society. The law provides for a State supervisor of physical education and that counties at their option may enforce physical examinations and physical education in their schools and require teachers to pass a health examination.

Another bill signed defines as "unreasonable delay" any delay of more than 24 hours by a carrier in furnishing a car for the shipment of livestock, when notice has been given a required number of days in advance that the car is desired. Shippers are required to give three days' notice if three cars are wanted, seven days if more than three and less than 10 are wanted and 10 days if 10 or more are desired.

Liability of a hotel for the belongings of guests is removed by another bill signed; unless the same are turned over to the proprietor or his agent and a receipt obtained, and then the liability is limited to $200, unless an express understanding is reached.

FULL 85-CENT TAX FOR SCHOOLS MAY NOT BE NECESSARY

Board of Education to Consider the Question at Its Next Regular Meeting Tuesday Night.

HAD NOT ANTICIPATED ASSESSMENT ADVANCE

Estimates at Time Special Election Was Decided on Based on Valuations Since Increased 30 Per Cent.

The Board of Education, at its regular monthly meeting Tuesday night, will decide whether it will assess the whole 85-cent school tax rate authorized by the taxpaying voters at the special election Friday. The sentiment of the board members is that, in view of the 30 per cent increase in the assessment of St. Louis real estate ordered by the State Board of Equalization, which will make available for school maintenance approximately $1,400,000 more than the board anticipated, the board, as a matter of fairness to the taxpayers, should regulate the levy to conform with the amount of revenue expected at the time the 85-cent tax was determined upon as necessary.

When the Board of Education decided to ask for 85 cents on the $100 valuation tax (an increase of 10 cents over last year's rate), it had no knowledge that there would be a 30 per cent increase in the assessed valuation of St. Louis real estate, and, basing its calculations on the $803,000,000 assessment of 1920, estimated that its income for the 1921-1922 school term would represent an increase of approximately $2,064,000 over the revenue derived for the 1920-1921 scholastic year.

Effect of Increase.

The 30 per cent increase will bring the assessed valuation of St. Louis real estate to $1,001,000,000, making the amount available for school maintenance, under the 85-cent school tax rate, $3,464,000 more than it was last year.

Under the law the 85-cent rate is the maximum amount that can be levied for school purposes, but it is optional with the Board of Education to reduce the levy if, in the board's judgment, the maximum rate will produce revenue in excess of the needs of the schools. If the board insists upon levying an 85-cent tax rate, its revenue for the 1921-1922 term, collectible next January, would be about $8,925,000. In addition to this the public schools here would receive approximately $1,100,000 from other sources, which would bring the total revenue to $10,025,000.

Although the present congested condition of the schools, compelling the housing of more than 6500 pupils in portable buildings and the attendance of more than 1200 children at half-day sessions, requires, in the opinion of the board, the erection of seven additional elementary school buildings and two junior high school buildings, the board, in figuring the 85-cent tax rate, contemplated the erection of two new elementary schools and one additional junior high school.

Estimate on Building Costs.

It was estimated that the two grammar schools could be built at a cost of about $325,000 each and that the cost of erecting and equipping a junior high school building would be approximately $1,000,000. The cost of providing the additional schools with teachers and principals also was taken into consideration.

Charles P. Mason, secretary-treasurer of the Board of Education, said that, in his opinion, the board should levy the maximum 85-cent rate. He pointed out that it would be dangerous to rely upon the increased valuation of real estate as it was probable that certain phases of the ruling of the State Board of Equlization might be contested by property owners. He said the Board of Education in certifying the tax rate to the City Comptroller must base its estimate upon an accurate knowledge of what its revenue will actually be and must prepare its appropriations accordingly, so there will be no likelihood of a deficit.

Mason also called attention to the fact that only 90 per cent of the taxes are collected when due, but he added that the delinquent taxes, with penalties, usually are paid within the year after they become due and thus there is no financial loss from that source.

No Definite Building Program.

John J. Maddox, acting Superintendent of Instruction, whose recommendations concerning additional school buildings will receive serious consideration from the board, said yesterday he was not prepared to outline a building program. He will confer with the Commitee on Finance before submitting anything definite to the whole board.

A delegation of real estate dealers who called upon Secretary Mason yesterday to protest against a levy of 85 cents was advised by Mason to take the matter up with the board Tuesday night.

EAST BOOTHBAY, Me., April 9.—The schooner Bowdoin, built to carry Donald B. MacMillan, the explorer, on his next Arctic voyage, starting in July, was launched today from the shipyard of Hodgdon Bros. here.

In design and construction the Bowdoin embodies all elements of special provision for the work ahead of her suggested by the long experience of MacMillan, who was the chief Lieutenant of Peary in his successful expedition to the North Pole. Her hull is egg-shaped with nothing to which ice can cling. Under sufficient pressure from the ice floes, the Bowdoin, instead of being crushed, should lift out of water and be carried along with the pack, and as safely slip back when the pressure is relieved.

Plans Hazardous Journey.

So confident is MacMillan of the schooner's ability to cope with the frozen channels of the Far North that he plans to pass through the dangerous Fury and Hecla Strait on the west side of Baffin Bay, where former expeditions have been lost or turned back. His plans include also either a return by the strait or the circumnavigation of Baffin land after exploring a stretch of 1000 miles of its western shore on which it is believed no white man has ever set foot. It is said to be the longest strip of unexplored coast in the world.

The Bowdoin is of about the size of the Discovery, William Baffin's ship which in 1616 was the first to reach Baffin Land. She is 80 feet, 10 inches long, 19 feet 7 inches beam, and 9 feet 6 inches draft, with a total displacement of 115 tons. She is of the knockabout auxiliary schooner type equipped with a 45 horsepower crude oil burning engine, an installation which the explorer hopes will insure him a cruising radius virtually unlimited by the use of whale oil to supplement the regular fuel supply.

If the plan to use whale oil proves practicable, he says, the expedition will have a clear advantage over former ones, as the fuel supply has always presented a serious problem in Arctic exploration.

The schooner will have a generous spread of canvas to enable her to sail home when clear of ice, should the fuel supply give out.

Hull Planked With 3-Inch Oak.

The stanchness of the hull is assured by a heavy frame planked with three-inch white oak to which has been added at the waterline a five-foot belt of greenheart of ironwood.

This armor is said to withstand the grinding action of ice better than steel or any other material, as the ice merely polishes its hard surface. When winter sets in, a three-foot covering of snow and ice will be placed over the entire ship with snow houses after the Eskimo style to cover the hatchways.

The expedition is planned to cover two years, but may be prolonged. It will go under the auspices of the MacMillan Arctic Association, largely composed of alumni of Bowdoin College, from which MacMillan and Peary were graduated. The ship cost $25,000, and her equipment $15,000.

The party will consist, besides Dr. MacMillan, of an engineer, three scientists and a cook.

The Bowdoin will remain at East Boothbay through May and a part of June for the finishing touches. She is to be completely stocked and provisioned by the last of June, and will start north the first week in July.

NEW COURT WILL BE ESTABLISHED JULY 1

Circuit Judges Decide to Use Municipal Courts Building for Domestic Relations Cases.

Circuit Judges in general term late yesterday decided to establish the new Court of Domestic Relations July 1 and to use two courtrooms in the Municipal Courts Building for the court, which will dispose of divorce, maintenance and related cases and juvenile and children's code proceedings. Presiding Judge Grimm of the Circuit Court last night said no decision had been reached regarding the assignment of Judges to the new court. The last Legislature, besides creating the court, provided for two new Judges for St. Louis, increasing the number to 16. They will take up their duties in June.

The Circuit Judges met Tuesday, but failed to reach a decision on the location for the new court, as opposition was expressed to removing the Probate Court from the Courthouse on Broadway. The Judges yesterday determined that it was preferable to keep the Probate Court in the building on Broadway and use the Municipal Courts Building, where two courtrooms are available, besides the old Juvenile Courtroom in the basement. Several of the Judges previously had opposed having a Domestic Relations Court oin the Municipal Courts Building, where criminal cases are heard in three divisions.

Gov. Hyde has offered the two new judgeships to Forrest C. Donnell, a law partner of Senator Spencer, and Henry A. Hamilton, Associate City Counselor.

MAN PUTS $175 IN CAP, BUT LOSES IT IN HOLDUP

Marion Rock, 24 years old, of 7269 Lyndover avenue, proprietor of a meat market at 2200 South Broadway, before starting home at 9:30 o'clock last night placed $175, the day's receipts, in his cap as a precaution against holdup. As he was walking along the south side of Trudeau street, between Second and De Kalb streets, two men with revolvers commanded him to put up his hands.

"Come on," said one of the robbers after searching Rock's pockets and finding nothing. "You've got money on you. Hand it over or I'll knock your block off."

Rock reported to the police he took off his cap and gave the robber the $175.

Adolph Moore, proprietor of a confectionary at 6122 Ridge avenue, reported that as he was locking the front door of his place at 10:30 p. m., a man stepped out of an adjoining doorway, presented a revolver, and took $16 from Moore's pockets. The robber got away.

Involuntary Bankruptcy Suit.

By the Associated Press.

LITTLE ROCK, April 9.—A petition for involuntary bankruptcy was filed today against the Industrial Transportation Co. operating 123 stores in Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana, and Missouri, in addition to packing plants and warehouses, by the Prairie Milling Co. of Hazen, Ark. Judgments against the company have been awarded to creditors in the White County Circuit Court for $15,507, and in the Faulkner Circuit Court at Conway. The company maintains headquarters at St. Louis.

CITY JAIL PRISONER CAUGHT SAWING BARS

Harry Moore, Under 10-Year Sentence, Captured After Previous Escape.

City jail guards at 2 p. m. yesterday discovered Harry Moore, 26 years old, who escaped from the jail Feb. 17, after being sentenced to 10 years in the penitentiary on a robbery charge, and who was recaptured two days later, sawing bars on a window on the fifth floor. Moore, with 90 other prisoners had been taken to the fifth floor to attend religious services which are conducted there on Saturday afternoons.

The fifth floor is a large loft which is divided by a canvas curtain to separate the chapel from a section cotaining machinery. Moore, during the services, slipped around the curtain. When discovered he had succeeded in cutting through one end of a 1-inch steel bar and partially through the other end. Two saws, four inches long, without handles were found on him.

Jailer McCully said that Moore must have been at the work on several different occasions, and that he did not have sufficient time to cut away the bar at any one time with the tools he had. He said that had he succeeded in cutting away two bars, he would have been able to climb down to the first floor on a ladder formed by the bars outside of the cells. Reaching the first floor, he would have had to jump about 18 feet onto the lawn.

Moore is awaiting trial on a charge of robbery alleged to have been committed by him during the period he was out of jail after his escape. He was arrested on the night of Feb. 20, as he was entering a saloon at 4646 West Florissant avenue, which had just been raided by detectives, who were participating in a series of raids ordered by the New Police Board.

He later was identified as one of two men who had robbed the oil station of Louis C. Wilderman. He already has served two terms in the penitentiary for burglary.

NEGRO WHO HID CONFEDERATE SEAL CARRIES SECRET TO GRAVE

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The whereabouts of the official seal of the Confederacy, an unsolved mystery for more than half a century, probably will ever remain unknown. James Jones, aged negro employe in the Senate office building, said to be the only person with a knowledge of where the seal was buried, died today without disclosing the secret.

Jones was serving as a servant of Jefefrson Davis, President of the Confederacy, when Davis was captured. As the story goes, Jones buried the seal before the Federal authorities could obtain possession of the Confederate leader's effects, and to his death never revealed the spot.

New Warrensburg College Regent.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 9.—Gov. Hyde today appointed R. J. Grover of Warrensburg, chairman of the Republican County Committee of Johnson County, to be a member of the Board of Regents of the Warrensburg Teachers' College for a four-year term, to succeed C. A. Kieth, Democrat, whose term has expired.

WIDOW OF SHONTS RETRACTS CHARGES AGAINST WOMAN

She Signs Withdrawal of All Statements About Mrs. Thomas, to Whom He Left Estate.

WILL CONTEST IS DISMISSED

Terms of Settlement Not Made Known, but Widow Is Understood to Have Accepted $50,000.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Mrs. Milla D. Shonts, widow of Theodore P. Shonts, who was president of the Interborough Rapid Transit Co., and former chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission, has signed a complete and unqualified retraction of all charges made by her against Mrs. Amanda C. Thomas, to whom Shonts left his residuary estate.

The formal retraction is attached to papers in which Mrs. Shonts consents to the probating of her husband's will in favor of Mrs. Thomas. The statement of Mrs. Shonts is:

To All Whom It May Concern: I, Milla D. Shonts, do hereby retract and withdraw without reservation all charges that I have at any time heretofore made concerning the character, repute and conduct of Mrs. Amanda C. Thomas.

(Signed) MILLA D. SHONTS.

Mrs. Shonts' contest of her husband's will, instituted in December, 1919, has, accordingly, been dismissed, and the will has been admitted to probate.

Settlement Terms Not Stated.

The papers in the case do not reveal what the settlement terms were, but it is understood Mrs. Shonts will receive approximately $50,000 from the executors of the estate in consideration of withdrawing her contest. This amount is in addition to $100,000 which Surrogate Foley previously directed the Guaranty Trust Co., as administrator, to pay her. The latter amount represents the sum Shonts, in his will, admitted that he owed her. The two daughters get trust funds of $50,000 each, under the will.

Inasmuch as the estate is approximately $400,000, Mrs. Thomas' share as residuary legatee is valued today at about $50,000 or $60,000. There is a possibility, however, that the securities making up a large part of the estate may increase in value $100,000 during the next year. Such an appreciation would react entirely in favor of Mrs. Thomas, making her share $150,000 to $160,000.

Shonts died at his New York home, Sept. 20, 1919. In November, Mrs. Shonts, having obtained an order appointing her temporary administrator of the estate, served notice of her purpose to contest any will which might be offered in favor of another woman. The will in favor of Mrs. Thomas was filed soon afterward by Shonts' attorney.

Mrs. Shonts was removed as temporary administrator, and the Guaranty Trust Co. was appointed. In January, 1920, Mrs. Shonts filed an alienation suit against Mrs. Thomas, asking for $1,000,000 damages. She followed this with a suit against Mrs. Thomas for realty which she alleged that Shonts had given to Mrs. Thomas. The alienation suit was dismissed two months ago.

Separation Agreement.

A separation agreement between Shonts and his wife was executed in 1917, in which Shonts and his wife agreed to "live as if unmarried," and Shonts agreed to make certain financial provisions for her. The wife charged that these financial provisions were not carried out fully.

Shonts' side of the difficulty with his wife was indicated by papers recently filed by the attorneys for the estate, which contained statements of some friends of Shonts. These friends, business associates of Shonts, were ready, it was declared, to repeat declarations made by him, to the effect that his wife's extravagances had nearly ruined him financially, and that she had been unwilling to give him the home life he desired. This, he declared, caused the estrangement between them.

ROBBER SUSPECT IS BROUGHT HERE TO FACE PHYSICIAN

Photograph of Herman C. Press Has Been Identified by Dr. Jacob Jacobson.

Herman C. Press of 819 North Twentieth street, who was arrested in connection with the attempt on the part of two men to rob Dr. Jacob Jacobson of 5598 Bartmer avenue in the latter's office, 1833 Cass avenue, March 28, was brought to St. Louis from Chicago last night. The arrest of Press, who was released from the Jefferson City penitentiary last January, after serving a term for robbery, followed identification of his Bertillon Bureau photograph by Dr. Jacobson.

Dr. Jacobson resisted the robbers and one of them shot him three times. One bullet went wild and hit the other robber, Roy Burton of 1815 Biddle street, who is a prisoner at the city hospital with a wound in his neck. Dr. Jacobson has recovered sufficiently to resume his medical practice. Press refused to discuss the case.

DRIVER WHOSE AUTO SERIOUSLY INJURES CHILD FAILS TO STOP

Eight-Year-Old Girl Knocked Down and Dragged Several Feet—Other Machines in Collision.

Inez Munroe, 8 years old, of 4732A Easton avenue, when crossing Easton avenue at Deer street at 7 o'clock last night, was knocked down and dragged several feet by an automobile which turned from Easton avenue into Deer street. The driver did not stop. The child was taken to the city hospital, where it was found that her left leg was fractured and that she had suffered internal injuries.

Joseph Cizek, 20, of 1038 Park avenue, was cut by flying glass at 9 p. m. when his automobile collided with an automobile driven by Henry Marthel of Affton, Mo., at Nebraska avenue and Utah street. Cizek was taken to the city hospital.

Edward Heine, 44, of Affton, became so excited following a collision between his automobile and one driven by Martin Callahan of 4490 Laclede avenue, at Grand and Park avenues, at 9:30 p. m., that a policeman took him to the city hospital for examination. The policeman found a loaded revolver on him. Physicians at the hospital said Heine was suffering from acute alcoholism. Charges of reckless driving and carrying a concealed weapon were preferred against him.

FINANCIER AND PUBLISHER DIES

Wharton Baker Also Once Populist Candidate for President.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, April 9.—Wharton Barker, financier and publicist and Populist candidate for President of the United States in 1900, died at 1 a. m. today at his home in this city. He would have been 75 years old on May 1.

Barker came of a family of financiers, his father and grandfather having been prominent bankers.

DR. KOLBENHEYER'S BODY BROUGHT HOME

Practitioner Here for 47 Years Was a Noted Figure in South Side Society.

The body of Dr. Friedrich Kolbenheyer, for 47 years a practicing physician in St. Louis, and, during must of that period, a prominent figure in club and social circles on the South Side, was brought here from Omaha last night for cremation, the ashes to repose here. He died Friday night at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William H. Koenig, at the age of 78 years.

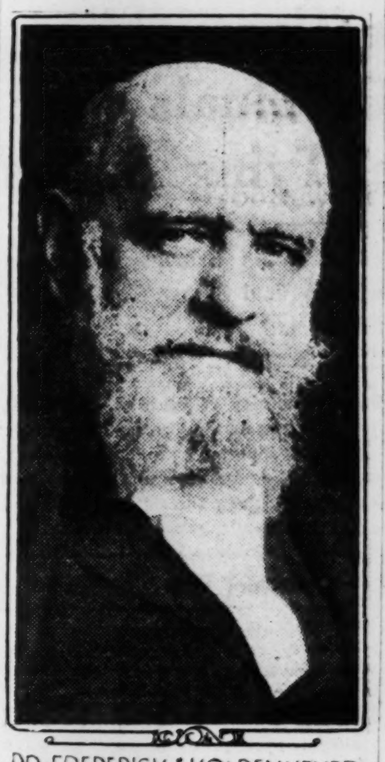
While the activities of Dr. Kolbenheyer had declined in recent years, he was known to many of the older residents of the city, particularly those connected with German-American organizations before the war. In the spring of 1917 he and his wife left the home on Lafayette avenue, near Mississippi avenue, where they had resided for more than 20 years, and went to live with their daughter in Omaha.

Was an Anti-Monarchist.

Dr. Kolbenheyer was born in Bielitz, a town of Austrian Poland, and was the son of a large landed proprietor, who sent him at an early age to study medicine under the noted Dr. Nothnagel, of Vienna. He became marked, not only by his success as a medical student, but also for the radical political views which he acquired.

As an antimonarchist and a member of the Liberty party, he was so active as to attract the displeasure of officials in the Hapsburg regime, and finally received a hint to leave the country. He immediately departed, coming directly to St. Louis, where he set up in practice. This was about 1870.

ST. LOUIS PHYSICIAN WHO DIED IN OMAHA



DR. FREDERICK KOLBENHEYER.

By reason of his live interest in public affairs, and for other causes, he became acquainted with the celebrated coterie of St. Louis journalists, including the elder Joseph Pulitzer, Carl Schurz, Karl Denzer and Edward Preetorius, a particularly intimate friendship arising between himself and Mr. Pulitzer.

Interest in Public Affairs.

He was a leading figure in the old Germania Club, which then held the membership of many men who occupied high places in the affairs of St. Louis. His own interest, however, was not engaged by civic movements. He was concerned greatly with international politics, and was a deep student of philosophy, it being said among his friends that he knew the works of Kant, Schopenhauer and Hegel better than any man in this section. He was himself an assiduous writer, and even in recent years contributed to German language publications.

It was said, however, that he had no sympathy for the German cause in the late war, his own experience with Teutonic imperialism having left an ineradicable impression upon his mind. Much of his political correspondence that was published gave vent to his dislike for Kings.

His Personal Traits.

Dr. Kolbenheyer was best known, however, for his own personal traits. Notwithstanding an emphatic and outspoken manner, and a temper that was choleric when roused by opposition, his friends found him a fascinating talker, both by virtue of his deep and versatile knowledge, and his personal charm.

In late months, according to his daughter, his thoughts had dwelt greatly upon his St. Louis friendships, and, upon becoming convinced a few days ago, that he would not long survive, he said: "Now I shall go back to St. Louis." He had given directions that his ashes remain here.

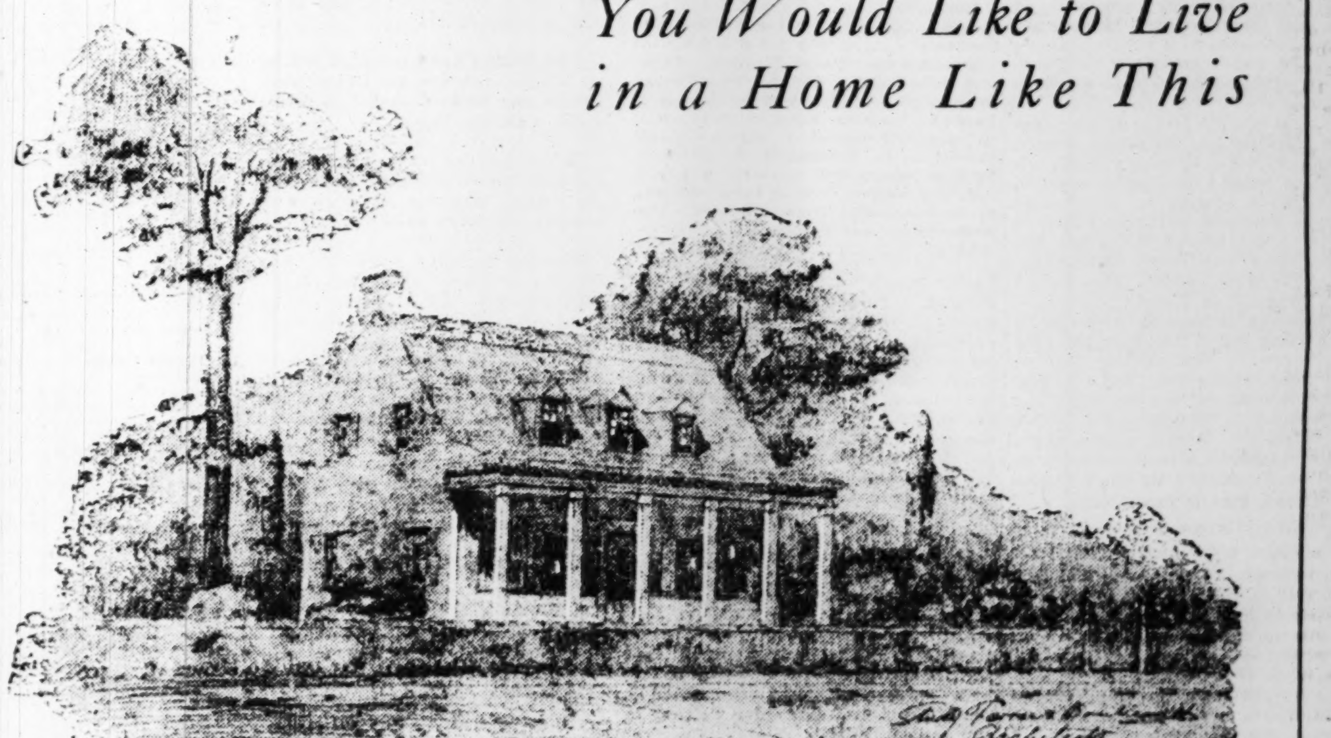
His death was due to old age. His wife, who was the Viennese sweetheart of his youth, survives him. She will remain with her daughter. No funeral ceremonies will be held here.

Order for Highland Car Stop.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 9.—The Public Service Commission today ordered the United Railways to have its Meramec Highlands cars stop at Quintette road, near Eden Park, and not far from the Meramec Highlands railroad station, beginning April 18. Petitions bearing about 250 names were submitted to the commission, declaring that last year the stop was eliminated. The commission ordered that a platform be provided at this stop.

You Would Like to Live in a Home Like This



Is it not beautiful in its simplicity and suggestive of domestic peace? Yet, it is within reach of the person of average means because it is built of wood.

SOMEHOW, the home of wood creates within the human breast a desire to be enfolded within its walls. Wood is so suggestive of comfort and shelter. Then, too, the graceful lines of the simple home of wood awaken every sentiment of home devotion.

Although wood is accepted generally as the most inexpensive of building material, it is distinctly adaptable to that desirable, simple beauty that lures the home-lover. Thus the home that expresses the fullest meaning of the term is within easy reach of those of average means.

Homes of wood have all the advantages of homes of other materials in addition to those natural advantages peculiar to wood, such as compelling beauty, low cost, easy upkeep, adaptability to additions and remodeling.

The durability of the home of wood is pleasingly expressed everywhere in the South and East by the survival of splendidly preserved colonial mansions of wood. Some of these have housed succeeding generations for more than a hundred years, holding their own in appearance and service with those of recent construction.

In abiding by financial limitations the average person contemplating building a home need not sacrifice beauty, comfort and durability. The low cost of lumber today will help him meet these limitations. Lumber prices are now normal. The time is most opportune for constructing of wood. Homes of wood require less time to build, thus labor costs are diminished.

Your saving in building of wood may be invested in larger grounds.

Owgoost Herrmann's Reply to His Star Outfielder's Holdout: "Roush Mit 'im!"

Bill Sherdel Baffles Fohl's Sluggers and Cardinals Win Sixth Game, Tying Series

Rickey's Star Relief Pitcher of 1920 Holds Browns to Seven Hits and Scores 4-1 Victory—Final Spring Contest This Afternoon.

William Henry Sherdel, the Cardinals' champion relief pitcher of 1920, proved a great cold weather pitcher when he stopped the Browns with seven hits in yesterday's Arctic baseball exhibition at Sportsman's Park and won, 4 to 1. As a result of the conquest the two teams are tied for honors, each owning three victories. Some 3200 fans brought along their "bennies" and viewed the attraction.

Sherdel pitched as good a game as could be expected under existing conditions. In only four of the rounds were the Fohlmen able to reach him for safeties. He had almost perfect control, issuing only three passes, Tobin walking in the second and fourth rounds, and Sothoron in the fifth.

Lee Fohl, in an effort to win the series, sent in Allan Sothoron, who blanked the Knot-Holers in the third clash. Sothoron, however, was unable to repeat his star performance of last Tuesday. The Cardinals were able to bunch hits off him in the third, fourth and seventh to gain the victory.

Sherdel's ability to stop the recognized sluggers of the Browns brought him the victory. George Sisler got one hit that drove in a run, but Jacobson, Williams, Tobin and Smith were unable to connect for safeties. Sherdel had the sluggers hitting easy grounders or sending up easy lifts to the meadowmen.

Brownie Sluggers Fail.

Walter Gerber, the Browns' shortstop, opened the game with a single to right, and the followers of the American League club looked for an easy game. However, Gleason, after twice failing to sacrifice, fanned. Sisler hoisted to Heathcote and Jacobson forced Tobin.

The Cardinals also had a chance to tally in the first frame. "Heine" Mueller sent a roller straight to Smith and the Browns' hot corner guardian fumbled. Fournier sacrificed. On Toporcer's hoist to Tobin Mueller left second too soon and was doubled.

The first scoring in the game came in the third round. Sothoron opened the round with a single and advanced to second on Gerber's sacrifice. Gleason singled to center and Sothoron stopped at third. Sisler's crash to right scored Sothoron, but Gleason was cut down trying for third. Jacobson ended the round with a long fly to Mann.

It was the tailend of the Cardinals' batting order that brought ruin to Sothoron in the closing half of the round. Clemons singled and Heathcote beat out a bunt down the third base line. Sherdel's hit to left filled the bases. Mueller forced Sherdel and Clemons scored. Heathcote tallied on Fournier's fly to Jacobson.

Lavan Has a Large Day.

The Knot-Holers got busy again in the third after two batters had been retired. With Hornsby and Mann out of the way, Lavan crashed a double to left and scored on Clemons' ace to center.

This ended the scoring until the sixth, when Hornsby started the Cardinals on their way to another run with a single to center. Mann struck out, but on the hit and run play, Lavan threw his bat at the ball and popped a single to right, Hornsby going to third. Clemons was safe on Smith's boot and Hornsby crossed the rubber.

After the third round, the Browns' best chance came in the eighth. Gerber opened with a single and Gleason smashed a liner that was too hot for Hornsby and went for a hit. With the heavy end of the batting order up things looked good. Sisler hit a fly on top of the right field pavilion that was foul by a foot and then hoisted to Mann. Jacobson tapped to Sherdel and Williams fanned. The two swats for the Browns in this frame came after four hitless sessions.

Against Bayne in the seventh and eighth, the Knot-Holers got only one man on base. Lavan, who poled a triple after two had been retired in the eighth round.

Davis and Haines Scheduled to Hurl in Seventh Tilt of Series

The deciding game of the spring series is scheduled to be played this afternoon at Sportsman's Park. "Dixie" Davis in all probability will be Fohl's hurling nominee, while Jess Haines is due for the Cardinals. However, if it warms up considerably by game time there is a possibility that Ferd Schupp, the southpaw, will draw the assignment. Play at 3 o'clock.

Southpaws Stop Brownies.

In the clashes to date, the Browns have proven very weak against left-handed pitchers. Three times the American Leaguers have faced a southpaw, and in those games have scored just four runs and rapped out 17 hits. They beat Jakie May because Urban Shocker stopped Rickey's charges without a run.

Sothoron Has Real Control.

Allen Sothoron exhibited real control in yesterday's game. During the six rounds he was on the hill he did not walk a single batter. What's more, not once did the swatter see three wide ones go past. While he was on the hill, Sothoron pitched 80 times. Of this number 51 were strikes and 29 were called balls.

Billy Bayne in the two rounds he labored pitched 24 times, 15 being strikes and nine balls.

Sherdel Pitched 115 Times.

In defeating the Browns yesterday Bill Sherdel pitched 115 times. He pitched 71 strikes and 44 balls. Bill walked a trio and only two other batters saw three wide ones go over. These two athletes were Gleason in the fifth and Severeid in the seventh. The fifth was Sherdel's busiest session when he was forced to pitch 17 times. The figures:

Mueller Makes Good Throw.

"Heinie" Mueller, the St. Louis boy, who has been playing right field for the Cardinals, made a line throw to Hornsby to catch Gleason trying for third base following Sisler's hit in the third inning. The heave had to be perfect and Mueller sent it to the hot corner on a line.

Gerber Turns Star Play.

The feature fielding play of the game was turned by Walter Gerber, the Browns' shortstop, at the expense of Toporcer in the third inning. Toporcer started a liner to left, which looked like a sure hit. However, Gerber leaped high and grabbed the ball with his gloved hand. Gerber was a busy athlete, handling seven assists and two putouts without a slip.

McHenry Rejoins Cardinals.

Austin McHenry rejoined the Cardinals yesterday and broke into the game in the seventh inning when he batted for Mueller against Lefty Bayne. McHenry went to left field, although his finger is still taped.

Pitchers Have .500 Marks.

There are five pitchers who have appeared in the series, who own .500 pitching marks. They are Sothoron, Shocker and Davis of the Browns and Haines and May of the Cardinals. Sherdel with 1—0 is the only flinger with a clean slate.

Owens Does Some Sprinting.

Umpire Brick Owens on the bases yesterday did a lot of sprinting. This was not done to keep on top of the plays, but to keep warm.

Hornsby Escapes Injury.

Rogers Hornsby had a narrow escape from injury in the eighth inning when Gelason's terrific liner crashed against his right thumb. Time was taken out, but Hornsby went back into the game and after the clash it was reported that he was O K.

A SOVEREIGN REMEDY.

THERE was a man in our town,
And he was feeling queer;
He called a doctor who prescribed
A glass of lager beer.
But when he found it made him well,
With all his might and main
He had another fainting spell
And called the doc again.

THERE was a man in our town,
Whose ear was on the bum;
He couldn't hear a single thing,
And asked the doc to come.
The doctor took his instrument
And probed into his ear
And told him he would have to drink
A case or two of beer.

THERE was a man in our town
Who lost his appetite;
He had no "pep" or energy
And could't sleep at night.
The doctor said a glass of beer
Would make him all serene
If drunk before and after meals
And also in between.

Dave Bancroft has had his tonsils removed, and will soon be in there eating 'em up at the old stand.

The Indians are beginning to get the breaks already. Bill Wambsganss has a broken arm.

Frank Frisch of the Giants also took unto himself a broken leg. So that the world's series favorites are starting out on even terms as far as the breaks are concerned.

Zac Wheat held out on Charley Ebbets for an increase of $7000 in his pay envelope. Charley split the difference, and gave him a hoist of $800.

The Yanks have released Pitcher Edgar Lepard to Bridgeport. Looks like Lepard ought to make good with the Tigers.

When Lepard makes good and becomes a fixture with some major league team he won't have to change his spots so often.

George McBride says Bob Lamotte is the best shortstop in the business, but the trouble is he can't hit. Must be a dead ringer for George.

Bobby Roth is troubled with water on the knee. Why not get one of those Chicago lawyers to bail him out?

Central High and McKinley Capture Opening Battles

Yeatman and Cleveland on Losing End in Interscholastic League Games.

About 600 high school baseball enthusiasts shivvered for five hours yesterday afternoon, watching the opening double-header of the St. Louis High School League season, on the league campus, Grand and Laclede avenues.

Central and McKinley were returned victors over Yeatman and Cleveland, respectively, in two rather poorly played exhibitions. The mid-city nine defeated Yeatman, 11 to 9; while Coach Shiek's players gained a 10-to-4 verdict over their South Side opponents. Soldan, the other member of the league, had an open date.

The Central-Yeatman affair was the more interesting attraction of the pair, inasmuch as it was more closely contested than the opener. The Red and Black got off to an early lead by hitting Pitcher Strommell for five runs in the first two innings; but the North Siders tied matters in the following session with a five-run rally. Two home-runs, which would have been held to singles by ordinary fielding, aided in sending the quintet over the plate.

Nudelman Chased Off Hill.

This rally started the downfall of Pitcher Nudelman who had started out in excellent shape for the Walker forces. Yeatman got after him for three runs in the following inning and it was necessary to call Riehl from the bench to stop the onslaught. He answered the call in yoeman manner and put an end to the run-making, whereas his teammates gathered in enough to regain the lead.

Pitcher Nease of McKinley, a recruit, showed well against the favored Cleveland outfit and held it runless except for the fourth inning when four runs came across. This melee was due to a little wildness and three of the seven hits which were garnered off his delivery.

The McKinley nine had no trouble in hitting Groerich and Reinhardt for 14 safeties, including a bevy of extra-base hits. First Baseman Kinsey led the attack with a home run, double and single. Westphaelinger and Condon also connected for three hits.

Missouri Scores Two Shutouts Over Drake Nine

Tigers Capture First Tilt, 7-0 and Second, 11-0—Bulldog's Errors Costly.

COLUMBIA, Mo., April 9.—With the thermometer near the freezing point and a sharp wind making players and spectators miserable, the University of Missouri opened the baseball season here today with a double shut out over Drake. The Tigers won the first game, 7 to 0, and the second 11 to 0.

By agreement the games went only seven innings. Missouri opened strong in the first game, O'Reilly taking first on Givan's error and going to third when Lam hit to left. Lowrance hit to left, scoring Lam and O'Reilly, and Bunker's single scored Lowrance. An error again started the Tiger scoring machine in the fifth, when Clayton muffed Bunker's grounder, and Goode failed to catch him at second when Fulbright laid one down in front of the plate. Fulbright and Huber scored Heath's errors.

Pruitt stayed on the mound for the Tigers at the start of the second contest, to be replaced by Smith in the third inning. Niggemeyer took the slab for Drake. The Tigers started smashing them early in this game, also, counting three runs in the second, and reinforcing their lead with three in the fifth, four in the sixth and one in the seventh.

Drake's best chance to score was in the sixth, when Goode got a double, only to lose it by trying to reach third. Gilchrist and Heath singled, but died on the bags when Clayton fanned and Givan flied out.

Talbott and Hogan each booted one which let in three runs and Murphy and Gray slammed out two base safeties for three more. The Sooners were unable to score in the last half of the tenth frame.

The sooners gathered 10 hits off Rody, while the Jayhawks collected but even hits off the two Sooner slabmen. Five of the Jayhawk scores were made by men who had reached first by the free pass route and three more were let in by errors.

St. Louis Tennis District Has 29 Clubs, Ranks 4th

Philadelphia Leads the Country, With Chicago a Close Second in Members.

By Davidson Obear.

Tennis organization in the larger cities has undergone a marked change during the last six or seven years. With one or two exceptions the local affairs of a city were usually in the hands of one or two of the larger clubs.

Now conditions are different. Many clubs, athletic associations and other organizations have taken up tennis with much enthusiasm. Their members who are interested in the game have formed tennis clubs, committees or teams. They conduct contests such as club championships or annual events. The advanced step begins from this point. Membership is sought in an organization of clubs known as a "district tennis association." Teams are formed by each organization and interclub matches are arranged.

City and tennis center associations usually hold membership in the sectional association, which is composed of several states. The sectional associations in turn hold membership in the United States Lawn Tennis Association. The voting power and the amount of dues paid by each club are usually based on the number of tennis-playing members.

Twelve City Associations.

In 1920 there were active district tennis associations in 12 of the largest cities in the United States. These organizations represented a total membership of 171 clubs. Other large cities not having district associations usually have intercity matches. Clubs in these cities hold membership in State and sectional associations. In California there is a very active league of cities. A tennis league has recently been organized in Los Angeles County for interclub play. The famous Sutton sisters and the "Comet McLoughlin" belong to clubs in this league.

The Philadelphia and District Tennis Association is the largest tennis center or district organization in the United States. It has a membership of 38 clubs. This body is planning six leagues for its 1921 interclub matches for men in singles and doubles. Last season six clubs were represented in interclub matches for women. The association takes great interest in tennis in the high schools. Twelve public and private high schools hold membership in the Interscholastic Tennis League.

In Chicago there are 32 clubs forming the Chicago Tennis Association. The membership consists principally of tennis clubs and commercial organiaztion interested in tennis. Park clubs are not affiliated with the district body. The Chicago Public Parks Association held membership up to three years ago and was entitled to one vote in the district body. Last season the interclub tournament was won by the South Side Club team. There were three divisions in the interclub play. The association also held an individual championship for men in singles and doubles.

Cleveland followed Chicago and organized the Cleveland Associated Tennis Clubs in 1916. While it only has a membership of 12 clubs the Ohio city body is a most progressive one. The Cleveland Yacht Club won the interclub event last season.

In addition to the 12 clubs in its membership, the district body has an individual sustaining membership of 2000 players and is affiliated with the Western Lawn Tennis Association.

In New York there is a district organization known as the Metropolitan Tennis Association. The New York Tennis Club won the interclub tourney last season while the West Side Club at Forest Hills was the winner in 1919. Both of these teams met in the final round both years.

Eight clubs had teams in the interclub event last year. The Metropolitan Association is being reorganized and will doubtless have a membership of nearly 30 clubs in the near future and will be the governing body for the City of New York.

St. Louis Has 29 Members.

The St. Louis District Tennis Association has a membership of 29 clubs and nearly all of them enter teams in interclub play. Various other tennis activities are promoted by this body and efforts are being made this year to assist every organization interested in tennis. Clubs having more than four courts are allowed two votes in the district association, while clubs with four or less are allowed one vote.

The Municipal Tennis Association does not hold membership as one association, as in the case of public park tennis organizations in other leading cities. Each park club is a direct member and is allowed two votes, as each park has more than four courts.

In Kansas City the District Association has a membership of eight clubs, but holds no interclub tournament. The Kansas City Public Parks Association is one of the eight members and is allowed one vote.

Pittsburg has a very active tennis association of 14 clubs and holds interclub tournaments. Milwaukee has a district association of eight clubs and belongs to the Western Lawn Tennis Association.

Washington, D. C., is active in interclub play. There are three leagues there, the Departmental League, the Suburban Tennis League and the Washington Tennis Association. The latter is a district body and the Dumbarton Club, its interclub champion, defeated the Holmead Club of the Suburban League last season for the club championship of Washington, D. C. The Washington Tennis Association has a membership of eight clubs.

County League Schedule.

Today's games in the St. Louis County Baseball League are as follows: Pond at Altheim, University City vs. Creve Coeur, Liberty vs. Maplewood and Vinita Park vs. Pershing.

No Objection to Title Fight in New Jersey, Governor Declares

Soldier Burke to Box Heitzenroeder

Chicagoan Substituted for Indian Frank Foster, Who Has a Broken Ankle.

Roger Cornell of the National Sporting Club announced yesterday, that Soldier Jim Burke of Chicago would meet Herman Heitzenroeder, the local heavyweight, in the feature bout of the club's program at the armory, Monday evening.

Heitzenroeder was scheduled to meet Indian Frank Foster of Kansas City, but the latter boxer suffered a broken ankle during a workout Friday.

According to Cornell, Burke's record insures that the program will in no way be hurt by the substitution. He is authority for the information that the Chicagoan has fought Bob Martin to a draw, holds one decision in two meetings with Bob Roper and has outpointed Hugh Walker.

BROWNS RELEASE TODT TO TULSA AGGREGATION

Bob Quinn, business manager of the Browns, announced last night that Phil Todt, the St. Louis boy, had been released to the Tulsa club and would depart to join his new mates Tuesday. Quinn said Todt was glad to go as he will get a chance to play regularly. Pitcher Lukanovic also has been released to Tulsa.

Infielder Payton has been given his unconditional release.

One of 3 Cities In New Jersey to Get Title Fight

Jersey City, Atlantic City and Newark Mentioned in Dempsey-Carpentier Announcement.

BOUT TO BE HELD JULY 2

Under New Jersey Laws a Decision Cannot Be Given After the Contest.

NEW YORK, April 9.—With the long awaited official announcement today that the Dempsey-Carpentier heavyweight championship bout would be fought in the State of New Jersey on the afternoon of July 2, interest among local ring followers turned to the probable place of the contest and the training plans of the principals.

Efforts to obtain a definite statement from Promoter Tex Rickard as to the site of the contest were without success. He refused to commit himself as to Newark, Atlantic City, or Jersey City, the three sites mentioned in his announcement. He said he had received favorable offers from all three cities and would personally inspect the locations suggested before he would be in a position to make a final decision. It is expected he will devote the coming week to an examination of the plots offered and announce his selection within the next 10 days.

Jersey City Favored.

While there has been nothing official upon which to base the report it appears to be the general opinion among those who have followed the match negotiations that Jersey City will be the ultimate choice. This is based upon Rickard's repeated assertions that he desired to stage the bout in or as near to New York City as possible, owing to the large population from which to draw his patronage. Between Newark and Jersey City there is little choice in either time or travel conditions, but the distance to Atlantic City and the fact that accommodations may be hard to get over the Fourth of July holidays may militate against the seashore resort.

It was this desire to locate the bout close to a large center of population which caused the ultimate turning down of several excellent offers from points in Canada, Maryland and Western states. The decision to hold the contest in New Jersey, however, develops several interesting points which are already causing discussion among boxing authorities. Under the New Jersey boxing laws no decision can be given at the termination of the bout.

Would Have to Score "Kayo."

Consequently, the only way in which Carpentier could win the world's title would be to knock out Dempsey inside the stipulated 12 rounds permitted under the State code or for the champion to lose his title by a foul. No matter how much Carpentier might batter Dempsey around during the entire 12 rounds, if the latter were on his feet at the close of the 36 minutes of actual boxing he would still be champion from a technical ring standpoint.

As the New Jersey Legislature has adjourned and cannot be reconvened except upon call by the State executive, no changes in the regulations are likely. While Rickard refused to make any comparison of the fighting ability of the two pugilists he said he did not think the inability to render an official decision, as would have been the case had the bout been held in New York State, would have the slightest effect on the attendance. He confidently predicted the attendance would be the largest that ever witnessed a championship ring battle.

Applications for Seats.

Applications for seats have been accumulating for some weeks without regard to the possible site for the ring, which Rickard attributed to the extraordinary interest aroused in the first really international heavyweight bout in several decades.

Another unusual angle lies in the fact that the two boxers are matched on a percentage basis, instead of the flat sums which it has been Rickard's custom to pay in the past. With Dempsey and Carpentier drawing 60 per cent of the gate receipts it is considered likely that their share will be larger than the $127,000 paid to Willard and Dempsey or the $101,000 awarded to Johnson and Jeffries when they boxed under Rickard's arrangement at Reno in 1910.

The contract as originally drawn agreed to a sum of $300,000 to Dempsey and Carpentier, and it is reasonable to suppose the heavyweights would not have assented to a change to a percentage basis, even though impressed with the general protest against the size of the purse, unless they felt that their share of the receipts would exceed any former guarantee. The agreement that Dempsey is to receive the larger share of the boxers' gate percentage, win, lose or draw, is in line with the former wording of the contract.

Dempsey to Start East.

SEATTLE, Wash., April 9.—Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, who has been appearing at a local vaudeville house this week, will complete his theatrical contract tonight and leave tomorrow for the East to begin training for his match July 2 with Georges Carpentier, heavyweight champion of Europe. He will be accompanied by Teddy Hayes, his secretary; Terry Keller, a sparring partner, and "Bud" Ridley, claimant to the Pacific Coast featherweight championship.

Hoppe Ends Tour; Willing to Play Horemans in Fall

Tournament or Match Conditions Must, However, Conform to Champion's Plans.

BELGIAN NOT IN LINE

Young Jake Schaefer Really Deserves First Crack at Balkline Cue Honors.

That Willie Hoppe, balkline billiard champion for 16 years, and Edouard Horemans, the Belgian seeker after the American's title, will clash next fall is a matter dependent on two considerations, according to the champion's manager, R. B. Benjamin, who was in the city yesterday. Hoppe's six months annual tour closed Friday night in Springfield, Ill.

According to Benjamin the two ways in which the rivals can get together are as follows:

In an invitation tournament to which the leading players of this and other countries are eligible.

In a match which Hoppe will consent to play next fall, some time before his regular annual tour starts.

Benjamin explained his position in substance as follows:

"The Belgian is not eligible to compete in the United States national tourney, and so a special tournament will be necessary, if they are to meet in this form of competition. Hoppe would not consent to the Belgian's entry in the United States event for the reason that the tourney is national, and not open; furthermore, Hoppe has won two legs on the trophy and expects to win the third leg and permanent possession next fall. He will, therefore, object if Horemans' name is mentioned as an entrant in this event.

All the Stars Entered.

"But we think a tournament in which Schaefer, Cochran, Horemans, Morningstar, Sutton and Hoppe are entered would be representative of the world's greatest strength, and I for one would be willing to put up a purse of $10,000 if allowed to handle such an event in my own way. Or, if the Brunswicke-Balke people will put up a similar amount, Hoppe will enter their tournament, if it is played under the customary American conditions.

"As for a match with Horemans, Hoppe has always been willing to play that, but as champion he wants to dictate a few conditions. He prefers a short match of 1000 points for a very obvious reason. It is this:

"That in a six-day event the match would fall flat if either player took a big early lead. Billiard fans could not be expected to come any distance and hang around a week to see the finish. But for two 500-point blocks, played in one day, they might come a long way because a definite result would be quickly reached.

"As for Hoppe having the best chance in a short event, it is well known in all sporting affairs that the veteran and the regular is the one who is safeguarded by the protracted contest, whereas the novice is the one who has the opportunity in the short dash. Sprint races produce more surprises than distance races, which are run from scratch.

Received $42 for Title Match.

"If we play a match, Hoppe will insist that a real money side wager be put up for the simple reason that gate receipts are uncertain in the billiard title match world. We played a championship before a packed house in the Astor Hotel ball room, New York and Hoppe's share of the profits was $42. Surely a 16-year champion is entitled to a better return than that.

"The manufacturing company that has been exploiting billiards wants a champion to play for practically nothing. It puts up no sum of consequence for any title, but lets the player take all the risk. At the same time it fosters gambling by demanding that the candidates play for side bets.

"Horemans really has no right to challenge Hoppe until he clears himself of the stain of having been beaten by Schaefer and Cochran, both of whom have for several years been easy for Hoppe. We have a reasonable right to concede Schaefer a better challenging position than Horemans, because of his victory over the Belgian.

"Hoppe, in fact, is greater than ever. While Horemans was averaging 50 in defeating Cochran in their last match, Hoppe has been almost doubling this in exhibitions, on strange tables, without any opportunity of practice.

"Hoppe's recent tour netted him wonderful returns financially as well as in his averages. In the six months we have been on the road Hoppe has seldom made less than $120 net a week. He has missed but three days since Oct. 11. Of course we will tour again, next year, and the challenges and matches will have to be determined during the summer, so that he can get clear of tournaments and matches in time to start his tour not later than Nov. 1."

AMATEUR BOXERS WILL COMPETE THIS WEEK

The first Municipal Athletic Association boxing tournament will be held at the South Broadway A. C. next Friday and Saturday nights. The boys will weigh in and draw for pairings Thursday. There are 25 entrants in five classes—flyweight, bantam, feather, middle and lightweight.

Walter Heisner and Judges Hall and Taylor are in charge of the tournament. Gold and silver medals will be given to the athletes. An admission of 50 cents will be charged and the money will be used to send the best boy in the tourney to the next national A. A. U. tournament.

Billy Evans Expects Yankees to Make Strong Bid for A. L. Flag

Major League Umpire Analyzes Pennant Prospects of Various Clubs—Believes Connie Mack Will Get Out of the Cellar This Season.

By Billy Evans.

American League's Premier Umpire.

WILL Cleveland be able to repeat in the American League?

What are the chances of the New York Yankees to win the pennant? Are there any dark horses in the Johnson circuit liable to upset the dope of the experts?

These and hundreds of other questions are being discussed by baseball fans the country over. The teams are on the mark waiting for the word. What are the chances of the clubs? Here is the way they impress me:

No matter what club wins the American League pennant in 1921 the opposition will be stiffer than in 1920. Every team in the American League, except the Boston club, will present a stronger front. Boston finished fifth last year with a percentage under .500. The club has been weakened through trades since then, so it looks as if Boston was doomed to finish farther down in the second division. Manager Duffy may have his troubles keeping out of the cellar berth. Hugh Duffy knows baseball and has proven his worth as a leader, but Hugh must demonstrate that he is a "miracle man" to get anywhere in 1921.

Athletics Look Better.

Of one thing I am pretty certain as far as the American League is concerned, and that is the Athletics won't finish last. Connie Mack has clung to that position for years, while he has experimented in his efforts to build up a new team. I think Connie is bound to start on the road to somewhere in 1921. Mack has the nucleus of a great club. He has a formidable pitching staff. Few clubs in the league can boast of a better one. He has a wonderful catcher in Perkins. In Joe Dugan he has a brilliant third baseman. In Jimmy Dykes he has a second sacker who will hold his own with any and need bow only to Eddie Collins. Short and first base are the biggest problems for Connie. This chap Galloway has great possibilities. If he finds himself, and last year his greatest fault was lack of confidence in his ability, Connie will more than make trouble. Griffin at first will field with the best of them. The outfield measures up to the American League standard. In Styles and Walker, Mack has two young backstops who are worthy assistants to Perkins. Yes, sir, Connie Mack, in my opinion, will get "somewhere" in 1921, and that "somewhere" won't be last place.

Cleveland has an excellent chance to repeat. Speaker has proven his worth as manager. His ball club is a well rounded aggregation that does not bulge with stars. It is one of the most harmonious ball clubs in the league, inspired with the success that it had in 1920 in copping the American League pennant and the world's championship, the club will start this season with plenty of confidence. Better yet, it won't be an overconfident aggregation, for Speaker isn't the type of a leader who will let his club develop overconfidence.

Depends on Pitching.

In a measure, Cleveland's chances will hinge on its pitching, but any club to win must get the pitching. Jim Bagby won 31 games last year, a remarkable performance. It would be asking a great deal of Jim to win 30 games in 1921. However, he should win 20 or more, and a pitcher who takes down 20 victories is stepping some. To make up for the difference that may exist in Bagby's wins for 1920 and 1921, Cleveland can look to George Uhle and Walter Mails. Uhle won only four games in 1920. He will win a lot more than that this season, or I miss my guess. Stanley Coveleskie won 24 games last year. Covie can be expected to do as well this season because he is a great pitcher.

Walter Mails is the question point in the Cleveland pitching staff. Mails won seven games for Cleveland after joining the club late in August, 1920. He just about saved the bacon for the Indians. Mails has demonstrated he has the stuff. Likewise he has plenty of nerve. An occasional lapse in his control seems to be his only fault, yet he managed to emerge from a number of tight situations last summer by pitching himself out of trouble, after loss of control put him in bad. Mails should prove a consistent winner for Cleveland, and if he does, the Indians will be hard to beat.

Much interest centers in the New York club. For years the Yankees have been regarded as a club that boasted lots of power but sadly lacked speed. During the winter Manager Huggins has attempted by trades to remedy the lack of speed and seems to have succeeded to a great extent. Looking over the line-up of the Yankees it must be admitted Huggins has a powerful club under his direction.

A Club of Many Stars.

New York has a good chance to win in 1921. If the club does win, it will be a feather in the cap of Huggins. Unlike the Cleveland club, the New York team has a number of outstanding stars, prominent among them being the great Ruth. On this ball club there are a number of players of various temperaments. In some ways the New York club reminds one of the old Boston Red Sox. When the Red Sox were doing things there were any number of stars on the club, but Bill Carrigan was the type of leader who was able to weld that team into a harmonious aggregation. If Huggins can do the same with the Yankees of 1921, he will be a trouble maker all the way. The club has the hitting and pitching and seems to have added enough speed to get it out of the slow class. If Manager Huggins can keep harmony and spirit on the team, the Yankees must be regarded as dangerous. Huggins has a pretty good ball club, and the task that confronts him is to win with it.

Washington, St. Louis and Detroit are all formidable, although on paper I would hardly pick any one of them to win the pennant. These three clubs will make things interesting and it wouldn't be surprising to see Washington or St. Louis upset some of the calculations already made on the outcome of the race. Washington will be a much improved ball club. Joe Judge and Stanley Harris compare favorably with any of the first and second sackers in the American League. The team is well fortified on that side of the diamond. Shortstop is the one position that may prove troublesome. With that position well taken care of, Washington would not have a weak spot. The condition of Walter Johnson is, of course, a matter of great concern to the Nationals.

Cobb and the Tigers.

At Detroit, the main interest centers in the success Cobb will have as manager. There will be nothing of the happy medium about Cobb as manager. He is of the type and temperament that will be a big success or a failure, and I am inclined to the belief that he will be a success. If he fails as a manager, it will be his first failure in baseball, for at all other things pertaining to the national pastime, he has been pre-eminently successful. It will mean much to the American League if Cobb goes big, because it will give the organization two outstanding stars like Speaker and Cobb as great managers. Detroit will hardly finish seventh in 1921.

Lee Fohl will get the best there is out of the St. Louis club, and the team has considerable possibilities. The loss of Joe Gedeon will be felt. Gedeon was a great ball player. His worth was never appresciated as a second sacker. The big problem for Fohl will be his infield. It is a rather uncertain proposition. Fohl is not the demonstrative type of manager. He works in a quiet way, but always has harmony on his ball club, and the desire to win, and that is the big task for any manager.

The Chicago Americans, one of the greatest clubs in history as it lined up in 1919, will be only a shadow of itself if it steps to the front in 1921. A lot of people are conceding last place to the Sox, but I think it will be hard to keep them from finishing lower than fifth and they may break into the first division. A ball club that has Schalk, Collins, Faber, Kerr and Hooper is far from a minor league aggregation.

Cleveland and New York seem to be hogging a bit of the spotlight as they get away, but it is a long distance to the finish in October. You can never tell in baseball.

PADDOCK MAY RUN ON EASTERN TRACK APRIL 23

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 9.—Charles W. Paddock, Olympic sprint champion, who recently at Berkeley, Cal., finished the 220-yard dash in 20 4-5 seconds, will run in some meet April 23, the coach at the University of Southern California, where Paddock is a student, said today. Two Eastern track meets are being considered for his entrance.

Track meets at Red Lands, Cal., and Seattle, Wash., where the University of California is to compete, or the relays at Drake University, Des Moines, Ia., may see the Olympic champion run. If Paddock goes to Des Moines he also will enter the Pennsylvania relay at Philadelphia, April 30.

Cubs Release Infielder.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 9.—Harold Leathers, a shortstop for the Chicago National League club, was released tonight to the local American Association team.

W. G. A. URGES CLUBS TO BECOME ACTIVE MEMBERS

CHICAGO, April 9.—Directors of the Western Golf Association, through Secretary W. W. Harless, tonight sent letters to all clubs of the association who are allied members of the United States Golf Association urging that those clubs vote to become active members of the U. S. G. A., and thereby gain a vote in the control of that body. It was decided at a conference last winter that allied members could become active members provided that 51 per cent decided to take advantage of the offer.

Kinney Has a Job.

SCOTTS BLUFF, Neb., April 9.—Walter Kinney, who was one of Connie Mack's pitchers last year, has signed with the Scotts Bluff team of the Mid-West League, it was announced today. Kinney has been barred from organized baseball for having jumped his contract with the Philadelphia Americans last year.

Ross Will Enter Formidable Pair In Kentucky Derby

Star Voter and Oriole Respected —Leonardo II to Head Simms Stable Entry.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 9.—Leonardo II, who will be one of the choices in the Kentucky Derby; Mulciber and Bon Homme, all three from the E. W. Simms stable, which has wintered at Hot Springs, will be shipped here Monday, according to dispatches received today, and it is planned to start the trio as the stable entry in the big race.

Despite this array, horsemen here incline to the belief that the stable of Commander J. K. L. Ross, with Star Voter and Oriole, will have a more formidable entry. Star Voter, who finished second in last year's Futurity with 127 pounds up, is said to be showing excellent work over a fast track, while Oriole can hold his own with any of them in case the going is muddy.

Oriole was probably the best high-class "mudder" among the 2-year-olds of last year. He fairly reveled in a heavy track and on such footing he could meet the best youngsters of the season. In his second start of last year, at Louisville, he had his first trial over a muddy course and led for the greater part of the race, but was beaten, at even weights, by United Verde. He ran five times over a fast track after this, winning once, then encountered a muddy track and easily beat Pluribus and a good field at even weights. In his next race, at Empire City, it was again muddy and he won in a gallop, beating Brigadier General and a fair field. He was beaten over a fast track at Saratoga, but in his next start, on muddy footing and carrying 119 pounds, he won easily, showing an astonishing early burst of speed.

Victory for Leonardo II.

The Hopeful stakes were run on the closing day of the Saratoga meeting and although it rained the night before, a hot sun and a brisk wind dried the track by post time. Oriole made a bold bid here, but Leonardo II won with Prudery second and Oriole third, the three being so close together that it was one of the best finishes of the year.

Muskallonge, the Meelick-Gay and Festive colt, owned by "Bud" Fisher, the cartoonist, is going to be heavily played by the local element which always follows candidates who have made a good showing at winter racing. Despite the fact that winter racing has been shown to affect a horse's performance later, there is always this optimistic crowd of admirers who think that because a colt has defeated the rather mediocre fields that compete at New Orleans, he is abel to hold his own with any horses in the country. This same tendency was noticed when racing flourished on the Pacific Coast. A lot of 2-year-olds were sent East every spring with a reputation of being world beaters because they had cleaned up everything in sight on the coast. Few of them ever stirred the turf world when they reached the New York tracks.

Muskallonge, however, is undoubtedly a colt of high class. In eleven starts at Latonia, Kenilworth and New Orleans, he won seven races, was second three times and third only once. Some of his best races were run against older horses to whom he was conceding weight. He beat a fast field of winter sprinters when he defeated Tableau d'Honneur, George Starr and Minute Man toward the end of the Fair Grounds meeting and one of his most sterling performances was when he ran Columbia Tennessee to a nose at six furlongs in the good time of 1:12.

Usual Number of Dark Horses.

This local sentiment in favor of a colt is a good thing for the pari-mutual betting, as it boosts the odds on other candidates. So every follower of the game inclines to a liberal attitude in discussing candidates in the hotel lobbies here—if the other fellow intends to bet on his candidate, it means just that much extra money in the pool.

Of course, the usual number of dark horses are entered. Bennington, a Fair Play colt from the Nash stable, who started but once last year at Saratoga, and then ran third to Blowing Bubbles and Nohant, is said to be showing great form. Flying Cloud is the name of a colt by Wrack, entered in the name of Max Hirsch. This horse started but once as a 2-year-old and fell on that occasion. He is said to have shown good form in his workouts.

John Hachmeister, whose genial face was familiar to all St. Louis race goers during the days when racing flourished at the Fair Grounds and Delmar, when he served as clerk of the scales, has a colt named McGoodwin entered. It must be admitted that McGoodwin has never proved a sensation as yet. Still, he has won two races and, on the last occasion, scored a victory over the mile route in 1:39 4-5 on a track that was not at its best. Hachmeister is likely to start him for sentimental reasons, if nothing else, simply to have his colors represented in the big race.

No really large wager has yet been reported on the Derby. When the big Eastern owners arrive a few days before the race it is likely that slashing will be noticeable in the prevailing odds.

Pal Moore to Box Lynch.

CHICAGO, April 9.—Pal Moore, Memphis bantamweight, was matched today to meet Joe Lynch, the bantamweight champion, in a 12-round contest at Louisville, May 6, the night before the Kentucky Derby.

SAND LOT BASEBALL BOARD GOES ON RECORD AGAINST BLACK SOX

CLEVELAND, O., April 9.—The National Baseball Federation, the governing board of sand lot baseball, today went on record as opposing the "Black Sox" as the organization of former White Sox players under indictment is called.

"Any team affiliated with the federation which books a game with this outfit faces being placed on the ineligible list and barred from playing other amateur or semipro teams in our organization," J. F. Potts, secretary, said.

More than 100 amateur baseball teams are affiliated with the body. Hundreds of industrial teams are also lined up. The board of directors will meet here Saturday, April 16.

Winters vs. Belleville.

Pete Winters, whose team won the Empire League pennant in the Municipal Association last year, will send a team of all-stars to Belleville this afternoon to play the B's. Jim Elliot, who will join Rockford next week, will hurl against Henderson. The Winters lineup will include several minor leaguers who have not yet joined their teams. Dieutch will catch, Buck Corcoran will play short and Milton Hollocher third base.

Otto Stein is Winner.

Otto Stein won the Washington Sweepstakes bowling tourney last night with 659. Henry Rose, 590, was second, and C. W. Tavenner, 535, third.

New York Polo Team Wins.

CLEVELAND, O., April 9.—The New York Athletic Club water polo team defeated the Cleveland Y. M. C. A. team by a score of 18 to 0 here tonight.

Sprint Stars to Compete in Penn Meet This Month

Paddock, Seurin, Simmons, Loesch, Massengale and Others in 100-Yard Race.

PHILADELPHIA, April 9.—East and West will stage a struggle for athletic supremacy at the University of Pennsylvania relay carnival here April 29 and 30, it was said at the university tonight. In the special events, it is almost certain that Paddock of California, Olympic sprint champion, will enter the 100-yard competition as the Pacific slope's star contender against Seurin, the French sprinter.

Simmons and Loesch of Michigan, Deering of Nebraska and Massengale of Missouri will be here also. The East will have, to oppose these men: Lever of Pennsylvania, Lecaney of Lafayette and F. Gourdin of Harvard.

In the 120-yard hurdle the East will have Thompson of Dartmouth, world's record holder, and Olympic and intercollegiate champion, and Barron of Pennsylvania State, the American champion. The West will have Knollin of Wisconsin, Gallagher of Kansas and Yount of Redlands, Cal.; Desch of Notre Dame is one of the favorites for the quarter-mile hurdle, and Anderson of Wisconsin; Kilby of Redlands and Belding of Iowa State are also entered, leading the experts to predict that the West will take the event.

The experts also pick the West to win the hop, skip and jump, and because of the entry of Jenne of Washington State they are inclined to the same forecast for the pole vault. The broad jump is doubtful and in the high jump the East is favored, but by a slight margin.

Harvard, it was announced here tonight, will send a larger force to the carnival than for several years. A team will appear in the sprint medley April 29 and another in the 1-mile relay championship the following day. Harvard will also have several men in the special events.

Municipal Soccer Champions Held to Draw by All-Stars

Penalty Kick by Cronins Gives Keen Kutters Only Score at Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 9.—The Keen Kutters, municipal soccer champions of St. Louis, were held to a 1 to 1 tie here this afternoon by a club of all stars. The performance of the Keen Kutters against a picked club and a slow field, which the Memphians were accustomed to, was remarkable.

The Keen Kutters passed in wizardly fashion, working the ball to the left and right wings. However, beautiful backfield interference and the best goal-tending ever witnessed in Memphis on part of the all-stars' goalie prevented many well-placed kicks going through, as six shots were made into the all-star goalie's hands in the first half and two wicked shots bounded against the goal posts.

The first goal came 28 minutes after the game started, when B. Bishop fouled at the 12-yard line. Cronin, who kicked from the penalty line drove savagely to the goal bar in the center, the ball bounding through when the all-stars' goalie attempted to save.

The playing of the all-stars was decidedly better in the second half, when Stafford of the all-stars got the tieing goal through on a cross from the wings, which he quickly shot through from the 15-yard line on a seemingly impossible shot.

During the last few minutes of the game the Keen Kutters threatened several times. However, the unusually good goal-tending on the part of the all-stars thwarted the many chances of the Kutters for a break of the tie goal.

The general opinion prevails in Memphis that St. Louis has sent the fastest aggregation of soccerists here who have ever been witnessed in action in Memphis, and the individual work of Cady, Lange, Hitchcock and Weber featured today's contest.

Tomorrow the K. K. team goes against the Memphis champion Y. M. I. Club.

The lineup:

Keen Kutters.	Position.	All-Stars.
Diel	Goal	D. Walsh
Hitchcock	Left back	E. Bishop
Humpert	Right back	E. Bishop
Lange	Center half	J. Burnett
Weber	Right half	J. Ackerman
Cady	Outside left	Griffith
Ryser	Center full	Stafford
Josties	Inside right	Christy
Watkins	Outside right	Chisholm

MERRIMAN BEATS WHITE 9 UP AND 8 IN FINAL OF NORTH-SOUTH TOURNEY

PINEHURST, N. C., April 9.—B. P. Merriman of the Country Club of Waterbury won the North and South amateur golf championship here today, defeating Gardiner White of New York, 9 up and 8 to play in the 36-hole final round.

Merriman had a medal round of 73 in the morning and was 8 up. White took 83 and did not win a hole. White held Merriman even for the first nine in the afternoon, both taking 38 shots to the turn, but Merriman won the tenth and match when he got a four to White's five. White drove into a trap and had to play his second safe.

Merriman has played the sand greens here better than any other amateur this season and in his match today he seldom failed to get down in two from off the edge of the greens. He rolled his approach shots up close with a putter, whereas White attempted to pitch to the pin and could not get near the cup. He also pushed a number of putts off the line, failing to calculate the slopes of the greens and the wind.

Merriman takes the title which was held for a year by Francis Ouimet of Boston. Ouimet did not defend his title. The Waterbury golfer was captain of the 1910 Yale University golf team and won the Connecticut State amateur title in 1908 and 1909. He qualified for the national championship at Garden City in 1913 and at Wheaton in 1909. He has not played in the national since 1913, but will enter this year at St. Louis.

JAY GOULD RETAINS COURT TENNIS TITLE

BOSTON, April 9.—Jay Gould of New York again made a successful defense of his national amateur court tennis championship, defeating C. Suydam Cutting of New York in the challenge round on the courts of the Tennis and Racquet Club, the scores were, 7—5, 6—1, 6—0.

Cutting, winner of the championship tournament of the early week, was within an ace of winning the first set from Gould, an accomplishment which followers of the court tennis game today say, has been rare in Gould's court experience. Railroad service matched railroad servie from either side of the court, Cutting playing the champion frequently at a disadvantage. The games went to five all and Cutting gained two of the four points necessary to win the sixth game and set, but Gould marshalled his resources and strength and strategy, went ahead and won.

The momentum carried Gould through the second set to a 6-1 victory with Cutting's strokes and service losing much of the severity that marked the opening set.

In the third set the champion teightened his play and did not allow a single game to Cutting, whose stroke by that time had lost its cut. Cutting announced that he would play in the British court tennis championship.

Roller Skaters Qualify

Six roller skaters, Roland Cioni, Rodney Peters, Jack Woodworth, Eddie Krahn, Oliver Walters and Hobart Palston, have qualified for the championship race to be held tomorrow night at the Palladium. Polston won last night's two-mile heat, with Wilson second, Clarke third and Johnson fourth in 6 minutes 21 seconds. Clarke and Fleming won the one-mile races.

Tom Gibbons and Greb, Two Real Fighters, After Dempsey's Title

Former, From Being Known Merely as "Mike's Brother," Has Become a Dangerous Knockout Factor in Lightheavyweight Class—Greb Extremely Clever.

By Robert Edgren.

JACK DEMPSEY hasn't any more giants to fight, but two of three smaller men are camping on his trail. Dempsey has shown that among heavyweight speed counts more than bulk, so he can't very well bar smaller men on the ground of numanity, as some of the old time champions did.

Dempsey is to fight Georges Carpentier on July 2. Carpentier will weigh a little over 170 pounds stripped, and Dempsey's best fighting weight is 183, the weight at which he met the gigantic Willard. Dempsey beat Morris, Fulton and Willard because he was a faster man, and he could hit.

Carpentier is remarkably fast—perhaps faster even than Dempsey—and he can hit. So Carpentier may be able to beat Dempsey and take the heavyweight championship back to France. But if he doesn't, there are two Americans of about his weight who are anxious to fight Jack, and who wouldn't dodge a meeting with Carpentier at any time.

Tom Gibbons and Harry Greb are after championships. Both have been doing some remarkable fighting during the last two years. Several years ago I was talking with Mike Gibbons, who was training just then to fight Packey McFarland.

"Tom is going to be a better fighter than I ever was," said Mike. "He's better right now."

I looked Tom over and didn't agree with Mike, ascribing his enthusiasm to brotherly affection. But Tom has begun to make Mike's prophecy good. He has developed remarkable speed and hitting power, and of late has been knocking out his opponents in a round or two. He has had 65 fights and hasn't lost a decision. He has fought heavyweights; Miske three times and Harry Greb three times, winning the first fight when Greb was a novice. This was seven years ago.

Tom has won three of his last four fights with knockouts. Very quick knockouts at that, fighting and winning much in the Dempsey manner. He fought Tony Melchoir and knocked him out in 25 seconds. Tony was so well satisfied that he retired from boxing. Incidentally Tony was no slouch as a fighter, being formerly the pride of Jimmy Dime's stable—and Jimmy Dime has a reputation for picking good ones.

Tribute to Reich.

Gibbons knocked out Al Reich in two minutes, 33 seconds.

"I never saw a finer athlete in my life," Gibbons told me. "When I got into the ring with Reich and looked him over I wondered how I'd ever put him down. I'm just six feet tall and weigh 175 pounds—just a little more than Carpentier—and Reich was three or four inches taller and weighed 219.

"He was wonderfully built and looked in magnificent condition. His waist was small and his shoulders and back as wide as a door. He looked fit to knock out any man in the world. I knocked him down and he got up gamely enough, and went after me. I hit him on the chin with a left hook and knocked him out. My left arm used to be smaller than my right, because I'm naturally right-handed, but I have boxed so much that my left is bigger and stronger than my right, now, and I think I hit harder with my left."

Tom next knocked out Paul Sampson in New York. Sampson was a tough bird. He never had been flattened before, and he had fought a lot of good men. He fought Jack Johnson 20 rounds in Mexico. He fought Greb, Tunney and others of like class. He worked five weeks with Jack Dempsey when Jack was training to fight Brennan, and he stuck through the five weeks with Dempsey, who works out the way he fights. Dempsey thought well enough of Sampson's ability to pay him $35 a day for his work as a sparring partner, which is nearly a record in itself.

Gibbons knocked out Sampson in just about the way he knocked out Melchoir, except that it took a few more punches to put away the blond iron man. In the Melchoir fight Tom struck only two blows. Melchoir was on his feet six seconds, on the floor 19. He knocked Melchoir down with a left, gave him time to get up and rush, and, stepping aside to let him go past, clipped him on the chin with a wicked left hook that finished the fight with no further need for action.

He served Sampson the same way. The result of this fight was a surprise, Sampson having been picked to stay to the limit.

Gibbons claims that he is beginning to find it hard to get matches. He says Jack Brennan has refused an offer of $10,000 to fight him in Cleveland. Bob Martin, according to Gibbons, refused an offer of $7500, also made by Promoter Tommy McGinty of Cleveland.

"Would you be anxious to fight Dempsey?" I asked Tom.

"That's the ambition of my life," said Gibbons.

Veteran of 100 Battles.

The other light contender who wants to fight Jack is Harry Greb. Greb is well known as a great fighter of his weight, a tough, rugged fellow with a record of about 300 fights in the ring. He is the best man of his weight in America, and when Carpentier came here to show what he could do Greb was suggested as a suitable opponent.

However, Bat Levinsky, a has-been, was seleted. It might not have been dangerous to match the great Frenchman against Greb, but at least Greb would have given him a fight which old broken-down Levinsky didn't.

Greb is a hard hitter. He knocked out Gunboat Smith in two rounds a while ago. He claims that he never lost a decision fight, and the only knockout scored against him was landed by Joe Chip eight years ago, when Greb was just beginning to battle. He afterward beat Chip when he had a little more experience. His first fight with Chip was only his third or fourth fight in a ring.

As a fighter Greb is very much like Jack Dillon, when Jack was known as the "Giant Killer." He looks like Jack and fights much as Jack used to. He has beaten Dillon, Levinsky, Brennan (15-round decision), Bob Roper, Jack Doyle and Jeff Smith, as well as innumerable men of less fame. He fought Brennan three times, and they were all tough fights. Greb thinks Brennan about the best man he has met, and points to the fight Brennan gave Dempsey as an argument that he has a chance with Dempsey himself.

Incidentally Greb trained with Dempsey at Fifty-seventh street, and at Cedar Point, when Dempsey fought Miske. He believes that he can hold his own with Dempsey any time and perhaps outpoint him.

Besides hungering for a chance at the heavyweight title, Greb, who has a full share of pugnacity, longs for a chance to knock out Johnny Wilson and become middleweight title holder. His manager, George Engle, thinks Wilson would be "duck soup" for Greb.

"I'll post $5000 as a forfeit for Greb to make 160 pounds at 3 o'clock for Wilson any time Wilson will make the match," says Engel. "That's the official middleweight limit recognized now, and Greb can make it. I've never had him make weight for a fight, but he fights at from 162 to 163 pounds, so 160 in the afternoon would be an easy weight for him. I wouldn't put up any $5000 if it wasn't easy."

There are other good fighters scattered around the country, although very few in the middleweight and the heavyweight classes. Unless Willard is given a return match with Dempsey the champion could hardly pick a better oponent—if he comes through the Carpentier battle with his title—than Tom Gibbons. And if any one in the country could give Johnny Wilson a tough argument it is this lad, Harry Greb.

Either match would draw a few barrels of gate money.

The second match of the series between the Belleville Revolver and Rifle Club and the St. Louis Police Revolver Club takes place Wednesday on the range of the St. Louis Police Revolver Club. This match consists of 10 men on a side, 25 shots per man at 20 yards, five highest scores for each team to count. The St. Louis Police and Revolver Club won the first match and the Belleville boys claim that they are coming over to trim them.

TWO MEN OF SAME DESCRIPTION ROB 2 TRUCK DRIVERS

Chauffeurs Report Theft of Their Machines and Collections, Amounting to $60 and $35.

OTHER DAYTIME HOLDUPS REPORTED

Two Young Men Lock Proprietor of Saloon and Customer in Icebox at 3:35 P. M.

A series of daytime holdups and other robberies were reported to the police yesterday afternoon. In one case two young men of the same description robbed two truck drivers of their money and trucks. One of the trucks was recovered later, having been abandoned apparently after the robbers had left it to board a truck they had stolen an hour earlier.

At 2:30 p. m. George Martin, 19 years old, of 4536 Newberry terrace, a chauffeur for the Western Tailoring Co., was making his last delivery at 3745 Cook avenue when two young men, both armed, held him up and compelled him to get into the truck with them. They made him drive to Spring and Cook avenues where they ordered him into the back of the machine, drove a half block farther where they robbed him of $80 in collections and made him get off the truck. They took the truck east in Cook avenue.

An hour later two young men answering the same description jumped on a truck load of buttermilk driven by Rupert White of 3437 Bell avenue, near 4200 North Market street and after robbing him of $35 made him drive into an alley where they compelled him to leave them. They drove away with the truck but abandoned it at Goode avenue and North Market street, where they are supposed by the police to have had the first truck parked.

Two Men Lock Saloon Keeper and Customer in Ice Box at 3:35 P. M.

Two young men with revolvers entered the grocery and saloon of William J. Kupfer of 2500 Howard street, at 3:35 p. m. and held up Kupfer and a customer, John Murphy, 2518 Howard street. They made both lie down while they rifled the cash register of $60 and some keys, after which they locked both Kupfer and Murphy in the ice box and departed. Mrs. Kupfer heard his husband's pounding on the refrigerator door 15 minutes later and released the two.

Samuel Evans, a salesman of Alton, Ill., a negro, was held up and robbed of $250 near a lot at 1715 Morgan street by two negroes a little after noon, he reported to the police. He said he had been standing at Eighteenth and Market streets when the negroes asked him, "Isn't your name Sam?" When he told them it was, they asked him to take a walk. When near the lot, he said, one of them asked him for change for a $50 bill, and when he started to make the change one of the men snatched his money and ran. When he started in pursuit, he said, the second man drew a revolver and held him until the first man had escaped.

Two Daytime Safe Robberies.

A safe in the office of the Battefeld Marble and Tile Co., 510 Chouteau avenue, was broken open early yesterday and 80 cents in stamps taken. Another safe in the same neighborhood was robbed earlier in the day of $200, and the combination was knocked off another.

Mrs. Viola January, 35, of 3951 Ohio avenue, wife of Wilfred January, night foreman at the South Broadway sheds of the United Railways Co., was struck on the head and dazed by a burglar whom she discovered in her home at 2 a. m. yesterday. He is supposed by the police to be the same acrobatic burglar they chased three hours later in the morning for an hour after he had been discovered in another house in the neighborhood. Mrs. January reported she was awakened by the man standing at the side of her bed and when she started to scream he hit her with what seemed to be a flashlight. She screamed against and he choked her and fled, taking her purse containing 70 cents. He got into the home through an insecure window.

Burglar Climbs in Coal Chute.

A burglar climbed down the coal chute from the sidewalk into the basement of the saloon of Charles E. Kellogg, 328 South Compton avenue, early yesterday and then up through a trap door into the barroom. Kellogg said 14,000 cigarettes and 1400 cigars valued at $216.30, four boxes of candy worth $4 and $11.30 in cash were stolen.

At the shoe store of Sol Rosenberg, 3828 Thomas street, burglars took shoes valued at $500, he reported to the police. They "jimmied" a rear door to get into the place.

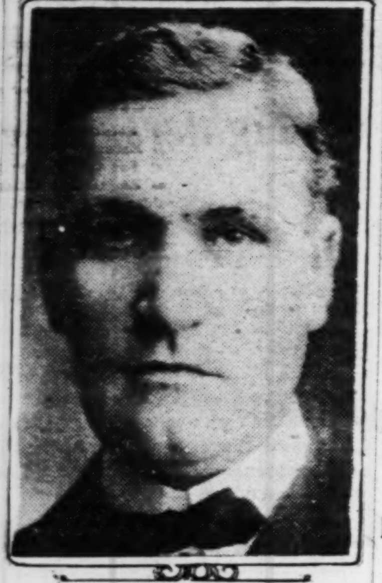
SEEKING REINSTATEMENT IN POLICE DEPARTMENT



JOHN J. KEELY

TWO WOMEN LOCKED IN ROOM FOR 3 YEARS

Exile Attributed to Charge of Linen Theft, Which Failed—Ousted by Health Agent.

By the Associated Press.

HOBOKEN, N. J., April 9. — A "scandal" developing from the theft of some hotel linen, of which she had been cleared, was given today by Mrs. Fannie Miller as the reason she and her aunt, Miss Carrie Sunderland, closed themselves in a hotel room three years ago and remained in seclusion there until yesterday, when they were ordered removed by health officials.

The theft occurred in a New York hotel, and after the exoneration the two women came here. Mrs. Miller said they voluntarily kept to themselves for one year, and that during the last two years one or the other had been sick and they had taken turns nursing each other. Miss Sunderland is in a hospital in a serious condition. She is suffering from tuberculosis.

Although reluctant to give details of her life, Mrs. Miller, who said her maiden name was McClum, told officials today that she was the granddaughter of a wealthy Topeka, Kan., man who left an estate of $500,000. The amount she received from this and other legacies, she said, amounted to about $100,000. This, with insurance left by her husband, who died several years ago, she declared to be mostly tied up by litigation.

Names of Relatives Not Learned.

The name of the former resident of Topeka, who, she said, had stopped her remittance of $50 a month several months ago. She said she had started legal proceedings against him.

Mrs. Miller was declared to be sane today and in good health. She could not return to the room in which she had exiled herself for three years, however, as the police had locked it.

The $50 a month from Kansas City, Mrs. Miller said, was her entire income, while her aunt received $150 a month. Her available assets, she added, amounted to $90 and she owed $300, most of which is due the hotel. Mrs. Miller gave her age as 45 years and her aunt's as 65.

Locked in for Three Years.

Until today the women had not left their rooms since January, 1918. They had lived on canned goods ordered by mail. Their rooms were paid for by checks thrust through a crack under the door.

The story came to light when the hotel proprietor complained to Health Commissioner Stack of the accumulation of empty cans on the fire escape. The commissioner gained admittance to the rooms only after he threatened to break down the door.

Miss Sunderland, the elder of the women, was ill in bed, suffering from tuberculosis in an advanced stage. She was taken to a hospital, where it was said she probably would not live long.

Woman Well Educated.

Mrs. Miller, who is well educated, told the police that her husband died several years ago, leaving her a large estate in stocks and bonds. She received the income from a trust but recently weekly remittances of $50 from a cousin in Kansas City had ceased.

The two women had lived entirely on milk and canned goods during the three years they kept their door locked. The only cooking they could do, she said, was over a gas jet or on the raidiators when the steam was turned on.

MOVE TO REINSTATE JOHN J. KEELY ON THE POLICE FORCE

Detective Ousted on Graft Charges in 1907, Applies for Position and Is Told to Appear for Examination.

DID NOT GET SQUARE DEAL, MILLER SAYS

Police Characters Testified Keely Shared in Proceeds of Stolen Diamond—He Vigorously Denied It.

John J. Keely of 4923 Page boulevard, who has been seeking vindication ever since he was ousted from the position of Assistant Chief of Detectives, March 11, 1907, on what he termed "trumped-up" charges, has applied for reinstatement in the Police Department. He was notified yesterday by President Miller of the Police Board that if he can pass the physical examination required his application will be considered.

"I have personally investigated the case of Keely," said President Miller last night, "and I am convinced that he did not get a square deal.

"Will he be required to pass a mental test? Well, I should say not. His past reputation as a detective speaks for itself.

In the police shakeup, following the election of Joseph Folk as Governor, when about 40 members of the Police Department, including Mathew Kiely, then Chief of Police, were dismissed from the force, and William Desmond, then Chief of Detectives, was reduced to a lieutenancy, which he later resigned. Keely was one of a group of detectives against whom charges of grafting were preferred. Stories had been related by Ollie Roberts, known in the World's Fair period as "Queen of the Badlands," and other underworld characters of the theft of approximately $1,000,000 in the World's Fair period and of division of the money with members of the police force "who protected them."

Keely Protested Innocence.

The principal witnesses against Keely were "Bud" Fawcett, a confessed thief and opium smoker, and May Harrington, a notorious shoplifter and pickpocket. They alleged that Keely had shared in the proceeds of a stolen diamond. Keely protested his innocence and referred to his record of 12 years on the force which included a list of good captures and the clearing up of many mysteries. In 1900 he was shot four times by an ex-convict, John Julian, whom he had attempted to arrest in an alley near the old Four Courts Building. For several months he lay in a hospital and still carries one of the bullets in his body.

In concluding his testimony Keely made the following statement to the Police Board:

"This charge is pretty serious. It is an outrage. I have always attended to my duty faithfully. It's true I've never arrested many women of the bad lands, because I shunned them as much as possible.

"I'd rather arrest one burglar or highway robber than 1000 women. I think I've been done a great injustice and hope some day it will be seen."

Formerly a Private Detective.

Following his dismissal from the force Keely entered the private detective business with Desmond, but retired shortly after Desmond's death several years ago.

"The business is too dirty for me," he said. "People have no idea what a private detective has to do."

Recently he has been employed as a solicitor by a sand blasting and tuckpointing company. If he is reinstated in the Police Department he will begin as a probationary patrolman at a salary of $100 a month. The position of Assistant Chief of Detectives, which now is held by William E. Rundle, pays $200 a month.

Keely applied for reinstatement soon after the new Police Board was appointed. He has been asked to appear at his leisure for physical examination.

REED CALLS PLAN OF CANCELING EUROPE'S WAR DEBT RIDICULOUS

Says Baruch's Proposition Would Appeal Only to Men More Interested in Europe Than U. S.

Senator James A. Reed stopped off in St. Louis yesterday en route from his home in Kansas City to Washington. He characterized as ridiculous the suggestion of B. M. Baruch, chairman of the American Reparations Commission, to cancel European obligations to the United States subject to renewal in the event America should become involved in another war.

"The proposition would have only the approval of men more interested in Europe than in the taxpayers of America," he said. "The only country outside of Japan with which America could become involved would be a European country. The only European country capable of making war with the United States is Great Britain, which owes us $5,000,000,000, and imagine the United States calling upon Great Britain to pay us so we could have enough money to fight her. The proposition of Baruch will have the approval of Wall street interests because the cancellation of the European indebtedness would vastly increase the solvency of their individual debtors. The suggestion is worthy of Baruch, who spent his life, before he became attached to the Wilson administration, in the gambling pits of the New York Stock Exchange. The suggestion may not be treasonable but it is on the verge of treason."

HYDE RESTORES CITIZENSHIP OF TWO FORMER CONVICTS

Three Prisoners Paroled From Penitentiary Upon Recommendation of Board of Pardons.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 9.—Gov. Hyde today restored the citizenship of two St. Louisans who had served terms in the penitentiary, and paroled three prisoners, action in all of the cases having been recommended by the Board of Pardons and Paroles.

The two St. Louisans whose citizenship was restored are Joseph Dwan, who was released in 1901 after having served five years for robbery, and who was wounded during the Argonne battle of the recent war, now employed in a rolling mill, and Frank Mueller, who was released in May, 1917, after having served two years for fourth-degree manslaughter, having killed a man in a fight over a dog.

The paroles were issued to Earsham First of Christian County, serving two years from September last on charges of burglary and larceny; David F. Plank of Dent County, serving two years from April, 1920, on charge of obtaining money under false pretenses; and Charlie W. Jones of Howell County, serving six years from April, 1918, on a charge of having stolen and cashed a $6 check.

PAY OF CLOTHING WORKERS IS PUBLICLY ARBITRATED

Request of Rochester Manufacturers for 25 Per Cent Wage Cut Is Being Discussed.

By the Associated Press.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 9.—Public arbitration of the request of Rochester clothing manufacturers that their unionized employes accept a wage reduction of 25 per cent is under way. Prof. Willard Hotchkiss, director of the National Industrial Federation, has presented statistics to show that, while the cost of living advanced 87.6 per cent between June, 1916, and June, 1920, the earnings of Rochester clothing workers advanced 160 per cent.

Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, was to present the workers' argument today against the proposed decrease. The matter then will be submitted to Dr. William M. Leiserson, impartial chairman of the Rochester clothing market, for decision.

44-HR. WEEK AGREEMENT DENIED BY TYPOTHETAE

Executive Council of National Employing Printers Issues Formal Statement.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 9.—The United Typothetae of America, as a body, has never agreed to the introduction of the 44-hour week in the printing industry, according to a statement issued today by the Executive Council of that body, in session here, as follows:

"1. The United Typothetae of America, as a body, has never agreed to the introduction of the 44-hour week in the printing industry.

"2. By resolution adopted at its annual conventions held in 1919 and 1920, the United Typothetae of America has unequivocally disapproved of any reduction in the present working hours, and recommends to its members that they resist any attempt to enforce such reduction except where such reduction has already been agreed to by contract.

"3. The closed shop divisions of the United Typothetae of America, a distinct and separate organization in itself, has never been, and could not be, empowered to represent the United Typothetae of America in any negotiations or agreement considered by the International Joint Conference Council.

"4. The Executive Council of the United Typothetae of America brands as absolutely false the statement that the United Typothetae of America is a party to any agreement made between the representatives of any printing trades union and any employing printers acting in their individual capacity or as members of a division.

"5. It should be recognized that the closed shop division of the United Typothetae of America enjoys complete autonomy in the conduct of its affairs, and the Executive Council of the United Typothetae of America wishes to particularly emphasize the fact that the membership of the United Typothetae of America as a whole has never been, nor could it be, represented in the deliberations of the International Joint Conference Council, nor can it be bound by the conclusions thereof.

"6. The Executive Council of the United Typothetae of America believes that the deliberate and repeated falsification by labor union representatives as to the attitude of the United Typothetae of America on the proposed shorter work week now warrants and demands that such of its members as are under no contract to the contrary, take the most vigorous and positive action in defense of their already expressed refusal to agree to any reduction in working hours."

The statement is signed by William John Eynon, president; J. Linton Engle, first vice president and chairman Executive Committee; Fred W. Gage, treasurer, and Edward T. Miller, secretary of the United Typothetae.

Ohio Typographical Conference Has a Record Attendance.

MARION, O., April 9.—Interest in the controversy over the 44-hour week for printers and allied crafts in commercial shops, brought the largest delegation in the history of the organization to the twenty-eighth annual session of the Ohio typographical conference, which opened here tonight.

Other subjects to be considered are apprentice training and a zone system of scales. The conference will continue through tomorrow.

NATIONAL BANK OF CUBA AT HAVANA SUSPENDS PAYMENT

Failure to Obtain Loan in U. S. Believed to Have Been Cause.

By the Associated Press.

HAVANA, Cuba, April 9.—The Banco National de Cuba suspended payment this morning. The doors remained closed, the bank taking advantage of the liquidation law recently adopted by Congress. Failure to obtain a loan in the United States is believed to be the cause of the decision of the directors to close the bank.

The institution has been in difficulties since the drop in sugar prices caused the recent financial crisis in Cuba, it was formerly fiscal agent for the Government, and, according to report in usually well-informed circles, owes the national Treasury about 20,000,000 pesos.

The Banco National De Cuba is capitalized at $5,000,000. It has been a Government depository.

TENNESSEE'S RATIFICATION OF SUFFRAGE IS UPHELD

Supreme Court Says Gov. Roberts' Certification of Amendment Was Legal.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 9.—The Tennessee Supreme Court sustained today the legality of the process by which Gov. Roberts certified to the Federal State Department ratification of the woman suffrage amendment by the State Legislature.

The court affirmed the action of Chief Justice Lansden in issuing writs under which the Governor acted.

LITTLE IMPROVEMENT IN WORLD CONDITIONS

Commercial Attaches Abroad Cable Summaries of Financial and Economic Situation.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Financially and economically the situation throughout the world improved but little in March, with few signs of better conditions to come, according to cabled summaries for the month, received today by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, from its trade commissioners and commercial attaches in foreign countries.

In Europe tight money, unemployment and unsatisfactory industrial and shipping conditions were in evidence, while some declines in prices and slight revival of building activities were noted. In the East the situation was described as somewhat easier, while in South America conditions were reported as practically unchanged fro mthe previous month.

Commercial Attache Dennis reported that the business depression in Great Britain had increased owing to the prospective failure of an early settlement with Germany of the reparations question. Optimism that prevailed in the cotton textile industry has been dissipated, he declared.

American imports into France continue to show marked reductions, Commercial Attache Huntington at Paris, informed the bureau.

Commercial Attache Cross of Brussels declared high exchange rates and unsatisfactory business conditions continued to impede revival of the sale of American goods in Belgium.

Government expenditures are exceeding revenues in Germany, Howard W. Adams, representing the department at Berlin, cabled.

Anxiety is felt in the Scandinavian countries as to future developments in Russia and Germany, Trade Commissioner Anderson, at Copenhagen, stated.

Commercial Attache Arnold, at Pekin, reported an increased flow of British, Japanese and Belgian capital into China.

Commercial Attache Abbott at Tokio, reports that stocks of both import and export merchandise are becoming smaller, with the probable result that the revival of trade will be continued.

Commercial Attache Feely of Buenos Aires, reported that importers are liquidating their stocks slowly, due to an overstocked market and dull demand.

The general situation in the northern states of Brazil is very unsatisfactory, Commercial Attache Schurz reported from Rio De Janeiro.

The estimate for the 1921-22 coffee crop, he said, is placed at 7,104,000 bags, and there are 3,312,748 bags now at Rio De Janeiro and Santos.

According to Commercial Attache McQueen of Santiago, general business in Chile is dull, and there is no apparent prospect for early improvement.

The general condition of the Peruvian Government's finances is unfavorable, Commerical Attache Waters of Lima, reported. Banks are liquidating loans, he said, and deposits of foreign currency in banks are being withdrawn.

The lot is 115x140. No. 409-411 Lee avenue was sold for the Nodrog Realty Co. of St. Louis to B. J. Kniest of St. Louis. This property is a new bungalow with hardwood floors throughout and tile bath.

The company reports good demand for suburban homes.

PURSE IN ROAD HELD $120

Owner of Well-Filled Pocketbook Found.

"This is April, so I don't think that I will pick it up and get the laugh from someone who is watching near here," said Supervisor G. H. Nuernberger of New Athens yesterday as he saw what appeared to be a well-stuffed pocketbook lying in the Lensburg road. Herman Schuster, who was with Nuernberger, declared that April 1 had passed, and he would run a chance, and leaped from the wagon. Schuster found $120 in crisp bank notes and some checks in the pocketbook. The checks bore the name of C. C. Gardner of Woodlawn, Ill.

Later Gardner was found in New Athens and the pocketbook returned.

ROCKING-CHAIRS KEEP U. S. MOVING WHILE SITTING DOWN, SAYS CHESTERTON

Restlessness of the American Race Began With Hobbyhorses, He Thinks—Calls New York a Tower of Babel.

By G. K. CHESTERTON.

This is the third article in the series Mr. Chesterton, the English author, is writing on his observations during his tour of the United States.

THE sharpest pleasure of a traveler is in finding the things which he did not expect, but which he might have expected to expect. I mean the things that are at once so strange and so obvious that they must have been noticed, yet somehow they have not been noted.

Thus I heard a thousand things about Jerusalem before I ever saw it; I had heard rhapsodies and disparagements of every description. Modern rationalistic critics, with characteristic consistency, had blamed it for its accumulated rubbish and its modern restoration, for its antiquated superstition and its up-to-date vulgarity. But somehow the one impression that had never pierced through their description was the simple and single impression of a city on a hill, with walls coming to the very edge of slopes that were almost as steep as walls; the turreted city which crowns a cone-shaped hill in so many medieval landscapes.

One would suppose that this was at once the plainest and most picturesque of all the facts; yet somehow in my reading I had always lost it amid a mass of minor facts that were merely details. We know that a city that is set upon a hill cannot be hid; and yet it would seem that it is exactly the hill that is hid, though perhaps it is only hid from the wise and the understanding.

I had a similar and simple impression when I discovered America. I cannot void the phrase; for it would really seem that each man discovers it for himself.

Thus, I had heard a great deal, before I saw them, about the tall and dominant buildings of New York. I agree that they have an instant effect on the imagination which I think is increased by the situation in which they stand, and out of which they arose. They are all the more impressive because the building, while it is vertically so vast, is horizontally almost narrow.

His View of New York.

New York is an island, and has all the intensive romance of an island. It is a thing of almost infinite height upon very finite foundations. It is almost like a lofty lighthouse upon a lonely rock. But this story of the skyscrapers which I had often heard would by itself give a curiously false impression of the freshest and most curious characteristic of American architecture.

Told only in terms of these great towers of stone and brick in the big industrial cities, the story would tend too much to an impression of something cold and colossal like the monuments of Asia. It would suggest a modern Babylon altogether too Babylonian. It would imply that the man of the New World was a sort of new Pharaoh, who built not so much a pyramid as a pagoda of pyramids. It would suggest houses built by mammoths out of mountains, the cities reared by elephants in their own elephantine school of architecture.

And New York does recall the most famous of all skyscrapers, the Tower of Babel. It recalls it none the less because there is no doubt about the confusion of tongues.

But in truth the very reverse is true of most of the buildings in America. I had no sooner passed out into the suburbs of New York on the way to Boston than I began to see something else quite contrary and far more curious. I saw forests upon forests of small houses stretching away to the horizon as literal forests do; villages and towns and cities. And they were in another sense, literally like forests. They were all made of wood.

Lucky to Touch Wood.

It was almost as fantastic to an English eye as if they had been made of cardboard. I had long outlived the silly old joke that referred to Americans as if they all lived in the backwoods. But, in a sense, if they do not live in the woods, they are not yet out of the wood.

I do not say this in any sense as a criticism. As it happens I am particularly fond of wood. Of all the superstitions which our fathers took lightly enough to love, the most natural seems to me the notion it is lucky to touch wood.

Some of them affect me the less as superstition because I feel them as symbols. If humanity had really thought Friday unlucky it would have talked about bad Friday instead of Good Friday. And, while I feel the thrill of 13 at a table, I am not so sure that it is the most miserable of all human fates to fill the places of the Twelve Apostles. But the idea that there was something cleansing or wholesome about the touching of wood seems to me one of those ideas which is truly popular because it is truly poetic.

It is probable enough that the conception came originally from the healing power of the wood of the Cross; but that only clinches the divine confidence. It is like that other divine coincidence that the victim was a carpenter that might almost have made His own Cross.

Whether we take the mystical or the mythical explanation, there is obviously a very deep connection between the human working in wood and such plain and pathetic mysticism. It gives something like a touch of the holy childishness to the tale, as if that terrible engine could be a toy. In the same fashion, a child fancies that mysterious and sinister horse, which was the downfall of Troy, as something plain and staring, and perhaps spotted, like his own rocking-horse in the nursery.

It might be said symbolically that Americans have a taste for rocking-horses; as they certainly have a taste for rocking-chairs. A flippant critic might suggest that they select rocking-chairs so that, even when they are sitting down, they need not be sitting still. Something of this restlessness in the race may really be involved in the matter, but I think the deeper significance of the rocking-chair may still be found in the deeper symbolism of the rocking-horse.

I think there is behind all this fresh and facile use of wood, a certain spirit that is childish in the good sense of the word; something that is innocent and easily pleased. It is not altogether untrue, still less it is unfriendly, to say that the landscape seems to be dotted with dolls' houses. It is the true tragedy of every fallen son of Adam that he has grown too big to live in a doll's house. These things seem somehow to escape the irony of time by not even challenging it; they are too temporary even to be merely temporal.

Not Building Tombs.

These people are not building tombs; they are not, as in the fine image of Mrs. Meynell's poem, merely building ruins. It is not easy to imagine the ruins of a doll's house; and that is why a doll's house is an everlasting habitation. How far it promises a political permanence is a matter for further discussion; I am only describing the mood of discovery; in which all these cottages built of lath, like the places of a pantomime, really seemed colored like the clouds of morning, which are both fugitive and eternal.

There is also in all this an atmosphere that comes in another sense from the nursery. We hear much more of Americans being educated on English literature, but I think few American realize how much English children have been educated on American literature. It is true, and it is inevitable, that they can only be educated on rather old-fashioned American literature.

Mr. Bernard Shaw, in one of his plays, noted truly the limitation of the young American millionaire, and

Judge of the St. Louis Juvenile Court Writes of Its Work in Reforming Wayward Youth

PROOF OF SUCCESS IS DECLINE IN NUMBER OF CASES

Environment Is the Greatest Problem the Law Is Called Upon to Deal With, for Its Influence, if Evil, Is Far More Sinister for Society Than the Misfortune of Heredity.

By Judge Moses Hartmann
Of the St. Louis Juvenile Court.

A PROBLEM very difficult to solve and one which for centuries has had scientific consideration is how we shall deal with the delinquent child.

Society has for ages had to contend with the matter of dealing with those children of criminal tendencies, and those who become delinquent through environment. So in giving this subject brief consideration let us differentiate between the child of criminal parentage and the one whose environments make him a subject for correction.

What can be done with the boy who has inherited the trait of a criminal, following closely in the foosteps of his parent or grandparent or even a more remote ancestor? Shall this poor individual be dealt with leniently, shall he receive the fatherly advice so freely and willingly given to juvenile offenders, or shall he be immediately incarcerated in a penal or other institution to spend term after term there?

If scientific research will serve as a guide, then, we are told that in the eighteenth century there lived a family known as the Jukes, descendants of a backwoodsman, without doubt of defective mentality. The histories of over a thousand members of this family are more or less well known. About one-third died in infancy; an equal number were professional paupers, 440 were wrecked physically by disease, more than half of the women were grossly immoral, 130 were convicted criminals, 60 were habitual thieves and 7 were murderers.

13 College Presidents Among Jonathan Edwards' Descendants

Contrast this with the record of Jonathan Edwards, of whom 1394 were identified in 1900. Of these, 13 were college presidents, 65 college professors, 60 authors and writers, 60 physicians, 100 or more clergymen, 75 officers in the army and navy, 100 lawyers, 30 Judges and 80 public officials, one of whom was Vice President of the United States, and three were United States Senators.

We are told that not one of the Jukes had a common school education, while 295 of the descendants of Jonathan Edwards were college graduates.

Has the theory of heredity been sustained in our later day?

While many cases brought before the Juvenile Court are those where heredity can be traced, by far the greater number are delinquent through environment—faulty home conditions and bad company—due in a large measure to lack of cooperation between parent and child. The home should always be a school in itself where the parents are the teachers and the children are the students—the home should always have within it a loving mother and a kind father—the parents should be the companions of their children. Under such co-operation the child's welfare is safeguarded, he loves to go to school, thoroughly appreciates the value of an education and this necessarily results in good citizenship.

Delinquency Follows Failure of Parents to Aid Child at Home

On the other hand, take the home which has been disrupted by separation, or divorce, through drunkenness, immorality, poverty or other cause; the home ties are broken—here there is no cooperation between parent and child, the school at home is out—the children are in the way—there is no longer love and affection within the walls of the home—the directing hand is lost. Here the State steps in to assume the responsibility of reclaiming these children to society. The child at first neglected is later delinquent; begins his downward course at a very early age, usually about 8—the schoolroom has no further charm for him—he becomes a truant, he runs away from home, he learns to steal, he seeks boys of like character, and then it is an easy matter to plot and carry out the deviltry of youth. He refuses to go to school, his education is so retarded that he cannot keep up with the normal boys of the same age, who are progressing; he refuses to attend special schools for those retarded; he roams about the streets aimlessly, without regard for the folly of his conduct, or appreciation of his wrongdoing, and is finally arrested and brought before the Court charged with some form of delinquency.

It is well here to consider the inner workings of the court itself. The Juvenile Court is the outgrowth of a protest against former judicial methods of dealing with children. Children had been kept in police cells and jails in company with the worst offenders. The natural result was that they were educated in crime and when discharged from custody were well fitted to become the expert criminals and outlaws who have crowded our jails and penitentiaries. The State had thus educated innocent children in crime.

JUDGE MOSES HARTMANN.

Law Protects Children Under 17 From Prosecution as Criminals

The Juvenile Court was established by act of the Legislature in the year 1903.

The principle of the law governing the Juvenile Court is that no child under 17 years of age shall be considered or treated like a criminal; that a child under this age shall not be convicted, imprisoned or punished as a criminal.

The Juvenile Court is a division of the Circuit Court and is presided over by a Judge of that court, appointed in general term meeting, usually for a period of one year. It has 20 probation officers, 9 men and 11 women. Fully 25 per cent of the children who come before the court are the offspring of degenerate families.

A clinic for mental and physical examination of children is maintained in connection with the court, where expert medical opinion is given for its guidance. The Juvenile Court has been fortunate in having such services under the direction of the hygienic department of the Board of Education, and in hundreds of cases has been able to materially aid the unfortunate child.

A feeble-minded or mentally defective child should not be committed to a reformatory to mingle with the other delinquents of different type. It would be far better for all concerned if such a child were placed in an institution caring for children of that type, to remain there for a long period of time. Unfortunately, owing to the crowded condition of the State institutions for feeble-minded and mentally defective, the court has been forced to commit such children to institutions where normal boys are kept or otherwise place them under the supervision of probation officers. Society demands that such child be placed in an institution for the feeble-minded or mentally defective, no matter how terrifying it may be to parents or other loved ones who are directly concerned. This for the protection of the public as well as the child.

How Juvenile Court Tries to Help Children After First Offense

A mentally defective child can never connect cause and effect, he can never see the relation between the punishment that he received and the offense he committed; and consequently cannot be reformed by the same method that is applied to the normal boy.

What is done with the child following arrest? After the arrest of a delinquent child, he is confined temporarily in the house of detention until an information is filed, setting forth the offense committed. While in the house of detention he is being taught useful pursuits by three special teachers furnished by the Board of Education. His case is placed upon the court docket in from one to two weeks. The trial is informal in all other respects; no witnesses are sworn—the story is told in narrative form. After examining the previous record of the offender (if he has one) and the report of his clinical examination as to mentality, etc., and after finally considering the home conditions of the child, the court then passes sentence upon him.

But the Work of Reformation is Being Greatly Aided by Various Organizations That Co-Operate With the Court and Endeavor to Improve the Surroundings of the Delinquent.

Usually a first offender is warned with sufficient firmness to let him know that a repetition of his wrongdoing will likely bring him into a penal institution. So in many cases the child has bid the court a last farewell. But some will and do return, and then the child, after another hearing, is placed on probation, to report to his probation officer from day to day, week to week, or month to month. In this way the child is now made to realize that he needs attention, and he understands now that an arm of the court has reached out to help him to overcome his weakness, and to direct his movements.

If home conditions are to blame for his delinquency, a home is usually found among relatives of the child where his environments will be better. If he is old enough to work, suitable employment is found for him, and everything possible is done to correct the fault. The Juvenile Court receives excellent co-operation from the Big Brothers and Big Sisters organizations, school authorities, charitable associations, the Board of Religious Organizations, physicians, various public-spirited citizens and all societies interested in child welfare.

Term in Correctional Institution Follows Violation of a Parole

Should the child while on probation again commit an offense, or violate the conditions of his probation or parole, he is then committed to an institution for correction. Boys between the ages of 8 and 15 are sent to the Industrial School at Fort Bellefontaine, to serve from three months to one or two years, as the Court may determine from the facts and circumstances in each particular case. Boys between the ages of 15 and 17 inclusive are committed to the Missouri Reformatory for Boys at Boonville, Mo., usually from one to five years, as the nature of the case demands.

Boys committed to the Industrial School, after the expiration of their service there, are again placed on probation and renewed effort is made through the probation officers to aid the children to become useful citizens. Unfortunately, in some cases he comes again, due largely to the fact that his home environments have not improved, and with each successive offense his commitment is increased as to time, and as the years of his childhood go by with continued delinquency, he takes a closer step toward confinement in prison. Such is the ultimate disposition of the wayward boy, who, through heredity or environment, has ceased to be a credit to the community and has become a public charge.

Many cases can be cited along the lines of delinquency, such as existed in the Jukes family, but it will suffice to call attention to one or two.

Children of Man Who Deserted Wife in Court Total of 54 Times

A man, after serving a sentence in the penitentiary for manslaughter, deserted his wife and two children, who lived in a Missouri town. He came to St. Louis and here met and lived with a woman who had five daughters. Of this union two boys were born; later, through his immoral relations with two of the daughters, four children were born to one daughter and one to the other. These children have all been before the Juvenile Court, charged with various forms of delinquency, including drunkenness, burglary and incorrigibility. During a period of 12 years these children have been before the Court 54 times, and were from time to time committed to corrective institutions. Heredity in this case stands out prominently, and is but one case in many.

Another case was that of a man who deserted his wife and five sons. This man, after eloping with another woman, finally committed suicide. His sons grew up in idleness and crime, and beginning at the ages of 8, 9 and 10, they were each guilty of thievery, destruction of property, incorrigibility and other forms of delinquency. These boys were habitual runaways from home, sleeping in alleys and other exposed places. As they grew older their delinquency became more pronounced and graver offenses were committed. The mother, although trying very hard to properly educate her children and to direct them in the right path, utterly failed in her efforts, contending that the criminality shown in the conduct of the boys was inherited from their father. No doubt poverty and environment had played a part.

And so, many cases of like character could be

BRITISH TREASURY OFFICIAL PREDICTS GERMAN MARKS WILL DEPRECIATE INTO SOUVENIRS

Asserts U. S. Greenbacks Were the Only Currency That Ever Reached Original Value After Being Deflated.

By JOHN MAYNARD KEYNES,
Representative of the British Treasury at the Peace Conference and Author of "The Economic Consequences of the Peace."
(Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.)

LONDON, March 27.

THE OBJECT of this article is to deal with a popular mistake about the foreign exchanges which seems to be extremely common. It is popularly supposed that the future of the exchange value of a country's currency chiefly depends upon its intrinsic wealth in the form of natural resources and an industrious population, and that a far-sighted man rightly expects an ultimate recovery in the value of its money if the country looks likely to enjoy in the long run commercial or industrial or agricultural strength.

The speculator in Rumanian lei keeps up his spirits by thinking of the vast resources of that country in corn and oil, and finds it hard to believe that Rumanian money can in the long run be worth less than the money of, say, Switzerland.

The speculator in German marks bases his hopes on the immense industry and skill of the German people, which must, he feels, enable her to pull round in the long run.

Prosperity Versus Currency.

Yet this way of thinking is fallacious. If the conclusion of the argument was that, in the long run, the Rumanian peasant and the Rumanian proprietor ought to be able to live comfortably, or that an industrial nation like Germany must be able to survive, the conclusion might be sensible. But the conclusion that certain pieces of paper called bank notes, must for these reasons come to be more valuable than they are now is a different kind of conclusion altogether, and does not necessarily follow from the former. France was the richest country in the world, not excepting England, when in the last decade of the eighteenth century her paper money, the assignats, fell, after five years' violent fluctuations, to be worth nothing at all on the bourses of Lisbon and Hamburg.

War, revolution, or a failure of the sources of the national wealth generally begins the depreciation of a paper currency. But the recovery of this money to its former value need not result when the original calamity has passed away. A recovery can only come about by the deliberate policy of the Government, and there are generally weighty reasons against adopting such a policy. In the case of the money of the French revolution, the depreciated notes were simply swept away, and their place taken by a new currency of gold. I do not remember any case in history in which a very greatly depreciated curency has subsequently recovered its former value. Perhaps the best instance to the contrary is that of the American greenbacks after the Civil War, which eventually recovered to their gold parity; but in their case the maximum degree of the depreciation was moderate in comparison with recent instances. The various sound currencies existing throughout the world in the years before the war had not always existed, and had been established, many of them, upon the debris of earlier irretrievable debasements.

Restoration May Be Disadvantage.

For it may not be in a country's interest to restore its depreciated money, and a suppression of the old money may be better than its resuscitation. A return even of former prosperity may be quite compatible with a collapse in the value of the former currency to nothing at all.

Let me apply some of these considerations to the case of the German mark. As I write, there are about 250 marks to the pound; but within the last 12 months the rate has been as high as 560 and as low as 120. As the par value of the mark is 20 to the pound, German bank notes are now worth less than a tenth of their normal value. Even without a Bolshevik government matters can be much worse than this; for the bank notes of Poland or Austria are worth less than a hundredth of their nominal value. But for the purposes of our argument let us take the less extreme case of Germany.

Now it is well known that at the present time there are many causes at work which are tending to make the value of the mark progressively worse even than it is at present. The expenditure of the Government is about three times its revenue, and the deficit is largely made up by printing additional notes, a process which every one agrees must diminish the value of the notes; Germany's commercial exports (i. e., excluding deliveries under the treaty), although showing some substantial recovery from the worst, are still short of her absolutely essential imports, and thus the balance of trade is against her; the economic condition of her neighbors, Russia and the fragments of the former Austro-Hungarian empire, which used to be her best customers, make impossible any early revival of trade with them on the pre-war scale; and these very adverse conditions are present and operative, in spite of the fact that as yet Germany is not making current payments on account of reparation up to the standard, or anything like it, of even the most moderate proposals for a settlement of the allies' demands. If and when these demands materialize in payments, the difficulties of the budget and the difficulties of the trade balance are certain to be aggravated.

But let us put aside these considerations for the moment and look a little further ahead. Most of those who look for a recovery of the mark are not thinking of this year, or even, probably, of next. They believe that ultimately Germany will pull round and that when this occurs the mark will recover also.

Apprecation Causes Higher Prices.

Now, though the process of the depreciation of money (i. e, the rise of prices) is easy though painful, the reverse process of appreciation (i. e., the fall of prices), though difficult, is also painful. The upset to the economic organization of a country caused by falling prices is quite as bad, as we have all been finding out lately, as the upset caused by rising prices. Both are bad; but once we have suffered the evils of rising prices, they are not obliterated by following them up with the evils of falling prices. This applies everywhere, but in Germany there are two special considerations which it is my particular purpose to emphasize in this article.

Germany has a national debt which now amounts to 350 milliards of paper marks, and is likely to amount to a still higher figure before equilibrium has been obtained in her national finances. If the mark were to double in value—far more, if it, were to increase tenfold—the money burden of the service of this debt would remain the same, but its real burden would be proportional to the increase in the value of the mark. The portion of the German revenue (measured in goods) which would have to be paid over as interest to the holders of the German national debt would be increased in the same proportion. That is to say, German resources, which would otherwise be available, in part at least, for reparations, would be diverted to the German propertied classes. The allies would hardly allow this. Yet the only alternative, a partial or complete repudiation of the German debt, is a precedent which they might hesitate to encourage.

Would Help Foreign Speculators.

Furthermore, the holders of the German public debt, who are mostly Germans, are not the only persons into whose pockets an improvement

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The Anglo-Saxon Myth.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

"An American" started something when he asked in the Post-Dispatch for information on the ancient Ireland vs. England struggle.

"An American" has got much information and misinformation through the Post-Dispatch. It is really wonderful how many people know so much that "ain't so." The real point of the Irish vs. English quarrel seems to me to have been entirely missed. It is, as I see it, not a contest between the Irish people and the British people, but a contest in which the Irish people and the British people should be allies, against the great, exploiting Norman families of both Great Britain and Ireland.

The British people, as a whole, have never oppressed or mistreated the Irish people as a whole. Both the British and Irish people for almost 1000 years have been heavily oppressed and mistreated by Norman overlords and supermen. These Norman overlords seized by force and have held the land of both countries since 1066 in England and since 1172 in Ireland. He who owns the land owns the country, especially in Ireland, where agriculture has been the sole source of livelihood for the population. The ownership of the coal, iron, etc., which has made some so-called Englishmen (really Normans) unbelievably wealthy, goes with the ownership of the land.

The so-called Anglo-Saxon race and so-called Anglo-Saxon superiority are myths. The Anglo-Saxon never did amount to a row of pins. He was, at best, a home-keeping, beer-drinking, hog-eating hind. He never sailed a strange sea or ventured 20 miles from his hogpen. The Danes twice whipped him with a punch. The Normans knocked him out forever with one wallop at Hastings, 1066. William the Conqueror left but two Saxon thanes in England. His successor, William Rugus, disposed of these. Since 1066 the Norman has ruled England. The Anglo-Saxon has not dared to cheep. If he cheeped he got his head bashed in for his temerity. The so-called great Anglo-Saxon has been the famous mute and well-trained English servant of the Norman superman, a mere scullion.

Can anyone name a great Anglo-Saxon since Alfred the Great? The great Ministers of England, Burleigh, Cecil, Palmerston, the two Pitts, Gladstone, Asquith, Salisbury (Cecil) have all been Normans; Disraeli, a Jew; Lloyd George a Cymric-Celt; Haig, Wilson, Byng, Maurice, Robertson, Allenby, all the great British soldiers of the late war, have been Gaels or Normans. Not an Anglo-Saxon made a name during the great war, which it is said was won by the "Anglo-Saxon Powers."

Not an Anglo-Saxon name on the Magna Charta! All Norman! Not an Anglo-Saxon name on the Declaration of Independence. The suffix "son" or "ton" marks the Nordic or Norman, as the O or Mc marks the Gael. All right. Go down the line on the members of the constitutional convention, U. S. A. Washing-ton, Hamil-ton, Madi-son, Jeffer-son, Frank-lin.

Do you need further affirmation of the statement that the Norman autocrat, not the Anglo-Saxon democrat, is the overlord, the superman, not only of Great Britain and of Ireland, but of the world?

The world, as well as the Irish people and the British people is under the heel of the greatest race of men that has ever existed—the Normans. And the world, as well as the Irish and British people, would better be about the business of getting its neck from under the heel of the Norman overlords who have their castles in England, principally in Lombard street, London.

When that is done we'll all be free.

An Efficiency Plant.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The foreman training class of the University of Missouri spent a very interesting and instructive two hours in the Post-Dispatch plant last Saturday evening. The men had received a general description of the process of newspaper making before they made the trip. They, therefore, understood a great deal better what they observed than most visitors to a plant do; and they had more time to observe the outstanding features of your plant.

Comments such as the following, which were made, will show you that the men were observant: "I can now see and understand why the Post-Dispatch is the neatest and most popular newspaper in St. Louis"; "There is just one continuous line of progressive operations—no 'back-tracking,' so to speak"; "The work is well routed, everything seems to be conveniently arranged for the workers"; "The working conditions are excellent, and the shop is clean and sanitary"; "The best system of material-progression that I have seen"; "The rapidity with which the news is worked up and put into the hands of the people, and the labor-saving devices were numerous and well designed."

I am certain that the men appreciated the courtesy the Post-Dispatch extended to them last week. Kindly accept our thanks. Very truly yours,

BERNARD W. NOEL,
Extension Instructor in Industrial Arts.

INTERNATIONAL REALITIES.

The comment of the Post-Dispatch with regard to the position of the United States under the Versailles treaty, which we have refused to ratify and, in effect, have repudiated, is emphasized by the statement of a high British official to our London correspondent.

The British official declares that the treaty, having been signed by 42 nations, is in operation, not negotiation, and the decisions of the authorities constituted by it are binding. They are closed questions. The United States have failed to ratify the treaty and, not being a party to any of the conferences to put it into effect, cannot expect the parties to the treaty to await this Government's judgment concerning its decisions. As nonmembers of the League we cannot expect to enjoy the privileges of members.

We repudiated any idea of conquest or possession of enemy territory by conquest, so that our rights in the disposition of German territory rest upon the treaty.

If consideration is given to questions raised by America with regard to treaty decisions, it is a matter of courtesy prompted by a desire to do justice and to keep on friendly terms with this country. In short, our might and influence, not our legal right, is the controlling motive.

But how long can we continue to act as a dog in the manger, as a protesting outsider, merely blocking the execution of the treaty on the ground of our rights, under it, without ratifying it or participating in its obligations and the work of interpreting and enforcing it?

So long as we decline to ratify the treaty our position becomes increasingly difficult. We are, as the Post-Dispatch repeatedly has remarked, in a position of opposition to our late war allies and 42 nations. If we definitely repudiate the treaty by making a separate peace with Germany, surely we can claim no rights or privileges under it. We cannot claim benefits under a treaty which we have formally rejected—that is not open to argument.

The position of "splendid isolation" which was so glowingly advocated in the recent presidential campaign and had a glamor of wise statesmanship, has grave disadvantages. In a world of realities, where nations touch elbows and where questions of international interests and dealings wait upon no nation's pleasure, we must work with or work against the covenant. We cannot stand alone and demand first consideration without playing the bully and in the end coming into conflict with other nations. In this case we are in danger of conflict with all the nations joined together in a treaty and a League.

The administration is finding that after-the-war problems are realities which cannot be settled by sham campaign issues, and that momentous questions await our decision as to our attitude towards the realities upon which the fate of nations and the progress of civilization depend.

AN UNFORTUNATE VERDICT.

John S. Williams, the Georgia plantation owner, is either an innocent man or he is guilty of one of the most atrocious series of murders in the annals of crime. The verdict of guilty with a recommendation of mercy is absurd. If there was insufficient evidence to convict him he should have been acquitted. If the evidence was sufficient to convict he should have been given the extreme penalty of the law, and the sentence should have been executed with all possible promptness and rigor.

The case has been invested with considerable significance because of the racial aspects involved. The sole witness against the planter was a negro, though his testimony was not unsupported by circumstantial evidence and the established facts. The victims of the crime were blacks. Public opinion naturally assumed that this was to be a test of the white man's willingness to render justice, irrespective of race.

From this point of view especially is the verdict disappointing. Evidently it was the result of a compromise, the jury having failed to reach an agreement after deliberating nine solid hours. Justice might have been better served had a verdict of not guilty been returned and the prisoner tried before a new jury on another one of the indictments against him. There should be no compromise with murder, particularly when it is multiple murder, committed without a circumstance to relieve it of the brand of utter depravity.

A STUDY IN CREATION.

It may be only the proof of his genius that Knut Hamsun has been able to evolve a great epic out of the simple story of a rawboned Scandinavian peasant and a harelipped bride in the wilderness. Notwithstanding the convincingness of Mr. Hamsun's tale, which is glowingly testified to by the reviewers and H. G. Wells, the hard-headed world will remain persistently dubious of the poetical availability of the place, the circumstances and the girl.

The spiritual potentialities of the soil are things of which only poets-at-heart are conscious. The soil unquestionably is wholesome, healing and purifying. But only as the soul responds to it. Ordinarily the soul does not respond. If it did, why the Nonpartisan League and the granger lobbyists that are ever protesting the sterility and pauperism of life on the farm?

Notwithstanding the idealization of literature, sweat is sweat, and life on a farm in summer without a bathtub or a duly appreciated creek does not invite the epic mood.

Mr. Hamsun's fiction may be tremendous. But it is fiction. The Ford and the phonograph are facts. They testify to man's desire to muffle the call of the soil.

Hamsun made Isak and Inger. God made the Kansas farmer.

"HANDS OFF" THE ROAD FUND.

The committee of Missouri legislators on a tour of good roads inspection and inquiry spent an interesting day at Indianapolis, the center of the great system of highways which has given Indiana the distinction of third place as a good-roads State. The Missourians were informed as to the types of construction which Indiana, from long experience, has proved and disproved. The Hoosier testimony, it should be said, need not be accepted as conclusive, but it must be regarded as weighty.

With respect to the administrative system of road construction, the judgment of L. H. Wright, Director of Highways of Indiana, is of especial interest. Mr. Wright earnestly advises against any plan other than state management and supervision. The county unit, or special district unit, method is condemned unreservedly. Roads built under that aimless policy, he says, "begin nowhere and end nowhere." Indiana has gone through the county unit road period and has paid, and is still paying, for her folly.

Mr. Wright's opinion is precisely that of other highway directors and of men who have given thought and time to the subject, even though they have had no official part in road building. It is an opinion, too, that conforms to common sense. But the most monstrous example of the waste and corruption possible to the smaller-than-state unit of road construction is to be found close at home—in Arkansas.

Under the Arkansas special road district plan of road construction, a system of confiscatory taxation has been established that is monstrously incredible. Agents designated and authorized by the State have been turned loose to prey like wolves upon defenseless sheep. The New York Times, which has investigated the Arkansas situation, recites the case of a woman who will have to pay a road tax of $2800 out of an income of $4000. As the tax runs 20 years she will have paid at the end of the period, including 6 per cent interest charges, a total of more than $80,000 on a property assessed at $32,000. This is an extreme case, but it typifies the Arkansas enormity. And the roads so far built are said to be of inferior construction and practically worthless, inasmuch as they "begin and end nowhere."

In its big highway enterprise Missouri must profit from the experience of other states. Blunders of construction and management must be avoided. Any other course would be criminal.

The sixty millions of dollars to be paid by the people of Missouri for good roads must go into good roads. To the log-rolling politicians with the itching palms Missouri must say, "Hands off!"

THE WOUNDED SOLDIERS.

The note of bitterness in Gen. Pershing's censure of the Government's failure to make proper provision for wounded and disabled soldiers is wholly justified. The failure is inexcusable; it is a national shame and reproach.

When Gen. Pershing reminds us that the number of disabled men is steadily increasing he is only saying what has been authoritatively said before. Last December, while pleading for a minimum appropriation of $30,000,000 for this service, Surgeon-General Cummings went into the grim statistics of war's wreckage. He showed there were then 17,000 incapacitated men and that the number was increasing at the rate of 1000 a month. He further said the number would continue to increase for several years, probably until 1929, when the maximum of 30,000 would be reached.

Congress, apparently discounting the Surgeon-General's dismal summary and forecast, shaved down the appropriation to $18,000,000. There is time for Congress to repent of that ill-advised moment of economy by appropriating the necessary amount and by erring, if need be, on the side of generosity rather than penuriousness.

But something more than money must be provided to meet this solemn obligation. The work must be rightly organized and headed by a man with the brains and the heart for this task.

Such a man can be found. Perhaps President Harding has found him in Charles G. Dawes, who has been named head of a committee to find out who has failed and why and to organize this service efficiently.

THE RADICAL.

DURING the two decades of intense activity on their part, just past, the enemies of ideal civilization have resorted to—or rather have developed—some remarkable strategy: The latter part of the first exhibited an obviously concerted effort to put satire under taboo, and it was explicitly prosecuted in the mercenary press, with appreciable success.

Among the convulsive events of the later period, however, and especially in view of the rallying of humanity for self-preservation (no doubt astounding to the over-ready powers projecting destruction), apparently the futility of merely negative or conservative measures was recognized; a hint was taken from the tradition of the Hebraic Lord when he came down to the Tower of Babel; and a deliberate attempt was made to pervert, discredit, incapacitate words that might prove baffling to the usurpers and exploiters—misusers—of the natural powers and prerogatives of the people.

While it was essential to any hope of success in this scheme that it should be unintelligible to the modern dupes, it was in fact merely a reproduction of the ancient expedient of "confounding their language"—of destroying their means of communication and understanding and thus the possibility of their attaining the elevation of being which their would-be Lords preferred to enjoy exclusively.

A recent experience of my own illustrates quite distinctly the process of enforcement of this most positive measure of the conservators of a slave-class, indispensable to the exploiters of aliened human rights:

In correspondence with a really very learned doctor of philosophy, a retired professor of classic languages of Cornell, I casually professed my actually emphatic radicalism, proud to be able to assume the highest and most apt title afforded by the language for a right-thinker. In his reply, after praising rather extravagantly a thoroughly radical pamphlet I had sent him, he added, "Your pride in being a radical does not please me so much. It is not Nature's way to uproot till winter comes."

Then I was very radical about the word "Radical," and overwhelmed him with lexicography: Johnson says it means "Implanted by Nature;" and Murray, practically summarizing intermediate authorities, defines it as meaning "of or pertaining to roots; forming the root or basis; going to the root or origin; touching or acting upon what is essential or fundamental;" and exemplifies its use with the quotation, "June, reformer radical, I love thy song!" Nowhere is there a hint of derogatory significance, unless there be those who would find it in one definition of the noun, "English politics: An ultra-liberal, verging on republicanism."

And yet the illiterate thunderers of the American press hurl it as a term of utter and blasting opprobrium, and the functionaries of the Wilson administration—especially the lynch-lawyers—employ it as a synonym for "criminal," in general.

The doctor of philosophy confessed, "Of course you are right, and you needed no dictionaries to prove your point to one whose profession is Greek and Latin. But it must have been clear to you that I was using the word in the popular sense, for as between popular sense and etymologic sense we must all yield in time to the former, to be understood." And after such succumbing and surrender, what would he have worth the understanding? I became radical to the nth degree in retort: "There are hosts undoubtedly who would be hopelessly averse to becoming radicals, because a radical is one impetuously disposed to go to the root or essence of a subject for the truth, and they would be afraid to seek the truth in any such vigorous fashion—lest they find it."

MY CREED.

SHOULD I announce my creed,
I would chant of such:

I would retreat into a woodland spot
Which is teeming of intimacy.
In the sanctuary of its retreat I find God
Most evident. He is unalloyed, untrammeled.
He speaks with assurance in a golden tongue
Of sunlight, in the soothing tongue of shadow.
He toucheth me with caressing hands
And my flesh is tremorous beneath
The subtle stroke upon my cheek
Of His all-embracing hand.

He commands my feet in that
He invites them with hungry paths.
In the pit of silence I would plunge,
Making myself purged of the intrusion
Of men, that I become as respondent
As a harp leaned against the soul
Of its master.
Then would I make me mute,
For in all of this I have announced
My creed.

EXAMINATIONS FOR ACTORS.

From the Christian Science Monitor.

THE development in Great Britain of the Actors' Association, and in the United States of the Actors' Equity Association, has given a new aspect to that old and vexed question, "How many young players obtain a rounded training?" Both of these organizations require that a candidate for membership shall have had a certain amount of stage experience as a requisite to admission. The presumption, for lack of a better test of the candidate's right to the name of professional actor, is that two seasons of stage appearances is a guaranty of a minimum grade of ability. Members of these associations know, of course, that the fact that a person has been numbered among the players of one or more theatrical companies for two years is no proof that he or she is competent enough to have more than a precarious foothold in the profession. Employment is no proof of acting ability, according to those who would make entrance more difficult for the person with little or no "call" to the stage as a profession. According to members of the Actors' Equity Association, the Equity Shop movement in America is not merely a scheme to establish the closed shop, wherewith to hold the strike threat over managers' heads in order to obtain a steady increase of concessions. Rather is the Equity Shop idea aimed at putting the acting profession on a sound professional basis, removing the last trace of the vagabond tradition that clings to the theater even today. The application of the two-year experience requisite for admission is one way in which members have sought to keep the organization high in standard. But even now it is recognized that this test does not necessarily bar all incompetents from the prestige that is given to them by recognition as qualified applicants. So the proposal is advanced, both in England and in America, that these actors' organizations shall set up boards of judges, to pass upon the abilities of candidates. These boards, to insure allround fairness, would not be made up exclusively of members of the player groups, but would include stage directors and other competent judges of acting who are outside the membership of the groups.

FILM CENSORSHIP.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

HERE in Ohio virtuous progression is distinguished by superlative advancement. The cinema fiend has been roped and hog-tied. Henceforth he will bear the brand of approved legislative righteousness. It will not be necessary even further to hobble him. Saddled and straddled by the stern-eyed Conservator of Reform, he is cinched to the limit of endurance and will be quirted and spurred to the corral of further condemnation upon the slightest effort to buck. No more shall Desdemona die before our sympathetic vision; no more shall Lady Macbeth ease Scotland's King of troubled lifu; nor shall dark Hamlet do justice to the manes of his murthered and outraged father; no more shall the "Merry Wives of Windsor" tempt us to thoughts of lewd levity; saved are we from contamination with Montague or Capulet! Yea, Shakspeare is shaken. "What," cries an illuminated legislator, "is Shakspeare in comparison with the safety of our boys and girls?" What, indeed! Wide is the sweep of censorial expurgation. Along with the dangerous Bard of Avon go most of the erstwhile masters who have threatened the morals of the world since vagabond Homer sang of gods and goddesses who wore more smiles and frowns than clothes! It may be that we shall not be permitted to look upon the pictured realism of Solomon's Song. Perchance it will be denied us to observe the pictured idyl of David and Bethsheba. Ah, well, let us hope that Pilgrim's Progress and Charley Chaplin at least may escape the sacerdotal interdicts.

Events in the Social World

Marriage of Miss Lucy Ludington to Donaldson Lambert Is a Notable Event in a Season Conspicuous for Its Fashionable Weddings—Bride Was a Debutante of Last Year.

NOTABLE in a season conspicuous for its weddings was the marriage yesterday evening of Miss Lucy Ludington and Donaldson Lambert. The bride has been one of the most prominent girls in St. Louis since her debut. She was presented to society at a reception last year at her home and announced her engagement to Mr. Lambert on the first anniversary of her debut.

She was educated at Mary Institute and Oaksmere, in New York. Her mother was Miss Florence Bemis. The wedding took place at 6 o'clock at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elliot K. Ludington, 26 Washington terrace. The ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Dr. Z. B. T. Phillips of the St. Peter's Episcopal Church, took place under a white lattice arbor erected in the house and covered with pink roses and blue deephinium. Mrs. Charles McLean Carr was the matorn of honor, and Miss Florence Ludington was maid of honor.

The bridesmaids were Misses Peggy Murphy, Lucy Butler, Vesta Reed, Helen Battle, Dorothy Dayton of Plainfield, N. J., and Margaret Fraker of Quincy, Ill.

They wore taffeta frocks of pastel shades with cream-tinted lace and carried spring flowers. The bride's gown was of white satin with crystal beads. The bodice was in a basque effect, and the front of the skirt was a straight panel of satin with a crystal embroidered basket of flowers. Beneath the court train was a straight crystal embroidered panel suspended from the shoulders. A crystal bead basket adorned the train, which was six yards long and edged with wide rose-point lace. Her veil was of rose point and fashioned in a Russian headdress with a wreath of range blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lillies of the valley.

Mr. Lambert was attended by his brother, Albert Bond Lambert Jr., as best man, and the groomsmen were Charles French, James Crawford, Spencer Allen, Francis Ludington, William Schock and Gentry Shelton of New York. The ceremony was followed by a reception during which the guests danced on the tarpaulin-covered lawn. Mr. and Mrs. Lambert departed on a bridal trip, and will be at home after May 1 with Mr. and Mrs. Ludington. Mr. Lambert is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bond Lamber of 2 Hortense place. He was educated at Smith Academy and the Pilling School, New York, and was in the air service during the war. He is a member of the Imperial, St. Louis Country and Racquet Clubs. His mother was Miss Myrtle McGrew, one of the belles of St. Louis a generation ago.

Donald Gibbins will serve Mr. Russell as best man and the groomsmen and ushers will be Frederick Bonsack, Harry R. Stocker, Erwin Schoengirdt, James Preston and Grafton Dodd and Avery Sterner of Toledo. A reception will follow at the home of the bride's parents, at which the guests will be limited to the relatives and intimate friends.

The bridal party included Misses Janet Gregg, Erwin Hayward, Isabel Mauran, Dorothy Pillot, Hannah Jane Foley, Ephron Catlin Jr., Carl Langenberg, Field Goltra, Lannon Benoist, Howard Farrar, Boyle Rodes and Thomas Niedringhaus.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. King will sail Tuesday from New York for Europe to be away about two months.

Prominent among the recent weddings was that of Miss Edith Cates, daughter of Mrs. J. Mullanphy Cates, to Lieut. John C. Hamilton, U. S. Army. The ceremony took place Wednesday morning at the St. Louis Cathedral and was followed by a small reception at the home of the bride's mother, 4280 Washington boulevard. Jewelers for 73 Years

The Legitimate in Jewelry

In all art—the stage, painting, designing, writing—there is a point below which genius becomes intolerant.

Eccentricities in jewelry seem to prevail generally, much to the disturbance of fine appreciation and good taste, so much so that many jewelers, eager to capitalize passing fads, have ignored the promptings of artistic discernment, and present a medley of effects, charming in first impressions, but destined, in a short time, to be discarded.

You will not find this confusion in styles at Bolland's or any leading Jeweler's in any other great metropolitan city.

Seventy-three years of sensing the real vogue, the demands of the best people, will reveal to you in this beautiful store the choicest and loveliest creations in jewelry of every description, as well as the purest and finest of precious stones in approved and appropriate mountings of gold and platinum.

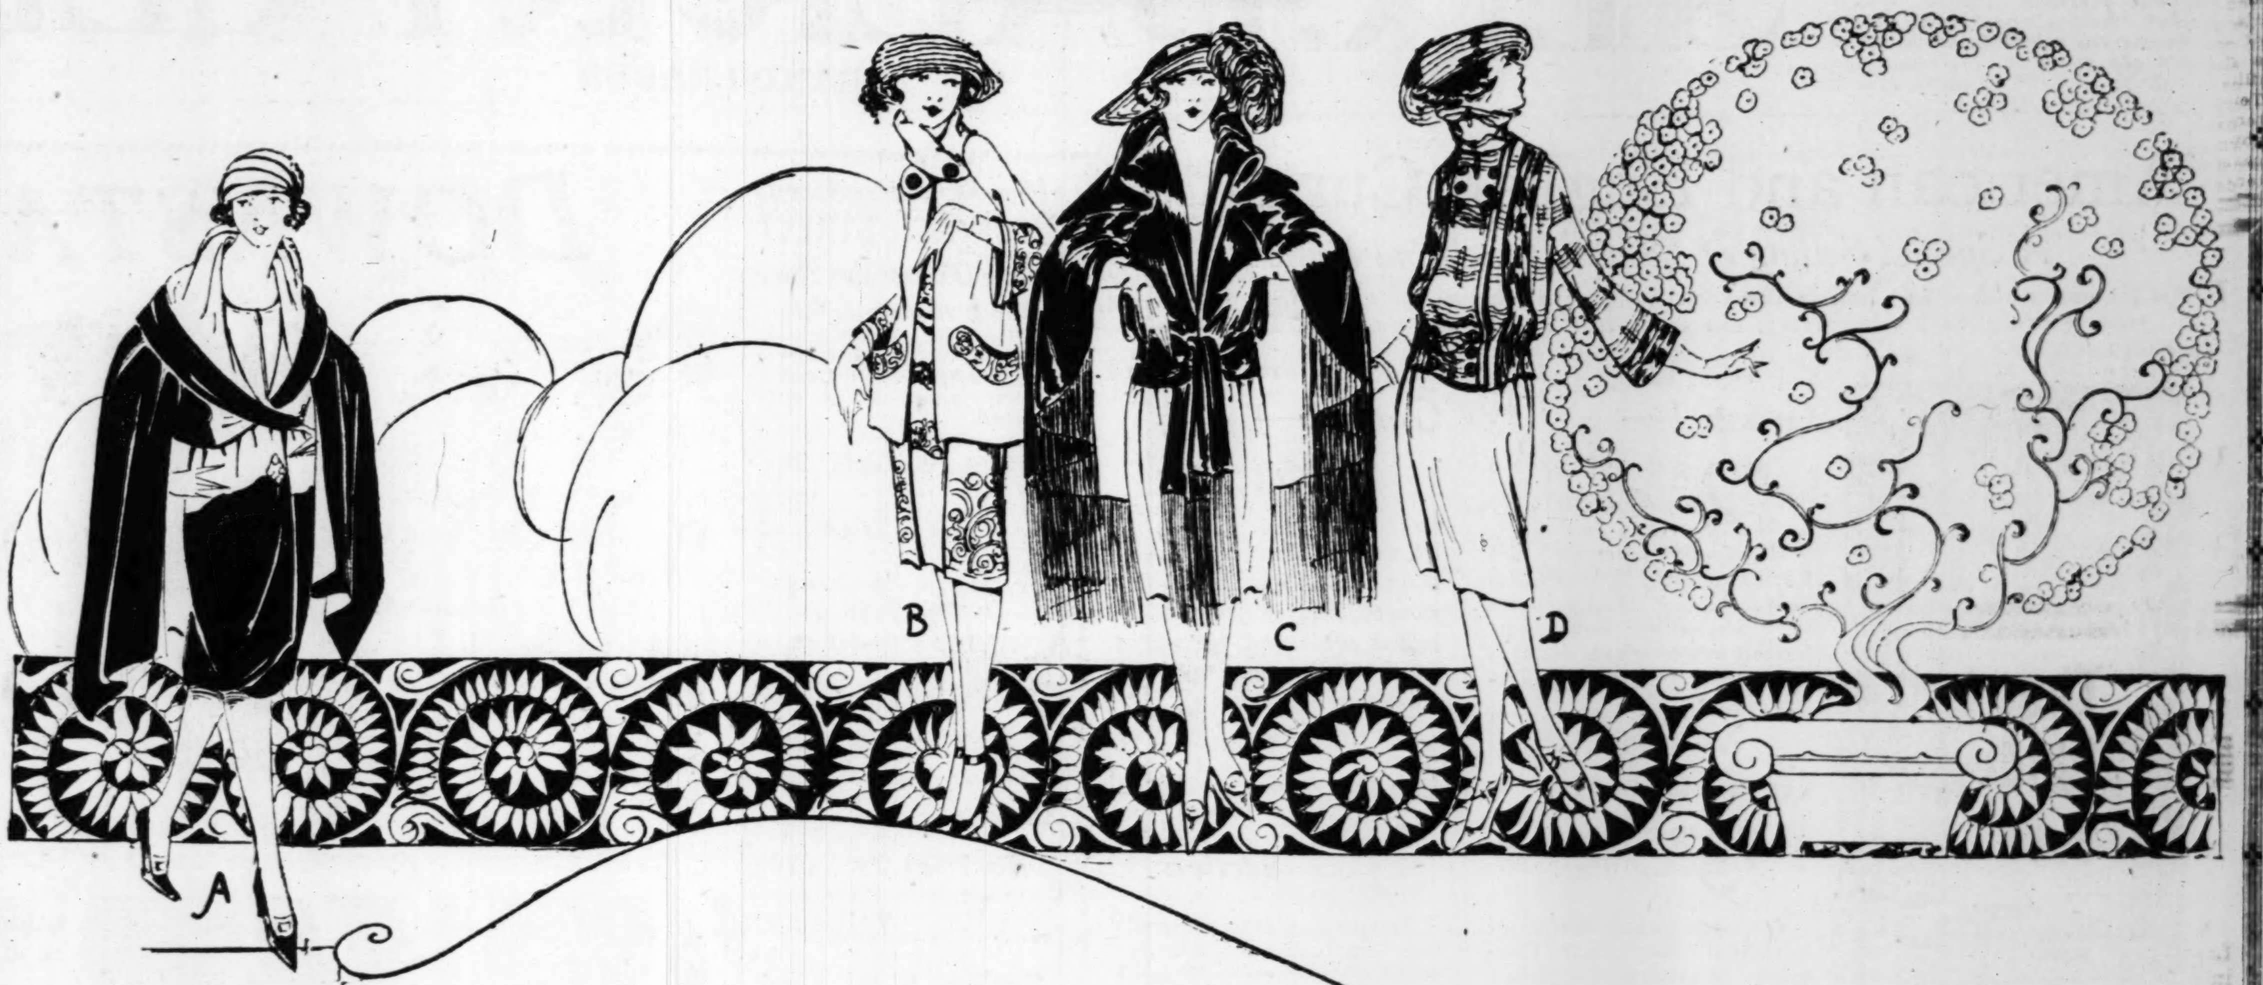
Garland's

ORIGINAL reproductions of models by such famed designers as Callot, Lanvin, Cheruit, Jenny, Premet, Agnes, Armond, Madalaine, Renee, Bernard, Drecoll, Le Long and Tollmann.



We Take Pleasure in Announcing the Sale of America's Finest Sample Coats, Wraps and Suits

At a Fraction of Their Actual Value

Garments Priced Regularly From $250 to $850

CHOICE

Wraps to $850 $125 Suits to $650

◖ This is a national as well as a local triumph. The savings we realized were enormous. Other stores the country over were privileged to secure these wonderful garments, but Garland's was the one who felt that their clientele would appreciate so rare an opportunity, and the result is that St. Louis women are the ones honored with the privilege to select apparel such as worn on Fifth Avenue and in the Bois in Paris.

◖ An insight as to the greatness of this sale can be gained by observing the following figures: The cost of labor alone on each garment averages $50; the embroideries range from $20 to $40. Then the cost of materials, trimmings, linings, etc., must be figured. These items alone will reach a total far in excess of the sale price of the garment.

◖ To describe this wonderful array of apparel would be a fruitless task. The variation is beyond the descriptive powers of the most imaginative mind. We assure you, however, that the collection is unique, extraordinary and comprehensive in Coats, Wraps and Suits. Nothing is missing that will interest the finest dressed women in the world.

Several of these garments are duplicated in our regular stocks up to $425. These will be reduced to the low price of the samples.

HYDE VETOES BILL FOR REDUCTION OF STATE INCOME TAX

Measure Would Have Lowered Rate to 1 Per Cent and Increased Exemption for Children to $400.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 9.—Gov. Hyde today vetoed the State income tax reduction bill, which would have lowered the rate of taxation from 1½ to 1 per cent, and would have increased the exemption on children from $200 to $400 for each child.

The reduction of one-half of one per cent in the rate, without the increase in the exemptions for children, would have saved St. Louis taxpayers approximately $1,000,000 this year. Further relief would have been afforded by the increasing of exemptions, but the extent of this relief cannot be figured definitely.

Gov. Hyde included reduction of the income tax in his recommendations to the Legislature. He said, in his veto message, that he was in favor of a reduction in the rate, but could not sign the bill passed by the Legislature. His two reasons for the veto, as announced, were:

"First—Because it applies not merely to income tax which may be collected in the future, but by its terms applies to the income tax for the year 1919 and each calendar year thereafter.

"Second—Because the attacks in the court upon the corporation franchise tax law have so unsettled the probable income of the State that it would be dangerous, until those attacks have been adjudicated and the matter finally settled, to further reduce the income of the State."

The Governor said that the measure, being retroactive, might have required the return of income tax revenue received by the State since August, 1919, when the increase from half of one per cent to 1½ per cent became effective. The collections last year, on the 1919 income, were at first made at the 1½ per cent rate, and later, when the Supreme Court decided that the lower rate had been legally in effect for the first seven months of 1919, a refund of 40 per cent was made to taxpayers.

Assessor Wollbrinck has estimated that the taxable incomes of St. Louis individuals and corporations for 1920, on which the income tax is payable this year, will amount to about $200,000,000. At the 1½ per cent this rate, this will yield a tax of $3,000,000. Reductions of the rate to 1 per cent would have saved the taxpayers one-third of the total, or about $1,000,000, besides the further saving which would have resulted from the increase in the exemptions for children.

MAYOR KIEL RECEIVES LETTER OF FELICITATION FROM BYRNES

Says After Reading Communication It Now Looks as if All Are With Him.

Mayor Kiel yesterday received a letter of felicitation from James W. Byrnes, who was defeated as the Democratic candidate for Mayor at last Tuesday's election. Byrnes' letter was as follows:

"My Dear Mr. Kiel: I have publicly announced that if I can be of any service to your administration for a better St. Louis you may command me, and I want to acknowledge the personal satisfaction which you no doubt have had in your reelection, and you may rest assured you have my very best wishes. To congratulate you would be too perfunctory. I sincerely hope for your every success, both personally and officially."

"It looks as if they are all with me now," said the Mayor, after reading the letter.

22,000 Cars for Kansas Wheat.

By the Associated Press.

TOPEKA, Kan., April 9.—An agreement to accumulate a surplus of 22,000 empty box cars in Kansas for initial movement of the 1921 wheat crop, was reached here today at a conference of the railroads and the Public Utilities Commission. This should in a large measure prevent recurrence of the car shortage, according to Clyde M. Reed, chairman of the commission.

Court Passes on Child's Discretion.

By the Associated Press.

TOPEKA, Kan., April 9.—A 7-year-old child is not presumed to have discretion such as to constitute contributory negligence, the Supreme Court held today, in affirming the judgment awarded by the Wyandotte County District Court against the Kansas City Railways Co. to Ralph and Maud Bellamy, parents of a child killed by a street car.

CHESTERTON AMAZED BY AMERICAN USE OF WOODEN HOUSES

especially the staleness of his English culture, but there is necessarily a similar staleness in our American culture. If Mr. Shaw's young man was still talking about Mathew Arnold and not about Mr. Yeats we are rather more likely to mention Emerson than Ezra Pound.

Whether this staleness is necessarily a disadvantage is, of course, a different question. But in any case it is true that the old American books were often the books of our childhood, even in the literal sense of the books of our nursery.

I know few men in England who have not left their boyhood to some extent lost and entangled in the forests of "Huckleberry Finn." I know few women in England, from the most revolutionary suffragette to the most carefully preserved Early Victorian, who will not confess to having passed a happy childhood with the "Little Women" of Miss Alcott. "Helen's Babies" was the first and by far the best book in the modern scriptures of baby-worship.

And about all this old-fashioned American literature there was an undefinable savor that satisfied, and even pleased, our growing minds.

Smell of Growing Things.

Perhaps it was the smell of growing things; but I am far more certain that it was not simply the smell of wood. Now that all the memory comes back to me, it seems to come back heavy in a hundred forms with the fragrance and the touch of timber. There was the perpetual reference to the woodpile, the perpetual background of the woods. There was something crude and clean about everything; something fresh and strange about those far-off houses, to which I could not then have put a name. Indeed, many things became clear in this wilderness of wood, which could only be expressed in symbol and even in fantasy.

I will not go so far as to say that it shortened the transition from Log Cabin to White House; as if the White House were itself made of white wood (as Oliver Wendell Homes said) "that cuts like cheese, but lasts like iron for things like these." But I will say that the experience illuminates some other lines by Holmes himself:

"Little I ask; my wants are few,
I only ask a hut of stone."

I should not have realized, in England, that he was already asking for a good deal even in asking for that. In the presence of this wooden world, the very combination of words seems almost a contradiction like a hut of marble, or a hovel of gold.

It was, therefore, with an almost infantile pleasure that I looked at all this promising expansion of fresh-cut timber; thought of the housing shortage at home. It was as if the logs were still living; and I might see a paling or a door grow larger before my eyes.

I know not by what incongruous movement of the mind there swept across me at the same moment the thought of things ancestral and hoary with the light of ancient dawns. The last war brought back body-armor; the next war may bring back bows and arrows. And I suddenly had a memory of old wooden houses in London; and a model of Shakespeare's town.

JUDGE HARTMANN TELLS OF WORK OF JUVENILE COURT

cited. However, as stated before, by far the greater number of delinquent children are merely mischievous. Often a warning or a short committment will adjust the dificulty. The probation officers themselves aid the Court in numerous cases by settling differences between parent and child out of court. The Juvenile Court is in session four days in the week, from 9 a. m. to 10:30 p. m., an average of 40 cases being disposed of each week.

The total number of delinquents for the year 1919 were 2240, including 1972 boys and 268 girls. In 1920 the total number was 1708, including 1484 boys and 224 girls. I may add here that the figures for the year 1921 will show a marked decrease in the number of delinquents brought before the Court, due to the energetic effort of probation officers, and the co-operation of parents.

In conclusion, permit me again to emphasize the need of co-operation in the home, between parent and child—a true companionship—father and mother should know with whom and where the child spends its time. No child should be brought before the Court except as a last resort, for when this occurs it is at least some proof that the school, the church and home have failed.

The test of a good Juvenile Court system is a constantly diminishing number of children brought before it, and this is attributed to the fact that the delinquent children of today are more carefully watched and served than ever before. Many are saved in their homes, many are brought back to normally satisfactory ways in the institutions, and it can truly be said that the sources of crime are being blocked by agencies like the Juvenile Court and the many private societies, who work with it intelligently and successfully.

WEEKS URGES LIFTING BAN ON SELLING ARMY GOODS ABROAD

Says Immense Surplus of Supplies Cannot Be Disposed of in America.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Secretary Weeks has asked chairmen of congressional military committees to urge lifting of the ban against the sale abroad of surplus army foodstuffs. Congress prohibited such sales abroad in an effort to reduce the cost of living.

No large demand has developed in this country, Mr. Weeks said, and most of the commodities remain in storage, including 80,000,000 pounds of canned beef.

"The American people apparently will not eat canned meat," Mr. Weeks said, "although I have eaten some of this food and cannot understand the apparent aversion to it."

FAMOUS RUSSIAN BANDIT KILLED DURING ATTACK ON PAY CAR

Schefchenko and Two Other Robbers Slain by Train Guards and Chinese Police.

By the Associated Press.

HARBIN, Feb. 26.—Schefchenko, the notorious Russian bandit, has been killed. The highwayman met his end while leading an attack on the paymaster's car of the Chinese Eastern Railroad.

In the past several attempts have been made to rob the pay-car. A short time ago a large stone was placed in the center of the right of way at one of the crossings and the train was forced to stop. Immediately four bandits began to fire on the train crew and occupants of the paymaster's car. The guards and the Chinese police overcame the outlaws and killed three of them, among whom was Schefchenko.

LIEUTENANT CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLEMENT IS ARRESTED

Naval Paymaster Will Face Trial on Charge of Taking $25,000 Payroll.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, April 10.—Lieut. Joseph J. Lynn, naval paymaster, whose disappearance three weeks ago was followed by charges of embezzlement of $25,000, was returned here from Montreal yesterday, arraigned before a Federal Commissioner and held in $25,000 bonds for the grand jury.

He claimed to be penniless, and to have wandered about Montreal hungry and without work after he fled there from Nashua, N. H., on March 18. His troubles were due, he insisted in an interview with Federal officers, not to embezzlement, but to a loss of $13,954 on a train between Washington and Boston. He attributed the loss to a pickpocket.

PREDICTS GERMAN MARKS WILL NEVER REGAIN THEIR VALUE

in the value of the mark put a great deal of money. There are also the foreign speculative holders of German currency. It has been estimated by the experts of the German Government that the amount of German money held abroad and of credits granted to Germany by foreigners, by far the greater part being in terms of paper marks, amounts to about 70 milliards of paper marks, of which something less than half is held in the form of actual German paper money. We can probably reckon, therefore, that the amount of German bank notes and bank balances held more or less speculatively outside Germany is not less than 50 milliards of paper marks. At the rate of exchange (250 marks equaling £1) these holdings are worth £200,000,000. But at par they would be worth £2,500,000,000, and even at 100 marks equaling £1 they would be worth £500,000,000. As a speculative holding of German notes yields the holder no interest, he presumably does not intend to keep them as a permanent investment, and is only waiting for an opportunity of realizing them at a profit. A permanent improvement in the value of the mark would entail, therefore, paying over to foreign speculators very large sums of money which would otherwise be available for reparation. There would be no great advantage to Germany in this; and the allies would hardly allow the claims of the speculators to rank in front of reparation.

Allied Objections.

In addition, therefore, to all the usual difficulties of reinstating a fallen currency, there are strong reasons in the case of Germany for thinking that a reinstatement cannot be undertaken. Germany has two classes of foreign creditors to deal with—the allies who have reparation claims which are expressed in terms of gold marks; and the foreign speculative holders of German bank balances and of German currency, which are in terms of paper marks. To increase the value of the paper mark in relation to the gold mark benefits the latter at the expense of the former. It is not particularly in the interests of the German Government to pay over huge sums to foreign speculators, and it is decidedly contrary to the interests of the allied Governments. Whatever temporary fluctuations there may be, it is therefore extremely unlikely to happen.

I do not expect, therefore, a permanent recovery in the value of the German paper mark. Possibly it might be stabilized at some very high figure to the pound sterling. But if the allies persevere with their reparation demands, the mark is much more likely to continue its fall, until the final stage is reached, when the simplest and most sensible course will seem to be to discard it altogether in favor of some new unit. Many a small holder of mark notes all over the world will keep them, I do not doubt, until, not for the first time in the history of paper money, they have become a valueless curiosity. And all this may happen, even though in the end Germany recovers a considerable measure of her economic strength.

especially the staleness of his English culture, but there is necessarily a similar staleness in our American culture. If Mr. Shaw's young man was still talking about Mathew Arnold and not about Mr. Yeats we are rather more likely to mention Emerson than Ezra Pound.

Whether this staleness is necessarily a disadvantage is, of course, a different question. But in any case it is true that the old American books were often the books of our childhood, even in the literal sense of the books of our nursery.

I know few men in England who have not left their boyhood to some extent lost and entangled in the forests of "Huckleberry Finn." I know few women in England, from the most revolutionary suffragette to the most carefully preserved Early Victorian, who will not confess to having passed a happy childhood with the "Little Women" of Miss Alcott. "Helen's Babies" was the first and by far the best book in the modern scriptures of baby-worship.

And about all this old-fashioned American literature there was an undefinable savor that satisfied, and even pleased, our growing minds.

Smell of Growing Things.

Perhaps it was the smell of growing things; but I am far more certain that it was not simply the smell of wood. Now that all the memory comes back to me, it seems to come back heavy in a hundred forms with the fragrance and the touch of timber. There was the perpetual reference to the woodpile, the perpetual background of the woods. There was something crude and clean about everything; something fresh and strange about those far-off houses, to which I could not then have put a name. Indeed, many things became clear in this wilderness of wood, which could only be expressed in symbol and even in fantasy.

I will not go so far as to say that it shortened the transition from Log Cabin to White House; as if the White House were itself made of white wood (as Oliver Wendell Homes said) "that cuts like cheese, but lasts like iron for things like these." But I will say that the experience illuminates some other lines by Holmes himself:

"Little I ask; my wants are few,
I only ask a hut of stone."

I should not have realized, in England, that he was already asking for a good deal even in asking for that. In the presence of this wooden world, the very combination of words seems almost a contradiction like a hut of marble, or a hovel of gold.

It was, therefore, with an almost infantile pleasure that I looked at all this promising expansion of fresh-cut timber; thought of the housing shortage at home. It was as if the logs were still living; and I might see a paling or a door grow larger before my eyes.

I know not by what incongruous movement of the mind there swept across me at the same moment the thought of things ancestral and hoary with the light of ancient dawns. The last war brought back body-armor; the next war may bring back bows and arrows. And I suddenly had a memory of old wooden houses in London; and a model of Shakspeare's town.

JUDGE HARTMANN TELLS OF WORK OF JUVENILE COURT

cited. However, as stated before, by far the greater number of delinquent children are merely mischievous. Often a warning or a short committment will adjust the dificulty. The probation officers themselves aid the Court in numerous cases by settling differences between parent and child out of court. The Juvenile Court is in session four days in the week, from 9 a. m. to 10:30 p. m., an average of 40 cases being disposed of each week.

The total number of delinquents for the year 1919 were 2240, including 1972 boys and 268 girls. In 1920 the total number was 1708, including 1484 boys and 224 girls. I may add here that the figures for the year 1921 will show a marked decrease in the number of delinquents brought before the Court, due to the energetic effort of probation officers, and the co-operation of parents.

In conclusion, permit me again to emphasize the need of co-operation in the home, between parent and child—a true companionship—father and mother should know with whom and where the child spends its time. No child should be brought before the Court except as a last resort, for when this occurs it is at least some proof that the school, the church and home have failed.

The test of a good Juvenile Court system is a constantly diminishing number of children brought before it, and this is attributed to the fact that the delinquent children of today are more carefully watched and served than ever before. Many are saved in their homes, many are brought back to normally satisfactory ways in the institutions, and it can truly be said that the sources of crime are being blocked by agencies like the Juvenile Court and the many private societies, who work with it intelligently and successfully.

WEEKS URGES LIFTING BAN ON SELLING ARMY GOODS ABROAD

Says Immense Surplus of Supplies Cannot Be Disposed of in America.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Secretary Weeks has asked chairmen of congressional military committees to urge lifting of the ban against the sale abroad of surplus army foodstuffs. Congress prohibited such sales abroad in an effort to reduce the cost of living.

No large demand has developed in this country, Mr. Weeks said, and most of the commodities remain in storage, including 80,000,000 pounds of canned beef.

"The American people apparently will not eat canned meat," Mr. Weeks said, "although I have eaten some of this food and cannot understand the apparent aversion to it."

FAMOUS RUSSIAN BANDIT KILLED DURING ATTACK ON PAY CAR

Schefchenko and Two Other Robbers Slain by Train Guards and Chinese Police.

By the Associated Press.

HARBIN, Feb. 26.—Schefchenko, the notorious Russian bandit, has been killed. The highwayman met his end while leading an attack on the paymaster's car of the Chinese Eastern Railroad.

In the past several attempts have been made to rob the pay-car. A short time ago a large stone was placed in the center of the right of way at one of the crossings and the train was forced to stop. Immediately four bandits began to fire on the train crew and occupants of the paymaster's car. The guards and the Chinese police overcame the outlaws and killed three of them, among whom was Schefchenko.

LIEUTENANT CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLEMENT IS ARRESTED

Naval Paymaster Will Face Trial on Charge of Taking $25,000 Payroll.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, April 10.—Lieut. Joseph J. Lynn, naval paymaster, whose disappearance three weeks ago was followed by charges of embezzlement of $25,000, was returned here from Montreal yesterday, arraigned before a Federal Commissioner and held in $25,000 bonds for the grand jury.

He claimed to be penniless, and to have wandered about Montreal hungry and without work after he fled there from Nashua, N. H., on March 18. His troubles were due, he insisted in an interview with Federal officers, not to embezzlement, but to a loss of $13,954 on a train between Washington and Boston. He attributed the loss to a pickpocket.

PREDICTS GERMAN MARKS WILL NEVER REGAIN THEIR VALUE

in the value of the mark put a great deal of money. There are also the foreign speculative holders of German currency. It has been estimated by the experts of the German Government that the amount of German money held abroad and of credits granted to Germany by foreigners, by far the greater part being in terms of paper marks, amounts to about 70 milliards of paper marks, of which something less than half is held in the form of actual German paper money. We can probably reckon, therefore, that the amount of German bank notes and bank balances held more or less speculatively outside Germany is not less than 50 milliards of paper marks. At the rate of exchange (250 marks equaling £1) these holdings are worth £200,000,000. But at par they would be worth £2,500,000,000, and even at 100 marks equaling £1 they would be worth £500,000,000. As a speculative holding of German notes yields the holder no interest, he presumably does not intend to keep them as a permanent investment, and is only waiting for an opportunity of realizing them at a profit. A permanent improvement in the value of the mark would entail, therefore, paying over to foreign speculators very large sums of money which would otherwise be available for reparation. There would be no great advantage to Germany in this; and the allies would hardly allow the claims of the speculators to rank in front of reparation.

Allied Objections.

In addition, therefore, to all the usual difficulties of reinstating a fallen currency, there are strong reasons in the case of Germany for thinking that a reinstatement cannot be undertaken. Germany has two classes of foreign creditors to deal with—the allies who have reparation claims which are expressed in terms of gold marks; and the foreign speculative holders of German bank balances and of German currency, which are in terms of paper marks. To increase the value of the paper mark in relation to the gold mark benefits the latter at the expense of the former. It is not particularly in the interests of the German Government to pay over huge sums to foreign speculators, and it is decidedly contrary to the interests of the allied Governments. Whatever temporary fluctuations there may be, it is therefore extremely unlikely to happen.

I do not expect, therefore, a permanent recovery in the value of the German paper mark. Possibily it might be stabilized at some very high figure to the pound sterling. But if the allies persevere with their reparation demands, the mark is much more likely to continue its fall, until the final stage is reached, when the simplest and most sensible course will seem to be to discard it altogether in favor of some new unit. Many a small holder of mark notes all over the world will keep them, I do not doubt, until, not for the first time in the history of paper money, they have become a valueless curiosity. And all this may happen, even though in the end Germany recovers a considerable measure of her economic strength.

STORY OF MURDER OF NOTED KOREAN

Japan Finally Authorizes Publication of Long-Suppressed Facts of Bingenshokin's Death.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

TOKIO, March 1.—The police having "released for publication" the details of the assassination of Bingenshoku, a well-known Korean, the Japanese public has been permitted to learn the full story of the crime, which, chiefly because of the secret attitude of the authorities, attained an importance rarely attributed to a political crime in Japan.

Bingenshoku is the Japanese equivalent for Wonsik Min, who was very prominent in Korea. He was the husband of the niece of Lady Om, the second consort of the late Emperor Yi of Korea. He was one of the foremost Koreans who attached himself to Japan's policy of assimilation in Korea and was opposed to the idea of the political independence of his country.

For this he is alleged to have incurred the hostility of the Korean revolutionary body. Bingenshoku came to Tokio carrying a petition to the Diet asking for the enfranchisement of Koreans on the same basis as the Japanese. At present no Korean has the right to vote.

The alleged assassin was arrested at Nagasaki as he was fleeing to Shanghai by steamer.

Korean Admits Murder.

According to the newspapers, the arrested man, a Korean named Ryo Kinkwan, confessed to the crime. He is declared to have stated to the police that he committed the murder on his own initiative because he believed the franchise movement started by Bingenshoqu and his compatriots was a serious menace to the independence movement. He was not incited by anybody in carrying out the murder. He was almost penniless and could not afford to buy a weapon so he went to a Japanese cinema actor by whom he was formerly employed as a rikisha puller while attending a private law school. He borrowed Y. 50 on the pretense that he wanted money to purchase a rikisha offered for sale.

With the money he purchased an old short sword at a secondhand curio shop. On the morning of the following day, Feb. 16, he telephoned to Bingenshoku asking for an interview, using a false name. He was told to come at once to the station hotel where Bingenshoku was staying. Having entered Bingenshoku's room the student told him that a body of young Koreans wanted him as their guest at a welcome meeting. A quarrel arose on the subject of enfranchisement, the student declaring that the Koreans wanted independence and not Japanese franchise. Suddenly Ryo Kinkwar, according to the alleged confession, drew the short sword from his sleeve and stabbed Bingenshoku in the right shoulder before the latter could rise from the table at which he was sitting.

Crying for help, Bingenshoku stood up, but another thrust sent him reeling to the floor. The assailant escaped by a window. He fled to Yokohama and boarded a steamer for Nagasaki and Shanghai.

According to the Hochi, Ryo Kinkwan was a member of a Tokio association of Korean malcontents who decided to assassinate Bingenshoku because they regarded him as a traitor to the cause of Korean independence.

The prohibition of publication of the assassination was followed by a determined campaign by Japanese newspapers against what they called a useless censorship which violated the liberty of the press, out of consonance with the ideas of modern Japan. The leader in the press movement of expostulation was S. Sheba, formerly of Honolulu, who recently became general manager of the Japan Times, a daily newspaper which is printed in the English language. Mr. Sheba, who claims that his newspaper represents Japanese public opinion, printed an open letter to Mr. Tokonami, the Home Minister, attacking the absolutism of the Government as a feudal policy contradictory to the rights of the press. He asserted that Japan was being cursed the world over for its bureaucratic methods and affirmed that Japan's policies both domestic and foreign would fail unless they were frank, truthful and straightforward. He added: "A Government which treats its own people as an ignorant mass will never stand; no nation that lies to the world will ever rise."

As a result of this letter the issue of the Times was seized. Several other Japanese newspapers were either suppressed of fined.

According to the police, Ryo Kinkwan was in constant communication with the Koreans in San Francisco, Shanghai and Chientao, Manchuria. He is a native of Hoanghai-do, Korea, the same province in which lived An Chhyong Keun, the assassin of Prince Ito.

UNLUCKY AT CARDS

By Mabel McElliott

(Copyright, 1921.)

I HAVE always been a fearful duffer at cards. And I'm glad of it! Yes, at afternoon things where I used to be dragged occasionally the people I played with simply hated me. How they glared when I did something stupid (as I never failed to do) and how desperately uncomfortable I used to be! Bridge? I never even attempted it. I simply hadn't that sort of mind and that was all there was to it. Yet I'm glad!

I may as well begin at the beginning and tell you all about it. It all happened because of a new frock Daphne had brought home for me. (Daphne is my older sister, in charge at Armin's, you know, that terribly smart shop on the avenue, where you simply can't touch a serge frock for less than two hundred and fifty. I know that sounds ridiculous, but it's perfectly true. At least it sounds ridiculous to me, as I'm used to having my dresses "run up" after hours, when Daphne's fagged out and not caring particularly whether it looks like a Lanvin or a Ceruit.)

You can't after seeing those cats of women all day. (That isn't nice, I know, but Daphne calls them that sometimes when she's had a bad day, and she's the most truthful person I know.) They come in, simply dripping with jewels, and the way they behave is simply frightful, she says. Rude's not quite the word for it. But never mind. I knew I should wander off the track of this story.

The black frock, mind you, had been a model in the window. It was just a bit crushed from handling and the tinsel ribbons had tarnished ever so little. Not enough for anyone to mind. I didn't. Daphne got it for a song, she said. She didn't mention the exact price, but I noticed she didn't lunch at Herbert's for weeks and weeks.

The frock was all frilly and delicious, and it fitted me exactly as if it had been cut to my measure. I simply adored it. I used to put it on and parade before my stingy little mirror. Even Lorentine, who almost never praises anything, said: "Your arms aren't half bad in that frock!"

That, from Lorentine, was wild enthusiasm.

But it was simply no use. Daphne and I were on the edge of things in this big town. Back home in Albermarle I should have had heaps of chances to wear it. Here there was simply not the ghost of one. We didn't know any men except the one who kept the delicatessen around the corner, the janitor and the one who brought the milk.

We had simply run away from Albemarle a year ago when she had fallen out of love—my tall, handsome sister—with Robin Wheeler. They had been engaged for about a fortnight when it happened. None of us knew exactly what did happen, but Daphne came in from a dancing party one night, terribly white and silent, and the next day she said we were to pack up and go East.

I, of course, had nothing much to say about it. Besides, when she was so abominably unhappy I wanted to get away with her, too. It was the only thing that could have helped the least little bit. And then Daphne got this really good job, or we couldn't possibly have stayed.

But it had been a queer, rather lonely time. There are times like that with all girls, you know, when men simply don't exist for them. (I know no man will believe that, but every woman will understand what I mean.)

The last year had been that sort for us both. I used to potter about town by myself, and at night we'd go to the movies or hear some music, and I read everything in sight. Daphne, of course, was busy all the day, and most of the time when she wasn't too tired she was thrilled by the fact that she was actually earning her living. It's a very nice feeling, she says.

It was only the frock that made me realize male companionship might be a thing to be desired.

So one night when my sister telephoned me she'd be kept late and that I was to have dinner without waiting for her I was simply drenched with loneliness and self-pity. After I got through my solitary meal I decided to amuse myself by getting "dolled" in my love of a frock.

I went through all the motions. I did my hair in my best style, and it did look rather nice, as it was only three days since it had been shampooed and in the beatific state it assumes about that time. I brushed it till it was exactly like copper silk. I enjoyed an orgy in Daphne's pet powder and I had just, with some difficulty, fastened myself up (yet, it can be done if one's sufficiently agile) when the bell rang.

Of course, there was no one else to answer the door. Our two rooms and kitchenette just about hold us, to say nothing of a maid, which we couldn't afford if we had space for one.

I gave one rather pleased, smug glance at myself in the hall mirror and flung open the door with a flourish.

What I expected to see was the bored countenance of Lorentine or Mrs. Pelham across the way, perhaps, asking if she might telephone her brother, who lives in "Joisey."

It was neither.

It was a man. A MAN!

I suppose you think it's queer, putting that unimportant word in capitals. You must try awfully hard to remember that I hadn't spoken to a really nice one for 12 whole months.

And this one was nice.

I couldn't have told you at once just what he was like. I knew in a vague sort of way that he had crinkly, red-brown hair and eyes the same color. He was quite young—27 or 28—and the light in our dim little hall told me he was in evening clothes.

"I am so fearfully sorry to disturb you," he said, in a nice British voice. "I'm very much afraid I've got the wrong door, although 6-A was the apartment number as I remember it. Does Miss Estelle Gregg still live here?"

I liked his voice so well that I let quite a full minute elapse before I answered. (The English have such a charming way of making commonplace words things of beauty, haven't they?)

Then: "It's the right apartment, I'm quite sure," I told him, "but Miss Gregg doesn't live here any more—hasn't for a whole year. My sister and I sublet this place from her."

I don't know what imp of garrulity made me go on. That was surely the place to smile with frigid politeness and shut the door on his shining boot, but I didn't.

"She's gone on tour with the 'Grey Domino' company," I chattered on. "I believe it's in Australia right now."

Gloom fell on the young man like a cloak.

"Australia!" he said, in such a disappointed voice. "On tour! Oh, yes! What rotten luck!" he muttered, striking the innocent door frame with his wicked looking stick.

I knew—I needed no one to tell me it was a soldier's stick. Harry, Daphne's and my very own half brother, had the same sort of one when he came home on leave from Canada. Harry—lying in an unmarked grave in France!

Something curiously sickening swept over me. It was awfully silly, but I just couldn't help it. I leaned against the door and put my hand over my eyes. What stupidity! The sight of a walking stick to make me sob like a baby idiot!

The nice young man was tremendously disturbed by the exhibition.

"I am sorry," he began in a distressed voice.

I went on, shaking and sobbing and feeling utterly miserable and a fool, when I felt a hankie, smelling beautifully of some excellent tobacco, being pressed into my hands.

He said in the kindest way: "Now, if there's anything I can help possibly, please tell me, and I'll do it."

Somehow that steadied me. I felt I'd simply got to stop trembling in that nonsensical manner. I sobbed out something entirely incoherent about Harry and the sight of his stick reminding me of my brother and the lovely old days in Albemarle. I told him how frightfully Daphne and I missed him, and it was partly because of that we'd come away from the town where the three of us had grown up so happily together. You never would have thought, to hear me bleating out all my troubles in that undiginified fashion, that I'm really a reserved sort of person—quite shy, usually.

The young man was the understanding sort, however.

He did the most astonishing thing.

He reached into the pocket of that woolly ulster of his and pulled out what I've heard soldiers call their "cold meat tag"—identification disk, you know.

"I don't know whether or not this will serve as introduction," he began, reddening, schoolboy fashion, to the very jagged white scar on his forehead. "But that's me—if you care to take my word for it." (I liked him for saying "that's me" instead of "that's I," even if it is correct. An ugly piece of locution, I've always called it.)

I read the letters scratched on the silver oval, blinking through my silly tears.

Oliver Risdale was his name.

"The Black Watch was my outfit," he supplied as I returned the bit of metal. "I've just this moment got back—this very afternoon. I was discharged from hospital the day before I left Trilby docks, and I'm fairly thirsting for a bit of gayety. That's why I got myself up in my gladdest togs and dashed straight over to Estelle Gregg's flat, hoping to carry her off to dance somewhere. Might have known she'd be working—but Australia! That's a fearful distance," he finished, so gloomily that I couldn't help arranging my woeful countenance into a smile.

"Do you know," went on my Black Watch Captain—I found out the Captain part later. "Do you know, I'm most fearfully tempted to be cheeky enough to beg you to take pity on me? Can't we take your sister with us as chaperon and have some sort of party? You'd be conferring the most tremendous favor on me. You see, I don't know any girls in this town, and I can't celebrate all alone."

"Daphne's not at home," I told him, knowing I ought dignifiedly to have shut the door in his good-looking face (Any nice girl would have done it, I can hear you say.) Of course, I might have got out by saying I'd another engagement, which would have certainly sounded plausible enough. But, somehow, I couldn't.

I thought of Harry, lonely, starving for gayety, in a strange land, in London, perhaps, when he went over with the Princess Pats, as he did before we got into the fight. I thought how I'd hate any English girl who'd "turn down" my darling brother. After all, I reasoned, what were we women given our much-talked-about intuitive sense for if not to help us in just such emergencies?

My intuition told me this man was quite all right, my own sort—the kind I could go about with in perfect happiness and safety. Daphne, of course, would have been horrified at the bare notion. But she was not there! What was that silly phrase everyone was bandying about three or four years ago? Oh, yes—"all dressed up and no place to go!" The two of us were in exactly that fix. It might be mad—it might be most awfully unladylike and imprudent, but I'd do it!

Something of all this must have shown itself in my face in the half-minute that flew by as he waited for my answer. When I said "all right," in a breathless sort of voice he remarked matter of factly, "Righto. Now, if you'll just fly into your cloak I'll be back in three secs with a taxi. Better leave a note for the absent sister, so she won't be distracted when she comes home."

And before I'd time to change that mercurial mind of mine he'd disappeared in the direction of the elevator.

I was so excited I pulled down half the things in the closet before I finally emerged triumphantly with Daphne's best evening wrap, a lovely blue thing, collared in soft gray fur. And I had just time to scrawl the hastiest explanation to my sister when the bell rang and the pleasant British voice halloed up the tube.

I didn't care who said what! There was nothing to do but go through with it.

The elevator girl, who always talks to me with the keenest interest, of the weather and kindred thrilling subjects, fastened her gimlet eyes on me as I rode down with her. I could just hear her giving my sister a thorough account of how I looked as I went out "with that tall young gentleman, miss!" She would be sure to say that!

He bundled me into a cab with the air of having done nothing else all his life. How miraculously those men shed their three and four years of filth and horror over there! They are marvels, all of them, with their renewed zest for life and its good things. I felt a glow and pride and genuine patriotic enthusiasm to think that I, Joyce O'Connor, should be helping this soldier to enjoy his first night of fun in New York.

And we did have a nice time! First it was the theater. We were a bit late, of course, but it was a musical revue, so it didn't matter. We got in just as eight pretty girls were singing some tinkling tune about love and a moon. You know—the usual thing! I hadn't seen a musical show for a long time, and I loved every inch of it.

When we came out Capt. Risdale said: "Must dance somewhere, must not we? If you think your sister will be dreadfully alarmed we'll stop as we go by and put her fear to rest."

I was determined not to miss one moment of that glorious evening. Besides, I had fibbed in my note to Daphne. I had said that Horace Lane, one of the boys she had gone to school with, had come to town and that we had "gone stepping" together. I knew it was no good frightening her to death by announcing I had trailed off with an utter stranger. She would have had every single policeman in the city scouring about for me.

So, offhandedly, I said: "I really don't think she'll be frantic. We needn't stop."

So that was that, as Lorentine always says. (It means nothing, but it's a useful sentence to have knocking about.)

It was 1:30 by my tiny watch when I let myself in, very softly, with the latchkey I had thoughtfully taken with me. Daphne, pale and lovely in her lilac dressing gown, came down the hall. She had a book in her hand, and she was yawning.

"Have a nice time, darling?" she said, putting her hand up to her hair, which had tumbled down a bit, showing that faint streak of white that grows, like a soft feather, amid the lovely black mass of curling locks. (Daphne is not quite 26, and that peak of white is somewhat of a trial to her.)

I said it was, with the sudden tightening of my heart that told me how very, very glad I was he had not forgotten that rude creature, Joyce O'Connor, existed.

"This is Oliver Risdale," he went on. (As if I needed to be told whom those honey and treacle tones belonged to!) "I've just rung up to say I'd got seats for old Scarborough's show for Tuesday night. You said Tuesday was all right, did not you?"

"Yes" seemed to be my only word that day, so I said it again.

"I say," went on mon capitaine cheerily, "you'll wear that sparkling black and silver thing you'd on the first night I saw you, won't you? Ripping frock, I call it. Righto! Good-by-ee."

(Astonishing creatures, men.)

(Fancy his noticing it!)

The Scarborough expedition was only the first of many we took together, we two, and sometimes we three, for often Daphne consented to be lured forth to frivol with us.

Oliver—O yes, we called him that by Christmas time—remarked one night: "If I may say so, your sister is a great little sportswoman."

It was apropos of nothing, but Daphne had had rather a hard day and was looking a bit fagged under all her loveliness. I suspected, too, that she'd had some news that depressed her. A letter from home, perhaps! That Robin Wheeler person, I'll wager, had gone and engaged himself to Vera Webbis. (You see, Daphne had let it out to me that it was over a girl they had quarreled. Robin had paid exaggerated court to her one night at the club, and Daphne had been so hideously proud she wouldn't listen to any explanation. I didn't blame her the least little bit.)

TUBERCULOSIS CATTLE TEST IN STATE FACES TEMPORARY HALT

Emergency Appropriation by Congress Necessary to Continue Work Until June 30.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 9.—The work of tuberculosis eradication among cattle in Missouri will come to a partial standstill until July 1 unless Congress authorizes an emergency appropriation to take care of the Federal share of indemnities paid to owners of cattle which have to be destroyed, according to State authorities carrying on this work.

A telegram from Dr. R. Mohler, chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry, Washington, to Dr. Ralph Graham, U. S. inspector in charge in Missouri, announce that the Federal appropriation for the year ending June 30, for the payment of indemnity on tuberculosis cattle, has been exhausted. The telegram carries the order not to test any more herds of cattle unless the owner will waive Federal indemnity.

Congress made an appropriation of $2,000,000 to cover tuberculosis eradication work, but this fund will not be available until July 1. The State and Federal Governments each has five men in the Missouri field. Unless an emergency appropriation is made by the special session of Congress, no new contracts can be filled for State-Federal tests until July 1. These men cannot undertake official State-Federal tests on herds except such hers as have passed one sound test, but upon which another official test is necessary to place them on the "accredited list."

HERODOTUS' THREE BEST STORIES AS READ BY LECTURER

Mississippi U. Professor Says if Greek Historian Were Alive He Would Be Magazine Writer.

LOVE AND ADVENTURE HIS MAIN THEMES

Tales Declared to Be, With Exception of Book of Ruth, Oldest Genuine Short Stories in Existence.

Herodotus was the first short story writer, yet so little has the public's taste in short stories changed in 2300 years that he probably would be writing for the very best fiction magazines if he were alive now, Prof. Alfred W. Milden of the University of Mississippi said recently in an address before the Classical Association of the Middle West and South at Hotel Statler, on "Herodotus as a Short Story Teller."

There may be some significance, Prof. Milden humorously pointed out, in the fact that the first short story writer was also "the Father of History," and might explain the alleged tendency of some later historians to incline to romance rather than to fact in some parts of their narratives. As for Herodotus, he indulged in no hypocrisy about the matter, and boldly admitted to his friends that a good story was a good story, while a fact was only a fact.

Searched for "Local Color."

As Greek scholars know, Herodotus lived and spun his yarns some 450 years before Christ. Like more modern authors, he traveled around in search of "local color," and he had the added advantage of being free to a certain degree of authentic criticism. When he said that Arion rode on the dolphin's back, nobody dared dispute him, because the characteristics of the dolphin were not generally known, and there were no encyclopedias to look it up in.

The stories ran generally to adventure, love and chance, but Herodotus did not write "clever" stories, and he avoided the sex motif. Prof. Milden read what he considered the three best of Herodotus' short stories, which, he said, with the possible exception of the story of Ruth, in the Bible, appear to be the oldest genuine short stories in existence. The stories follow:

Arion and the Dolphin.

The story goes that Arion, who had spent the largest part of his time at the court of Periander, conceived the idea of a voyage to the western world of Sicily and Italy to amass by his skill a large fortune, and return once more to Corinth. So now he was starting on his return to the port of Tarentum, and with utmost trust in the honor of Corinthian men, had chartered a ship manned entirely by them.

But, when out in the open sea, they conspired to throw Arion overboard and secure his fortune. Reading their minds, he made this plea: That they take his money, but spare his life. When this was of no avail, the crew gave him his choice of either making away with himself, to be buried ashore, or of leaping into the sea with all possible speed.

Though driven to the point of sheer desperation, he won this concession—that, with their approval, he be allowed to stand in full minstrel attire, and sing in the midst of the rowers, and when his song was ended, he would make away with himself.

It gave added relish to their thoughts that they were going to listen to the finest singer in the world, as he wended his way from the rear to the center of the ship. Then arrayed in full minstrel garb, lyre in hand, taking his stand among the benches, he played through the Orthian measure, and, as the closing strains died away, hurled himself into the sea, just as he was.

So the crew sailed gaily away to Corinth, but as for Arion, the dolphin, they tell us, came to his rescue and bore him on his back in safety to the port of Taenarum.

No sooner was he on land then he made his way, in all his minstrel attire, to Corinth, and, on his arrival, related everything that had happened. But Periander, quite incredulous, put Arion in guard, allowing him no liberty whatever, while keeping a sharp lookout for the Corinthian crew.

On their arrival in port they were duly summoned, and inquiry was made for information about Arion. After they had told how he was in good health over in Italy, and how they had left him living in affluence at Tarentum, Arion suddenly confronted them, looking exactly as when he had leaped into the sea.

Startled from their composure and accused of the crime, they could no longer deny it.

This is the story the Corinthians and the Lesbians tell, and there is still standing at Taenarum, the bronze memorial figure of Arion—the figure of a man riding on a dolphin.

The Story of Hippoclides.

(Or—The Evils of Dancing.)

Clisthenes, the son of Aristonymus, the grandson of Myron, the great-grandson of Andreas, had a daughter whose name was Agariste. His ambition for her was to pick out the very best of all the Greeks and make her a present in marriage to him. So in the course of the Olympic games and in the hour of victory in the four-horse chariot race, Clisthenes made proclamation that any Greek who thought himself good enough to become Clisthenes' son-in-law should report at the end of 60 days, or sooner, at Sicyon, the understanding being that Clisthenes would carry out the contract within one year from that date. Then all the Greeks who felt elation either over themselves or their native land resorted there as suitors, and for their benefits Clisthenes constructed a racetrack and a wrestling ground to meet this very situation.

Now from Italy came Smindyrides, the son of Hippocrates of Sybaris, by far the greatest Sybarite of his day, and Sybaris was never so prosperous as then, and with him came Damasus from the city of Siris, where his father's wisdom was the talk of the town. These were Italy's contestants. The sole representative of the lower Adriatic region was a man of Epidamnus (Durazzo), Amphimnestus, son of Epistrophus. Aetolia sent Males; it was his brother, Titormus, that had no match in physical strength, and withal was so shy he would run for

EDITORIAL
I Received a Letter This Week From a Friend in Germany

She lives in a small town in Northern Germany, which we visited previous to the war. She writes:

"On account of the high cost of petroleum for lamp light, the village has installed an electric plant, and we will soon have electric light; our family are all so happy about it."

Let us encourage and help the German people, as well as all foreigners in this country, who wish to do right and become naturalized citizens.

Is it not a privilege to have a chance to help and encourage even one person every day?

his life to avoid the gaze of his fellowmen. From Peloponnesus came Leocedes, the son of Phidon, King of the Argives; his father was the Phidon who gave the Peloponnesians their standard weights and measures, and was guilty of the most flagrant disregard of justice of all the Greeks in removing from office the Elean judges of contest and taking to himself the presidency of the Olympic games. It was his son that came, and with him Amiantus, an Arcadian from Trapezus, whose father was Lycurgus; also Laphanes, an Azanian from the city of Paeus, whose father, Euphorian, according to the tale current in Arcadis, entertained the twin brethren, the Diecuri, in his own home, and thereafter kept open house for all comers, and Omamastus the Elean, son of Agaeus. These four hailed from the Peloponnesus, while from Athens arrived Megacles, the son of the Alcmaeon that visited Croesus, and in addition Hippoclides, the richest and comeliest Athenion. Eretria, never more prosperous than then, sent Lycaniae, Euboea's sole dependence. Thessaly sent one of the Scopadae, a citizen of Crannon, Diactroides, while the Molossians sent Alcon. This was the roster of the suitors.

Test at Banquet Table.

Now when all had arrived within the time prescribed, Clisthenes first made inquiry of each concerning his country and his family, and after this he kept them with him for a year and tested thoroughly their manly bearing, their disposition, their training, and their temperament, by meeting them in personal conferences and in general gatherings. It was his custom also to conduct the younger members of the group to the various gymnasia, but it was at the banquet table that he made his most searching test. During their entire stay he pursued this course, at the same time entertaining them elaborately. Somehow the most favorable impression was made by the suitors that came from Athens, and of these, Hippoclides, Tisander's son, was in special favor, partly because of his manly bearing, and partly because he traced his lineage to the Gypselids of Corinth.

When the day appointed for the celebration of the marriage was at hand, and Clisthenes had to render his decision as to which one of the suitors he adjudged the best, he secrificed a hundred oxen and gave an elaborate feast both to the suitors themselves and to the whole population of Sicyon. When the dinner was over, the suitors entered a contest in music and public speaking. As the banquet continued, and the wine flowed freely, Hippoclides, who was leading the others by a large margin, gave direction to the flute-player to strike up a dance-measure, and, as he did so, the suitors danced. To be sure, his dancing was well-pleasing to himself, but the attitude of Clisthenes, who looked on and saw it all, changed to one of distrust.

"Danced His Wife Away."

Then, after a brief respite, Hippoclides bade an attendant to bring in a table, and when the table was brought in, first he danced upon it Laconian figures, then Attic for a change, and, thirdly, standing on his head upon the table, he gesticulated with his legs.. The first and second time he danced, Clisthenes was filled with loathing at the thought of Hippoclides for a son-in-law by reason of his dancing and his shamelessness, and yet, wishing to avoid a break, managed to restrain himself; but when he saw him gesticulating with his legs, he could no longer restrain himself, but cried out, "Son of Tisander, thou hast danced thy wife away!" And hence this saying arouse.

Then Clisthenes called for silence, and spoke before the assembled multitude as follows:

"Gentlemen, and suitors for the hand of my daughter, I have only words of commendation for all of you, and if it were in my power, I would confer this favor on every one of you, without singling out one of you for special distinction or rejecting the rest; but, as it is an impossibility in making my award of but a single maiden to please all alike, I grant as a bonus to those of you who are disappointed in the matter of this marriage a silver talent to each one as a slight token of my appreciation of his high regard for my family and in recognition of his long absence from home; but to Alcmaeon's son, Megacles, I give in marriage my daughter, Agariste, in accordance with the customs of Athens." And when Megacles said: "I accept the trust," Clisthenes had the marriage solemnized.

The Ring of Polycrates.

Of all the Greek tyrants none seems to have been more powerful than Polycrates, tyrant of Samos, whose rise to power, and tragic downfall was most spectacular. From 535 B. C. till his crucifixion in 522 B. C., he was a most prominent figure and personality in the Aegean area. He had reached a clear conviction of the value of sea-power for a Greek state. It is more than likely that the breach of contract that took place between Amasis, King of Egypt, and himself originated with Polycrates, for when Cambyses, King of Persia made his invasion of Egypt in 525 B. C., he was offered a naval contingent by the Samian tyrant. It is in connection with this tyrant that one of the most interesting short stories is told. It runs somewhat as follows:

Now while Cambyses was engaged in his expedition against Egypt, the Spartans also made an expedition against Samos and against Polycrates, who had taken pessession of Samos through a revolt. At first he had divided the city into three parts and shared his power with his brothers, Pantagnotus and Syloson; but later he killed one of them, expelling the younger one, Syloson, and so acquired possession of the whole of Samos. While in control he contracted a guest-friendship with Amasis, the King of Egypt, sending him gifts and receiving from him others in return.

Presently within a brief period the powers of Polycrates began to grow, and it was heralded throughout Ionia and the rest of Greece; for everywhere he was minded to make an expedition, the outcome was always favorable to him. Moreover, he was the owner of a hundred 50-oared galleys, and a thousand archers were at his command. With these he would plunder right and left, sparing none; for it was a favorite remark of his that he would gratify his friend more by restoring to him what he had taken than if he had not taken it at all.

He had taken by capture many of the islands, and many cities of the mainland besides; among his victims were Lesbians, who had gone with their entire fighting strength to the assistance of the Milesians, only to be taken in a battle at sea, and were forced to dig, while working in chains, the entire trench that surrounds the Samian wall.

Somehow or other, the growing good fortune of Polycrates did not pass unnoticed by Amasis; on the contrary, it caused him no little concern. But when his prosperity increased by leaps and bounds, he wrote in a letter the following and dispatched it to Samos: "Thus saith Amasis to Polycrates: It is a pleasant thing indeed to hear that one who is a friend and guest is faring well; but personally I am displeased at thy great good fortune, knowing as I do the jealousy of the godhead; and, somehow or other, I desire for myself and for the friends for whom I care success in part, and in part failure, and to spend my life in this manner with alternations of each, rather than to have unbroken success. For I have never yet heard tell of anyone who succeeded in everything and did not ultimately reach an evil end, root and branch.

"Now, therefore, give heed to me, and in the matter of thy success do as follows: Give careful thought to the matter of which possession thou dost prize the most, and, at a loss of which, thou wilt suffer the deepest mortification of the soul, and get rid of it in such a way as that it will never be seen by human eyes again. If thereafter good fortune does not alternate with evil, then continue to seek a remedy in the way suggested by me."

Flung Away Signet Ring.

After reading this communication, Polycrates realized that Amasis had made him a happy suggestion, and began to search for that one of his treasures the loss of which would depress his spirits most, and searching, he made the following discovery. He had a signet ring which he was in the habit of wearing, an emerald set in gold, with the workmanship of Theodoris, the son of Telecies, a Samian. The moment his mind was made up to fling it away, he did as follows: Manning a 50-oared galley with oarsmen and embarking, he gave orders to put out to sea, and when he was a great distance from the island he took the signet ring in the presence of all his companions on the ship and hurled it into the sea. This done, he sailed for home, and arriving at his palace, mourned his loss.

But the fifth and sixth day following, he had this experience: A fisherman who had caught a large and beautiful fish thought it ought to be presented to Polycrates as a gift; so he made his way to the gate of the palace and said that he wished to see Polycrates, and when his request was granted, he said, as he offered the fish:

"Your Majesty, when I caught this fish, I did not think it right to carry it to the market, although dependent upon my own efforts for a livelihood, but I thought it worthy of yourself and your empire. Permit me, therefore, to present it to you." Pleased with this happy speech, the monarch thus replied:

"It was exceedingly good of you, and I am doubly in your debt, alike for your words and your gift; we invite you to dine with us." Greatly elated over this honor, the fisherman returned to his home; but as for the fish, the servants cutting it open found lodged in its belly Polycrates' signet ring. The moment they set eyes on it and recovered it, they carried it in great glee to Polycrates, and as they handed the ring to him they told him how it came to be found. Impressed with the miraculous character of the occurrence, he wrote the whole story in a letter, both what he had done and what had happened to him, and when it was written he dispatched it to Egypt.

No sooner had Amasis read the letter that came from Polycrates than he perceived that it was impossible for a man to extricate his fellow men from the fate that is in store for them, and that Polycrates was marked out for no good end, because of his unvarying prosperity—a man who actually finds what he throws away. So he sent a herald to him at Samos and told him that their guest-friendship was a. an end.

The reason he did this was that in event of some great and dire misfortune overtaking Polycrates he might not suffer the distress of mind which he would be sure to experience in the case of a man who was his guest-friend.

WASHING WON'T RID HEAD OF DANDRUFF

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

GREASES
ST. LOUIS U.S.A.

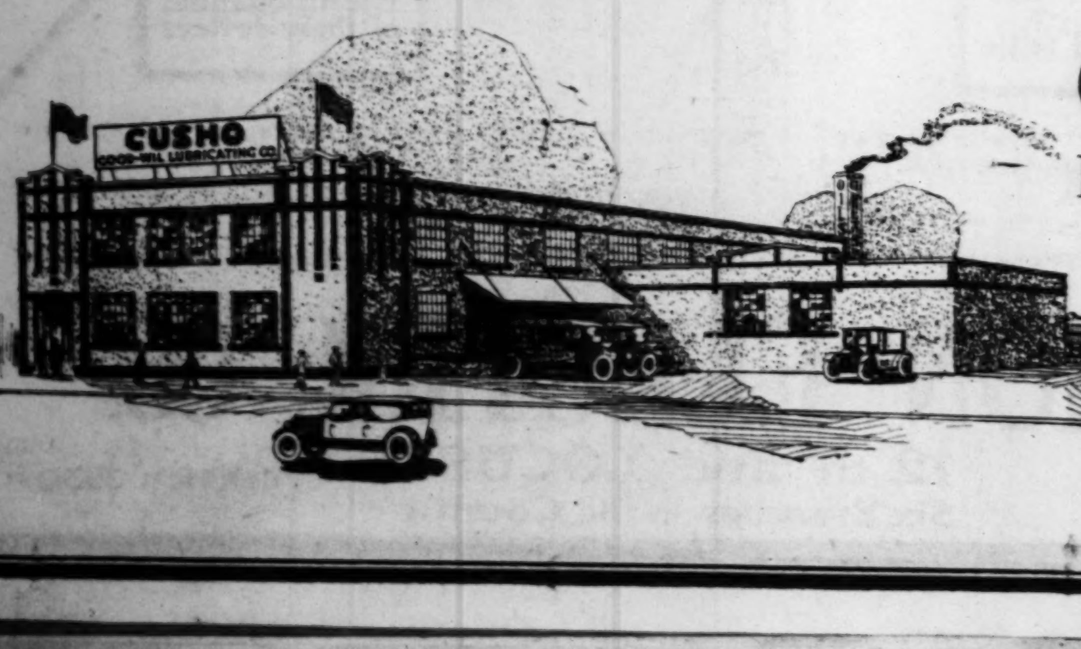
The Transmission Grease that travels with the gears and delivers full service under all conditions

The men who will sell Cusho—

The men who are selling Cusho now are the men who have been selling it for the past year. But Cusho is being made now on a much larger scale. So more men will be needed in the selling organization. These men must measure up to a high standard. Men who can demonstrate their ability to produce in a bigger than ordinary way can find a place on the Cusho salesforce where they can make bigger than ordinary incomes. This kind of men, whether or not they have had experience in greases and oils, are invited to write or call at our St. Louis office.

The New Cusho Factory

Below is the picture of the new Cusho factory in the north side industrial section of St. Louis. This factory, completed and ready for operation, can produce daily in excess of five carloads of lubricating oils and greases.



CUSHO is a transmission grease that sticks—it sticks till it is actually wiped off. When the gears are in motion a thin ribbon of Cusho travels with the gears, forming a cushion that carries the load—eliminates friction and saves the gears.

And Cusho will do this at three hundred degrees of temperature or down below zero. Cusho will hold to the gears even if they are working in water.

Cusho will not congeal or flake, gum or harden.

For Cusho is one hundred per cent lubricant. Cusho can be melted under the blow torch, and will immediately cool to its original form without carbon, grit or residue.

Cusho must be some grease—it certainly is!

Cusho can do all this—because it has done it all. For over a year, within a limited territory, Cusho has served all transmission needs with a practical perfection beyond any other grease that we know of.

Cusho, tried and proven, is now being produced in quantities sufficient to take care of the needs of a larger territory. A brand-new St. Louis factory has just been completed for the production of Cusho.

And He Has Too Much Rich Red Blood For Me

Says the Vampire of iron-starvation—don't let him get you—keep plenty of iron in your blood.

of the Blood Ruins the Health of Thousands

Look at the pale, thin, watery blooded creatures in this picture—see how they are struggling, trying to get away from the merciless vampire of iron-starvation which holds them tight by a stout, cruel cord they cannot see.

Their lack of BODILY AND MENTAL VIGOR; their inability to do a day's work without being all fagged out, their bad luck; LACK OF BRAIN POWER to think right and the WILL POWER to battle against obstacles, their frequent headaches, backaches, nervous irritability and the great devitalizing weakness brought on by lack of iron in the blood, tells them something is wrong BUT THEY DO NOT KNOW WHAT.

They all envy the strong, keen, red blooded man with plenty of iron in his blood, who, in spite of "hard times" or other obstacles has the "dominant force," "will power," physical and mental strength to enable him to GO OUT AND WIN and BRING HOME THE "CASH" while they tug in vain to break the bonds that hold them fast.

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Thousands of nervous, rundown men and women who were weak and ailing all the while, have surprisingly increased their strength and endurance in two weeks' time in many instances, by this simple experiment.

Over 4,000,000 people annually are using NUXATED IRON. It will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain satisfactory results. Beware of substitutes. Always insist on having genuine organic iron—NUXATED IRON.

Look for the letters N. I. on every tablet. At all druggists.

Which Man in This Picture is YOU?

The strong, keen, red blooded, successful man who laughs at the vampire of iron-starvation or ARE YOU one of the poor unfortunate persons who have been caught by this merciless wrecker of human health—if the latter, NUXATED IRON will help set you free and make you a strong, healthy, robust, successful man.

PEONS ON ARGENTINE RANCHES TURN OUTLAWS

Band of 1000 Burns, Loots Buildings, Drives Away Stock in Santa Cruz Territory.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, March 9.—The Far South of the Argentine Republic has been the scene lately of a series of adventures the account of which reads as though it had been lifted from some United States story of the "Wild West" in its palmy days of lawlessness.

Peons of some of the ranches of the territory of Santa Cruz, dissatisfied with the humdrum life of sheep shearing and sheep tending which is the occupation of the great majority of the people in those remote regions, converted themselves into a band of bushrangers and commenced to hold up the inhabitants in the best Jesse James style. Their example was quickly followed by their fellows on many other establishments and among them they soon "mobilized" formidable gangs of desperadoes which terrorized the best parts of the territory with absolute impunity. Their number was estimated at over 1000.

The bandits, who were well armed with rifles and mounted on the best horses, raided all the likeliest establishments, burned the buildings, stole all the valuables to be found and obliged the employes to join their ranks. Even when they omitted this last outrage they would leave the owner and his employes in a helpless position by carrying off all the horses on the place.

In certain instances they did a great deal of wanton damage such as the wrecking of shearing machinery and the cuting of boundary fences. The panic they caused among the sheep farmers and others was so great that many of them abandoned their properties and fled. The police had more than one encounter with the "enemy" but suffered defeat with many casualties.

The Argentine Government finally sent calvary to deal with the bandits. Some of the milder spirits among the "rebels" gave themselves up while others, numbering about 200, took to the mountains, and still others fled to the adjoining territory of Chubut, where they are reported still to be making trouble.

WITH FARM LABOR PLENTIFUL FARMERS ARE DICTATING TERMS

Unemployment in Cities Bringing Drift to Rural Districts—Pay Lower Than Last Year.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 9.—Widespread unemployment in cities has created a drift back to the farm and relieved the farm labor shortage brought about during the war, reports of Federal and state employment bureaus reveal.

Farmhands in the great grain belt of the central states are reported plentiful at wages greatly reduced as compared with a year ago.

Farmers, who for several years have been forced to grant almost any concessions to labor to bring their crops through, are in a position this year to dictate terms of employment, according to employment agency officials. Then, too, the farmer faces the problem this year of holding down the cost of production because of the low prices of farm products and generally is trying to get along with as little help as possible.

Farm wages in Kansas this year average $40 a month, board and lodging, or about $20 less than a year ago, the free employment bureau in that State reports. W. H. Lewis, Missouri Labor Commissioner, declares "there probably will not be any shortage of farm labor this year and wages probably will be much lower than in any year since 1915."

In North Dakota a survey disclosed that farm labor for spring and summer work was plentiful at from $30 to $40 a month, as compared with wages of from $50 to $60 a month paid last year.

In Illinois the State Department of Labor reports farmhands going back to the farms and accepting the cut in wages.

Kansas farmers are demanding experienced men after worrying along for several years with any sort of labor that presented itself, according to officials of the Kansas Free Employment Bureau. Experienced applicants are being located as fast as they apply, however, while there are 16 applicants for every job open in other lines of industry, the records show.

The bureau warns that farmhands who venture to define how many hours a day they are willing to work stand a poor chance of getting jobs.

The general scale recognized in Kansas, the principal growing State, according to bureau officials, runs: For experienced hands, from $25 to $50 a month (according to experience) for single men, and from $40 to $65 for married men who are willing to live on farms with their families. Last year, the peak of farm wages, the scale ran $40 to $65 for single men and $50 to $80 for married men.

The imediate prospect is that harvest wages this year will be around $5 a day, as compared with $7 last year, the Kansas bureau reports.

Will Celebrate Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Wehrmann of 2317 Sullivan avenue will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary with a reception Wednesday afternoon at their residence. Wehrmann, who is 79 years old, and his wife, who is 74, were both born in Germany. She was formerly Miss Amelia Peters. Seven children are living. They also have 17 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

CINCINNATI PLANS SEASON OF OPEN AIR GRAND OPERA

CINCINNATI.—Educational and musical forces of this city have collaborated to offer what is believed to be the most comprehensive repertoire of open-air grand opera ever presented in the United States, at prices ranging from 25 cents to $1 an admission.

Beginning June 26, in the new opera pavilion of the Zoological Park, the season will open with "Aida," and will be followed by "Faust," "Romeo and Juliette," "Carmen," "Pagliacci," "Cavalleria," "Otella," "La Giaconda," "Lohengrin," "Martha," "Hansel and Gretel," "Il Trovatore," "Tales of Hoffman," "La Traviata," "Barber of Seville," "Don Pasquale," "Rigoletto" and "Lucia di Lammermoor."

The musical director, Ralph Lyford, who conducts opera classes at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, will fill the minor roles, the ensemble groups and smaller orchestra parts with music students of Cincinnati. All principal roles will be sung by experienced professionals of established reputation. The orchestra will be made up of members of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. Every educational and musical institution of the city is active in promoting the season.

Scenery, costumes and staging will be of the best, although the prices will be like those of the popular performances of European cities in pre-war days.

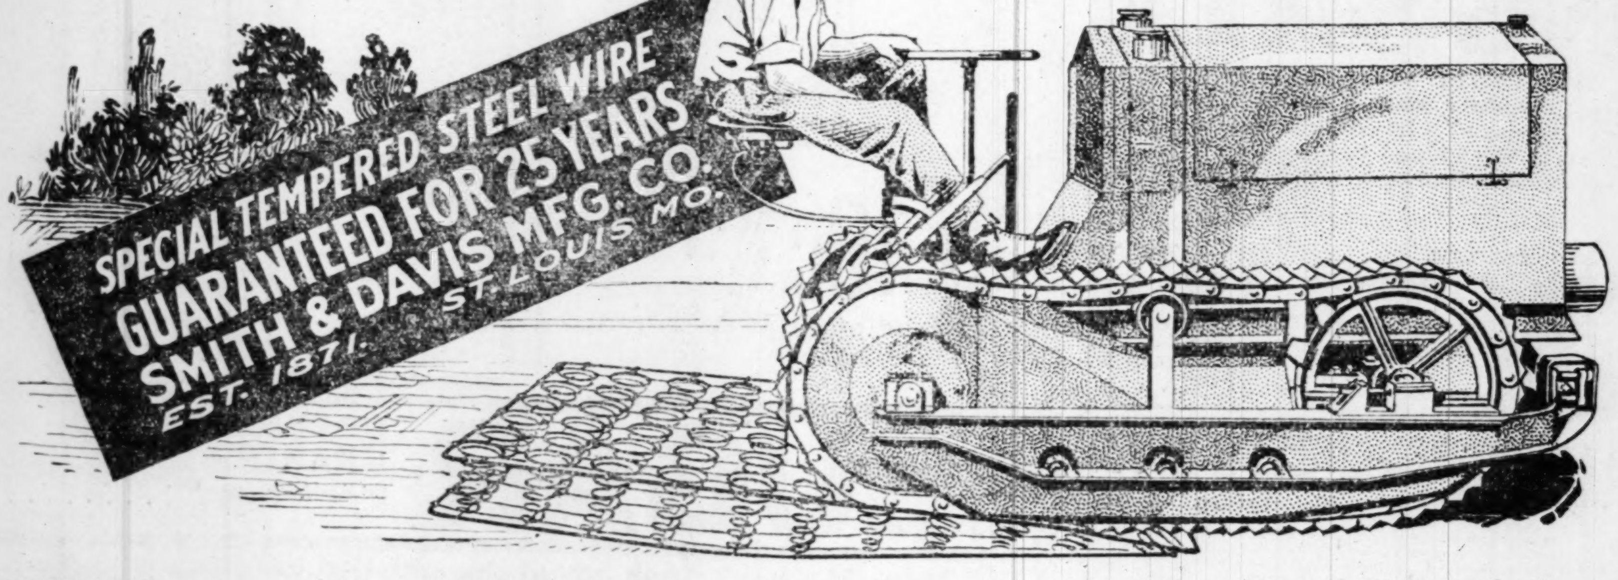
An Essandee Bed Spring

This bright red guarantee tag is of steel and is firmly attached to every Smith & Davis Spring.

Drawn from a photograph, the original of which is in the possession of the Smith & Davis Manufacturing Company.

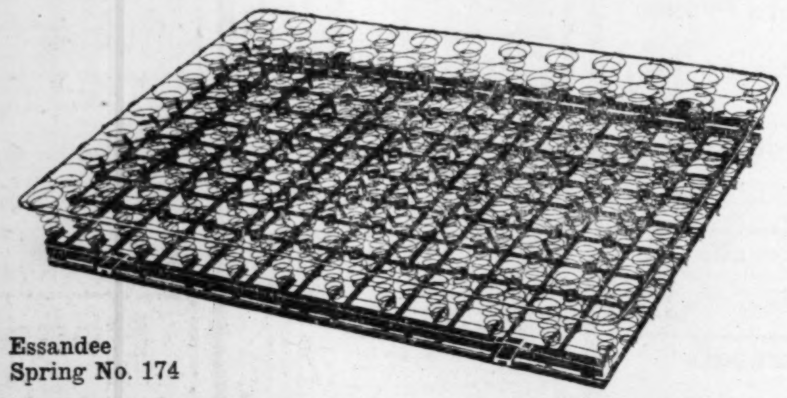


SPECIAL TEMPERED STEEL WIRE
GUARANTEED FOR 25 YEARS
SMITH & DAVIS MFG. CO.
EST. 1871. ST LOUIS MO.

THIS was convincingly demonstrated, as shown by the above drawing, made from an actual photograph. Not once, but time after time the heavy tractor traveled over this Essandee Spring without inflicting the least damage. Despite the unmerciful ordeal this wonderful structure still continued to spring back, ready for more abuse.

For fifty long years the Smith & Davis Manufacturing Company has been making these indestructible Bed Springs for people who insist on utmost sleeping comfort and lasting durability as well. The strongest, most resilient steel wires that skill and money can produce is made especially to our order for use in Essandee Springs.

Look for the 25-year guarantee tag attached to every Spring. Make sure it is there. Then test the Spring for comfort. Lie on it. Roll around on it. Note that you do not roll to the center. Feel how restful it is—how comfortably it yields to your every movement. A real Essandee Bed Spring is the best rest cure investment you can make.



Essandee Spring No. 174

ASK your dealer particularly to show you this Essandee Spring No. 174. We believe it is the best Spring that ever has been or can be made. It has the same tractor-proof construction as the Spring shown above. The coils are mounted on a strong angle iron frame equipped with a patent attachment which permits its use on any type of wood or metal bed. It is more durable and infinitely more comfortable than a box spring. Crossed equalizing Springs hold the coils in position, yet permit a flexible freedom of action so that any number of coils may be depressed without tilting the surface of the Spring. Choice of black japan or gray enamel finish.

St. Louis department stores, furniture stores and leading dealers everywhere sell and recommend Essandee Springs—the Springs that are "tractor proof" and that we guarantee to give you satisfactory service for a quarter century.

ESSANDEE Steel and Brass Beds

The same incomparable quality as ESSANDEE springs—an ideal combination of artistic beauty merged with through and through goodness of construction and finish. A distinctive feature of ESSANDEE Beds is the simple, absolutely-rigid corner fastening, which insures bed ends that stand straight and never wobble, rattle or become loosened. ESSANDEE Steel Beds in plain enamel or with wood finishes that are absolute replicas of the actual wood grains. ESSANDEE Brass Beds in scores of modern finishes and effective designs. Also ESSANDEE Cots, Cribs and Hospital Furniture.

POLES BESIEGE U. S. CONSUL IN WARSAW SEEKING PASSPORTS

Rumors of Restrictive Legislation Pending in Congress Increases Nervousness.

By the Associated Press.

WARSAW, April 9.—Crowds of from 2000 to 300 persons have been besieging daily the vise bureau of the American consulate here to obtain the Consul's vise of their passports to the United States. For months there have been large numbers of applicants waiting at the bureau every morning, but since the latter part of February the crowds have increased, owing to the vague and disturbing rumors which have been circulated throughout Poland of restrictive legislation pending in the United States Congress.

Herded together by relatives or organizations endeavoring to get permission for these persons to enter an American port before the rumored legislation became effective, the hopeful emigrants invaded Warsaw by every train. They were mostly women and children. They came not only from various parts of Poland, some of them were refugees from the Ukraine and other nearby parts of Russia.

Unable to obtain accommodations in lodging houses or hotels owing to the crowded condition of the city, many of them made their headquarters in the railroad stations where they slept upon the floors or on benches or chairs.

The number of vises granted by the Americans here is about 200 a day. This is much less than formerly and the reduction is due to the Polish passport frauds uncovered sometime ago and also to the frequent presentation of fraudulent documents of identification.

For a time it was possible to purchase a counterfeit Polish passport for a few dollars, but most of the ringleaders of this fraudulent plan have been arrested and are awaiting trial in the Polish courts.

Hundreds of Ukrainian passports have been sold recently in Lemberg and in other cities of the new republics of Central Europe for a few dollars each to refugees from Russia eager to reach the United States. The Ukrainian passport, however, is not recognized by the United States consulates on the ground that there is no organized Ukrainian Government.

3 COLLEGES EACH HAVE TRAINED 4 SECRETARIES OF STATE

Brown, Harvard and Princeton Share Honors in Filling First Cabinet Chair.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—With the appointment of Charles E. Hughes, a graduate of the class of 1881, Brown University now has the distinction of having four graduates who became Secretaries of State. No college has done more than this; only two colleges, Harvard and Princeton, have equaled this record.

Evidently young men who have definitely given up the idea of being Presidents of the United States and who would be satisfied to be Secretaries of State should prepare at one of the following five colleges, which are here given with their individual records: Brown, William L. Marcy, 1853; Richard Olney, 1895; John Hay, 1898, 1901; Charles E. Hughes, 1921. Harvard, Thomas Pickering, 1795, 1797; John Quincy Adams, 1817; Edward Everett, 1852; Robert Bacon, 1909. Princeton, James Madison, 1801; Robert Smith, 1809; Edward Livingston, 1831; John Forsyth, 1834, 1837. Yale, John C. Calhoun, 1844; John M. Clayton, 1849; William M. Evarts, 1877. William and Mary, Thomas Jefferson, 1789; Edmund Randolph, 1794, and James Monroe, 1811.

Sixteen colleges have produced one Secretary of State each. Eight Secretaries of State, as far as can be ascertained, never went to college. Among them are John Marshall, Henry Clay and Martin Van Buren.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY TO OPEN MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN

Effort to Raise Funds to Complete Budget of $50,000 for 1921 to Begin Tomorrow.

The Children's Aid Society, of which Mrs. George C. Hitchcock is president and Miss Florence Van Sickler, general secretary, will open a membership campaign tomorrow to raise funds to complete the 1921 budget. The work this year will require $50,000, the society having more children in charge now than ever before. The funds are used to pay the board, in private families, of children whose homes have been broken up through sickness, death or other misfortune. Funds also are used to pay for medical attention, a trained nurse employed by the society and for trained supervisors. Miss Georgia Elliot will be chairman of the Membership Campaign Committee and will be assisted by members of the Junior League.

A special appeal is made for funds for negro children and also for temporary boarding homes for them. City hospital No. 2 and the Provident Association now turn over negro children in need of homes to the Children's Aid, and there are several on the waiting list.

Much of the work of the Children's Aid is with infants, many of them motherless.

Memberships are from $5 to $25 a year, with supporting members contributing from $25 up. Fifteen dollars a month will pay the board of one child, and $240 will pay the board and supply the clothing for a child for one year.

INDIAN REFORMERS ATTACK OLD SIKHS

130 Persons Are Slain in Battle at the Golden Temple of Armistar.

LONDON, March 1.—The fighting at Nankana, India, in which about 130 persons were killed, was restricted to rival factions of Sikhs, according to a report just made public at the India Office.

The rioters were described as old Sikhs and reformers, the former of whom included the managers of important and richly endowed shrines. That at Nankana is the wealthiest of them, its annual income, derived largely from landed estates, amounting to tens of thousands of pounds. The Mahants, who are in charge of such shrines, regard themselves as life tenants of the estates and secure in their possesion as long as they discharge their religious duties.

The reformers opposed this view. They alleged that deplorable abuses exist in connection with the shrines. The revenues, they contend, belong to the Sikh community and should be administered under its control. But to the reform party, says the report, there have attached themselves a number of thieves as well as enemies of the Government.

The attacks on what is termed the vested interests of the old Sikhs began with the occupation of certain shrines at the Golden Temple of Armistar. The incumbents there gave way. They submitted also to being ousted from some minor shrines at other places.

But at the end of January a serious fight occurred at Tarn Taran in the Armistar district. A band of reformers which suddenly appeared there succeeded in getting possession of the shrines only after losing two lives. Some 25 persons altogether were injured.

The old Sikhs held a meeting at Lahore the day before the attack at Nankana, which, it had been rumored, had been impending for some time. Apparently the reformers numbered about 200. Just how the fight began is not known, says the report.

The Deputy Commissioner who started his investigation the day that the fight occurred was told that the Mahants had been victorious. The fight had taken place inside a small shrine enclosure which was commanded by houses on all sides.

"The inquiry into the facts," concluded the report, "was hampered by crowds of excited Sikhs from all parts of the Punjab, who accused the Moslem neighbors of the shrine of having assisted the Mahants."

REVOLUTIONARY WAR WAS PREDICTED IN ALMANAC

Collection of Booklets Owned in New Hampshire Contain Warnings to Colonists.

By the Associated Press.

KEENE, N. H., April 9.—Quaintly phrased weather warnings, interlarded with old-fashioned words of wisdom, including a prediction of a successful revolt in America, while the colonists were still praying for the health of their English ruler, are contained in a collection of almanacs owned by M. E. Faniels of this city. Some of the paper-bound booklets date back to 1754.

The prophecy dealing with the Revolution was printed in a copy issued about the time that Washington was following the peaceful pursuits of a surveyor. It was made by Lord Kames, a British nobleman, who said:

"Our North American colonies are in a prosperous condition, increasing rapidly in population, in commerce and in opulence, and they have the spirit of a free people and are inflamed with patriotism. Their population will equal that of Britain and Ireland in less than a century, and they will be a match for the mother country if they choose to be independent. A people animated with the new blessings of liberty will not incline to a kingly form of government."

Young men are urged to go West into the wilds of Ohio and purchase land at 20 cents an acre in Spanish money, by an almanac editor who wore knee breeches and ruffled shirt. In his mortuary statistics, based on reports received in 1797, he asserted that half of the persons in the United States died before reaching the age of 17 years, smallpox, for instance, being more fatal to girls than boys at that period. However, one in every 3125 of the population attained or passed the century mark in life.

KID IS MEXICAN EASTER DISH

Custom Adopted From Biblical Command on Feast of Passover.

By the Associated Press.

LAREDO, Tex., April 9.—A favorite dish for Easter among the Mexican inhabitants of Laredo is the "cabrito," a kid of tender age that makes a savory meal when cooked in the Mexican fashion. On the Saturday before Easter the market and the farmers' wagons are filled with crates containing the young goats, and the Mexicans flock here to buy.

Goat flesh, and particularly that of tender young goats, has been a favorite food among the Mexicans for centuries, but the selection of the young kids for the Easter feast has more in it than the mere desire to return to a full flesh diet after the deprivations of Lent, according to one of the local Mexicans. The injunction that the Passover "lamb" should be "without blemish, a male of the first year; ye shall take it out from the sheep or from the goats," seems to this student of Mexican customs to have been adopted as much as a commemoration of the Paschal lamb as from any other reason.

GREAT LAKES SHIP OWNERS WANT SEAMEN'S ACT AMENDED

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., April 9.—Representatives of chambers of commerce, shipping interests and vessel operators from all chief Great Lakes ports met here today for a two-day session, to seek alteration of the La Follette seamen's act as it applies to the lakes.

An amendment to the seamen's act is to be drafted. Soon after the conference a delegation chosen from representatives to today's meeting will go to Washington and seek to have the amendment acted upon favorably by Congress.

Vessel operators on the Great Lakes have contended the seamen's act as it applies to lake ships works a hardship and that certain provisions should be eliminated. Among the proposed changes are those requiring two instead of three watches on trips of between 8 and 16 hours, and recognition of certified lifeboat men as bona fide members of crews. Vessel owners declare provisions of the present law compel them to carry a larger number of men than is necessary and that therefore the number of passengers that may be carried is reduced to a point where financial loss occurs. It is contended also employment of watches on vessels while the ships are tied up in a port is unnecessary.

Prominent shipping, vessel and business men from various lake cities were to speak during the two-day session.

Come out of the high rent district and be convinced. A word to the wise is sufficient.

6½ to 7% Tax-Paid Income With Real Safety

Union Electric's drive for a very large number of small home investors—we now have over 5,500—has perhaps led folks with larger incomes to suppose they could not afford to buy Union Electric 7% preferred stock, because of the income taxes.

Fact is, an income derived wholly from Union Electric preferred stock dividends up to $30,000 a year in the hands of any one investor, would contain a larger net cash yield than that from any of the tax-free city, county, state or federal securities. Larger, also, than that from most industrial bonds or notes that offer an equal certainty of REGULAR income. Union Electric preferred stock dividends are not subject to the Missouri State income tax. The company pays the normal U. S. income taxes on them. The shareholder pays no tax on them except the U. S. income sur-taxes, those which follow the 4% and 8% normal taxes. These income tax exemptions are very valuable. The following table shows the amount of U. S. income sur-taxes—the only tax the shareholder pays on Union Electric preferred—and the yearly net, tax-paid yield, on incomes of $5,000 to $30,000, derived wholly from the dividends on Union Electric preferred stock:

Yearly Taxable Income.	U. S. Income Sur-Taxes.	Yearly Net Income.	Yearly Net Income Rate.
$ 5,000	None	$ 5,000	7%
6,000	$ 10	5,990	6.988%
8,000	50	7,950	6.956%
10,000	110	9,890	6.923%
12,000	190	11,810	6.889%
14,000	290	13,710	6.855%
16,000	410	15,590	6.821%
18,000	550	17,450	6.786%
20,000	710	19,290	6.751%
22,000	890	21,110	6.719%
24,000	1,090	22,910	6.682%
26,000	1,310	24,690	6.647%
28,000	1,550	26,450	6.613%
30,000	1,810	28,190	6.578%

Doubtless there are thousands of St. Louis district men and women, deriving income mainly or wholly from investments, who could increase their net, tax-paid income by substituting a block of Union Electric preferred shares for other securities whose earnings are subject to the U. S. normal income taxes.

Investors of this class want REGULAR income and 100% solid and salable property value back of their principal. Union Electric preferred meets both of these requirements. State-appraisement of the Company's property shows more than $300 worth of income-producing property, kept always in good condition, back of each $100 share of this stock. For a dozen years past Union Electric has earned and paid dividends on its $11,000,000 of common stock, and has paid regular quarterly dividends of $1.75 per share on its preferred stock since the first preferred stock was sold in 1917. The Company's earnings for preferred and common stock dividends in 1920 (after paying interest charges and providing for depreciation), were over SIX times the amount of its preferred stock dividends. Union Electric could make this record, paying liberal wages and selling service at low rates as compared with other large cities, because UNION ELECTRIC IS ONE OF THE MOST ECONOMICALLY CAPITALIZED LARGE ELECTRIC SERVICE COMPANIES IN THE UNITED STATES. Thus far in 1921, Union Electric's dividend earnings (after providing for interest charges and depreciation), are at the rate of over SIX times the dividend required for the $3,000,000 of preferred stock that was outstanding last year, and for the $1,000,000 worth that is being sold this year.

Union Electric, providing electric light, heat and power for the greater St. Louis industrial district, has to grow at least as fast as the district it serves. We finance a good share of this growth by selling our preferred stock at retail, here at home. Retail selling of the stock, across our counters and by mail, gives thousands of our home folks, whose patronage supports the business, a chance to share its profits. Our retail investors especially appreciate the Company's free service in maintaining for their benefit a constant par cash market for these shares, in its Securities Department—an advantage possessed by no other security on the market. We have done this since December, 1919, and are able to do it because Union Electric preferred stock, with its safety, its high net income yield and its marketability, is one of the best income investments now offered anywhere in the United States.

PRICE: $100 a share.

32,000-ACRE FIELD PLANTED IN WHEAT

Other Neighboring Farms in Washington Listed at 9000 and 10,000 Acres of Grain.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WALLA WALLA, Wash., April 9.—Henry Vincent, the big Eureka Flat wheat grower, who harvested 12,000 acres last year, has increased his holdings until this spring he has a wheat farm of 32,000 acres. This is believed to be the largest farm in the Northwest. The entire acreage is practically devoted to wheat. All the seeding has been done, and where the fall planting was finished before the rainy season in November the fields are green.

During the seeding of this great tract of land 39 drills and 42 harrows kept up with five steam plows, each with a capacity of 60 acres per day.

To properly manage his great agriculture project Vincent maintains a large force of men and women. There are also 600 mules and horses and during the harvesting season he hires enough outside to make a total of from 450 to 500 spans. Last season 250 men and women and 30 boys worked for two months on this great farm, harvesting and marketing the grain.

This year's harvest, should the crop be a normal one, will be handled by five combined harvester threshers, 10 headers and four separators. A new departure will be the use for the first time of a steam-propelled combine with a 30-foot cut and a combine propelled with gasoline tractor which has an 18-foot cut. These two machines have a combined capacity of cutting and threshing 75 to 90 acres of ripened wheat per day.

The great difficulty with heavy tractors in the wheat section is with the rolling nature of the land. Wheat is planted on steep hills where horses and mules can be driven but where the heavy machinery slides and tips.

To care for his wheat last year Vincent used 250,000 new jute bags for which he paid 17 cents each. This year he has ordered a new supply of cotton ones from Georgia.

Another large wheat farm near here is that of Ben Grote, who has seeded to wheat 10,000 acres. John Webb has a 9000-acre field of wheat and there is another of 7000 acres near Toledo. In what is known as the Big Bend country there are numerous wheat farmers who plant from 1500 to 3000 acres each year to grain.

An unfortunate feature of the growing of wheat in this way is that the land is being rapidly depleted of its fertility. There is need of a system of diversified planting to save the land from utter barrenness. For nearly 15 years many of these big farms have been growing wheat every year. Some wise farmers let their farms lie fallow every other year, thinking they get an increased crop enough to pay for the idle season.

FIRST CO-OPERATIVE DAIRY IN MINNEAPOLIS TO OPEN

Stock Is Held Principally by Wagon Drivers and Other Workmen.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., April 9.—Conception of an idea almost two years ago that a dairy plant can be operated on a co-operative basis, will be borne out next week when deliveries at the first co-operated creamery in the State are begun here. With the belief that by organizing under the Minnesota co-operative law both the public and themselves would be benefitted, a local milk wagon drivers' and creamery workers' union in the fall of 1919 began organizing a creamery company, incorporated, built a two-story building and installed up-to-date machinery.

Various labor troubles with several strikes and lockouts causing temporary suspension in milk deliveries, was one of the factors in prompting the drivers to organize the co-operative company, they said.

Although originally capitalized at $50,000, by the union men, others outside of the union became interested in the proposition, and the authorized capital was increased to $200,000. The number of stockholders is about 1650, which includes the 350 milk wagon drivers who were incidental in the formation of the company, according to Harold Nordby, president of the creamery association.

MEXICO PLANS TO ESTABLISH NEW NATIONAL BANKING SYSTEM

Banks Which Have Been Suspended for Several Years Are Now Reopening.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MONTEREY, Mexico.—Arrangements are being made by the Mexican Government to establish a new national banking system, according to Adolfo de la Huerta, Secretary of the Treasury. In an official statement he says that his department now has on hand 15,000,000 pesos of gold, and that only 2,500,000 pesos are lacking. This sum will be supplied very soon, he said.

The banking situation throughout the country is improving and the beneficial effects that it is having on business generally are apparent. Only a few days ago the National Bank of Mexico, which had been suspended for several years, resumed business. On the same day 14 other banks in different parts of the country again opened for business.

To Absorb Freckles and Other Blemishes

Every spring numerous inquiries are made by girls seeking some reliable recipe for removing freckles. Very favorable reports have been received from many who have used ordinary mercolized wax during the freckling season. The wax seems to possess unusual properties which completely absorb the freckles, with no harmful effect whatever. The complexion improves wonderfully, becoming as soft as a rose petal, and as delicately tinted. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at any druggist's, spread a thin layer of it over the entire face every night for a while, washing this off in the morning. For rough, spotty skin, sallowness, blackheads, pimples, and all cutaneous blemishes, this treatment is superior to any other.

Springtime also brings wrinkles to many sensitive skins that are much exposed to winds and changing temperatures. To a half pint witch hazel add an ounce of powdered saxolite, which quickly dissolves. Bathe the face in this; the effect on a wrinkled skin is truly remarkable.

Old Sores—Ulcers!

CHIN-CEA Blood

Avoid the use of mercury and potash if your tainted, vitiated or scrofulous blood is due to a perverted process of elimination.

Rheumatism and other blood and skin disorders yield to this alterative medicine, as it is safe to take indefinitely, being purely vegetable and non-injurious to the stomach, bowels, etc.

Dr. Lewis Baker has prescribed elixir Chin Cea for many years, with astonishing success, in a wide class of blood ailments.

TROTZKY REMINDED CLARE SHERIDAN OF A SNARLING WOLF

British Woman Sculptor Gives Views of Russian Rulers — Lenine Genial, With Kindly Smile.

WORD PICTURES OF BOLSHEVIST LEADERS

Longest Description Is of Trotzky, Who, She Says, Had Charming Manners, "But Murder in His Face."

"I had been engaged to go yachting with some friends in August," writes Clare Sheridan, the British sculptor, in the introduction to "Mayfair to Moscow," which has just been published by Boni & Liveright (New York). "I had worked very hard for a year and was badly in need of a holiday. The yacht, at the last moment, ran ashore and had to go into dock. The day I should have gone yachting my friend asked me if I would like to meet Kameneff and Krassin.

"I jumped at it, having a great curiosity to meet a Bolshevist, for I felt mystified and completely ignorant about them. I had often thought that if I could choose out of the world a head to portray I would select Lenine as the most interesting, illusive and unattainable. I never thought the chance would come."

Cousin of Winston Churchill.

Mrs. Sheridan is the daughter of Mrs. Moreton Frewen, formerly Miss Jerome of New York City, whose two sisters married St. John Leslie and Randolph Churchill. She is the cousin of Winston Churchill and has herself been conspicuous in English affairs both before and after the death of her husband, Capt. Wilfred Sheridan, great-great-grandson of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, the playwright.

Vivid as is the story Mrs. Sheridan tells, it is what she has to say of the "ists" rather than of the "ism" she met in Russia that is most striking. Her gift of descriptive phrase is extraordinary; a word from her pen is as revealing as the stroke of a pencil in the hand of a Freuh. A gallery of the Bolshevists she pictures may be taken from her diary in this, the order of their appearance.

LEON KAMENEFF, brother-in-law of Trotzky—There is very little modeling in his face; it is a perfect oval and his nose is straight with the line of his forehead, but turns slightly up at the end, which is a pity. It is difficult to make him look serious, as he smiles all the time. Even when his mouth is severe his eyes laugh.

GREGORY KRASSIN, commercial representative of the soviet government at London—He has a beautiful head and he sat almost sphinx-like, severe and expressionless most of the time. What impresses me about these two men is their impassive imperturbability, their calm and their patience. I suppose it is the race, or else they learned calm when they were prisoners in Russia. They are such a contrast to almost all other sitters, who are restless, hurried and fidgety. Krassin sits erect, his head up and pointed, bearded chin sticking defiantly out at an angle and his mouth tightly shut. He has no smile like Kameneff and his piercing eyes looked at me impassively while I worked. It's rather uncanny. He is calm, sincere, dignified, proud, with self-consciousness and without vanity.

An Amiable, Smiling Man.

MAXIM LITVINOFF, commercial representative in Norway—I had visualized a small, sharp-faced, alert man. Instead, I found a big, square, amiable, smiling man. I met Mrs. Litvinoff and was surprised to find that she is English. She has short black hair and is unconventional. Misha, the eldest child, a boy of 4, is unruly, wild-eyed and most attractive, the embodiment of Donatello's "Laughing Boy." He says: "What is for my father a Bolshevist?" and tell his mother to ring the bell for the maid and not do any work herself. Litvinoff adores him and throws him about and makes him stand on his head. Coming home Litvinoff and I, hatless, ran races down the hill. To my great humiliation he outran me. He is a heavy man and I run well, but he was not even out of breath.

MARINASKY, a soldier-chauffeur—I though he was an officer. He eats with us, smokes with us, joins in the discussions and kindly lays the table for food and clears away for us. It sounds odd, but it seemed quite natural until I heard he was a chauffeur. My bourgeois bringing up is constantly having surprises. Marinasky has a nice, clear-cut face and square jaw, like the Americans one saw during the war.

SERGE TROTZKY, son of Minister of War—I went out into the Kremlin grounds with Alexandre (Kameneff) while he played football with Serge Trotzky. Serge is 12 years old and is a fine little boy, with a broad chest and a straight back. He looks like the heir to a throne in the guise of a peasant.

John Reed and His Funeral.

JOHN REED, the American communist—a well-built, good-looking young man who has given up everything at home to throw his heart and life into work here. I understand the Russian spirit, but what strange force impels an apparently normal young man from the United States? I am told by Russians that his book, "Ten Days That Shook the World," is the best book on the revolution and that it has become a national classic and is taught in the schools. (Later.) I attended his funeral. It is the first funeral without a religious service that I have ever seen. It did not seem to strike any one else as peculiar, but it was to me.

Although the poor widow fainted, her friends did not take her away. It was extremely painful to see this white-faced, unconscious woman lying back on the supporting arm of a Foreign Office official, more interested in the speeches than in the human agony. He was buried under the Kremlin wall next to all the revolutionaries, his comrades. As a background to his grave was a large red banner nailed upon the wall with the letters in gold, "The leaders die, but the cause lives on."

No Corns Today

unless folks let them stay

Millions of people nowadays keep completely free from corns.

At the first sign of a corn they use Blue-jay—the liquid or the plaster. The pain then stops. In a little while the whole corn loosens and comes out.

People who pare corns keep them. People who use old treatments—harsh, unscientific—do themselves injustice.

There is now a scientific corn ender. A famous chemist perfected it. This world-famed laboratory supplies it through druggists everywhere.

It is at your call. A touch will apply it. Its use seals the fate of a corn.

At least 20 million corns yearly are now ended in this easy, gentle way. Apply it to one corn tonight. Watch what it does.

PESKY BEDBUGS

Bedbugs lay an average of seven eggs per day. Under favorable conditions they hatch in five days, of which two-thirds are females. They mature to adult size and are capable of laying in four weeks. How many bedbugs would you have in a year if you left one female or egg unmolested for one year? To rid the pesky bedbug, you can readily see how necessary it is to use a preparation that will kill the eggs as well as the live ones. P. D. Q. has been demonstrated by the leading Hospitals, Hotels and Railroad Companies that the safest and most economical way to stop future generations of bedbugs, roaches, fleas and ants is to use the new discovery, Pesky Devils Quietus, "P. D. Q."

A 35c package of P. D. Q. makes a quart, enough to kill a million bedbugs, roaches, fleas and cooties and at the same time destroy their eggs.

Impossible for them to exist when P. D. Q. is properly used. Free, patent spout in every package to get the pesky devils in the hard-to-get-at places and save the juice.

Petrograd—He arrived busy, tired and impatient, his overcoat slung over his shoulders, as he had not had time to put his arms through the sleeves. He flung off his hat and ran his fingers through his black curly hair, which already was standing on end. He seemed to me an extraordinary mixup of conflicting personalities. He has the eyes and brow of the fighting man and the mouth of a petulant woman. At moments he threw his head back and seemed to be dreaming. Then he looked like a poet. He is only 38. It is amazing how young all these revolutionaries are.

M. DISIRJINSKY, President of the Extraordinary Commission—As we would call it in English, he is the organizer of the Red Terror. He sat for an hour and a half quite still and very silent. His eyes certainly looked as if they were bathed in tears of eternal sorrow, but his mouth smiled an indulgent kindness. His face is narrow, high cheek boned and sunk in. Of all his features it is his nose which seemed to have the most character. It is very refined and the delicate bloodless nostrils suggest the sensitiveness of overbreeding.

NIKOLAI LENINE, Premier of the Soviet Government—He has a genial manner and a kindly smile which puts one instantly at ease. When the low buzz, accompanied by the lighting up of a small electric bulb, signified a telephone call, his face lost the dullness of repose and became animated and interesting. He gesticulated to the telephone as though it understood.

Never did I see anyone make so many faces. Lenine laughed and frowned and looked thoughtful, sad and humorous all in turn. His eyebrows twitched, sometimes they went right up and then again they puckered together maliciously. I watched these expressions, waited, hesitated and then made my selection with frantic rush—it was his screwed-up look. Wonderful! No one else has such a look; it is his alone.

LEON TROTSKY, Minister of War of the Soviet Government—From behind an enormous writing table in one corner near the window came forth Trotsky. He shook hands with me welcomingly, though without a smile. Seeing that he was prepared to be amiable, I asked him if I could bother him with measurements. He pointed out to me how unsymmetrical his face is. He opened his mouth and snapped his teeth to show me that his under jaw is crooked. As he did so, he reminded me of a snarling wolf.

When he talks his face lights up and his eyes flash. Trotzky's eyes are much talked of in Russia, and he is called "The Wolf." His nose is also crooked and looks as though it had been broken. If it were straight he would have a very fine line from the forehead. Full-face he is Mephisto. His eyebrows go up at an angle, and the lower part of his face tapers into a pointed and defiant beard. I dragged my modeling stand across the room to try for a better light on the other side. He watched me with a weary look and said, "Even in clay you make me travel, and I am so tired of traveling."

His manners are charming. I said to him: "I cannot get over it, how amiable and courteous you are. I understood you were a very disagreeable man. What am I to say to people in England when they ask me, 'What sort of a monster is Trotzky?'" With a mischievous look, he said: "Tell them in England, tell them"—— But I cannot tell them! It was getting late; he looked very tired. His eyes were shut and he swayed. For a moment I feared he was going to faint. One does not think of Trotzky as a man who faints, but anything may happen to a man who works as he does. My thought was of my work, and I said to him: "Do not fall backward or you will fall on my work." He answered quickly, "Je tombe toujours en avant." (I always fall forward).

"Murder in His Face."

I asked him to take off his pincenez, as it hampered me. He hates doing this. He says he feels "desarme" and absolutely lot without them. It seemed akin to physical pain taking them off; they have become part of him, and the loss of them completely changes his individuality. It is a pity, as they rather spoil an otherwise classical head. We talked a little about me. He said I should remain in Russia a while longer and do some big work—something like my Victory—"an emaciated and exhausted figure and still fighting; that is the allegory of the Soviet." Then, suddenly turning on me with clenched teeth and fire in his eyes, he shook a threatening finger in my face. "If when you get back to England vous nous calomnie as the rest have, I tell you I will come to England et je vous." He did not say what he would do, but there was murder in his face.

He has the manner and ease of a man born in a great position. He has become a statesman, a ruler, a leader. But if Trotzky were not Trotzky, and the world had never heard of him, one would still appreciate his very brilliant mind. He is the cultured, well-read man, he is the vituperative, fiery politician, he can be a mischievous, laughing schoolboy with a dimple in his cheek. All these three I have seen in turn, and had to converge them into one clay interpretation.

GEORGOVITCH TCHITCHERIN, Foreign Minister of the Soviet Government—While I was waiting a man hurried through the office. He was a little man in brown trousers and coat which did not match. With small steps he shuffled hurriedly along. It might have been a nightwatchman. It was Tchitcherin. He says he has not time to go home to sleep. His nights are days and his days are not entirely nights. He has no idea of time and does not realize that other people live differently. He does all his own work and will not ring for a secretary or messenger, but runs himself with papers to other departments. He lives on his nerves, and the slightest thing throws him off his pivot.

"His Face Like Carved Ivory."

KARAHAN, Armenian representative with the Soviet Government—He is very beautiful; his face is like carved ivory. He is a great mystery; he lives in a better way than anyone else, smokes the best cigars, drives to his office in a limousine and looks like the most prosperous gentleman in Europe in his astrachan coat and hat. He must do some very good work for the Government or he would not be tolerated. I believe Lenine once asked what was the use of him and he was told that Karahan was most important. Was he not the only man among them who could wear evening clothes?

Every genuine De Luxe Bedspring bears the trade-mark on the side rail of the spring. Look for it—it is your guarantee

"DeLuxe" The Bedspring LUXURIOUS

All Your Life Depends Upon It

You cannot know the full enjoyment of living, unless you sleep well and you cannot sleep well on an uncomfortable bed. Any bed is uncomfortable unless it has a comfortable bedspring.

The ordinary coil, woven wire or national spring is not comfortable. It sags—it holds the body in a strained position. It presses prominent parts of the anatomy too severely, because it does not support other parts at all.

Complete relaxation—perfect rest under these conditions is an impossibility. When you have a nightmare, don't always blame what you've eaten. It may be due to the uncomfortable bedspring you are using.

So be careful in selecting your bedspring. Investigate the advantages of the De Luxe—the spring that molds itself to every curve of the body, gently supporting every part of the anatomy. Then you will know what complete relaxation means. The proof is in the use.

Two people rest on a De Luxe as comfortably as on two separate springs, because it can't sag. Each row of coils acts independently.

Examine the De Luxe at your dealer's. The more carefully you compare the De Luxe with any spring at any price, the more certainly you will recognize its superior, luxurious comfort. It is always finished in Rome Gray enamel, and on the side rail appears the Rome Quality Trade-Mark, which identifies all Rome products. For wood or metal beds.

PILES CURED WITHOUT THE KNIFE By Dr. Henrich's Method TO STAY CURED

No Cutting. No Pain. No Chloroform. No Hospital. No Danger. No Loss of Time. Consultation and Examination Free—Tell Your Friends.

MESSAGE TO THE AFFLICTED.

Here are just a few of the many hundreds of letters I have from cured patients in all walks of life. That most of my patients have been from among the more intelligent class of citizens is due to the fact that my method and the logical reasons and proofs which support it appeal to intelligent men and women.

These letters are copies of the originals in my office, and these men represent the highest class of intelligence, integrity and honesty, and their truthfulness can no more be questioned than you who read this. You would not lend your name to a questionable enterprise, especially when you could not hope to gain, and take the chances of prosecution by the United States Government authorities for using the mails to defraud. Neither would I print a misleading statement or attempt to make a false impression. In the first place, I have no need to do so, nor have I any desire to misuse the mails or to defraud the public.

The United States Government is to be commended in the crusade against fraudulent enterprises, and in no particular is it to be commended more than for its crusade against impure foods, drugs and quack doctors.

These men whose letters appear in this advertisement, and whose names are attached, lend their influence solely that others afflicted as they have been may learn of a reliable place to go where they can be made well. They were induced to come to me by reading the testimonials of others who had preceded them, and it is their desire to aid a brother or sister.

Read carefully each of these messages. They are signed statements of men who have been afflicted as you are, and they have suffered. They were where you are now and did not know where to go or what to do. They read of what I had done for others and they investigated; they came to me and I cured them, just as I will cure you when you come.

These men had all tried various home remedies and failed to get a cure—just as you are doing. They found out, as you are finding, that no such remedies ever cure, and at best only give a little temporary relief. They had heard of the failures and bad results of surgery and came to me to avoid the hospital and the surgeon's knife or scissors. I cured their Piles without ever cutting them with any kind of surgical instrument or confining them to their rooms. I have no need of a hospital, my treatment is so mild and painless.

CARPENTER CURED OF BLEEDING AND PROTRUDING PILES AFTER SUFFERING 28 YEARS. HAD NO PAIN AND WAS NOT LAID UP FROM DR. HENRICH'S WONDERFUL TREATMENT.

East St. Louis, Ill., July 12, 1919.
W. P. Henrich, Ph. G., M. D.

Dear Doctor: I had been a sufferer from Bleeding and Protruding Piles for 28 years and had consulted four physicians and all talked operation, which I would not allow, as I know another sufferer from Piles who was operated and had gotten crazy from it.

As I had seen your advertisement in the newspaper where you had cured others, so I called on you for a free examination. After you told me you could cure me permanently without an operation, I said, go ahead and fix me up.

I did not have any pain nor was I laid up from your treatment, but was working every day at my trade as carpenter.

I advise every sufferer from Piles to take your wonderful treatment and enjoy life again. Yours truly,
JOSEPH C. OTTO, 1500 Natalie av.

FARMER CURED OF PILES WITHOUT PAIN, ADVISES ALL SUFFERERS TO TAKE DR. HENRICH'S TREATMENT.

Kimmswick, Mo., Feb. 7, 1921.

After being a sufferer for many years with Piles, I decided to take Dr. Henrich's Painless Treatment, and I can say now that I am entirely cured of them, having had six Piles and one Polypus.

Your treatment being truly painless, any child could endure the little pain that it causes, and I would advise all sufferers of Piles to take Dr. Henrich's Treatment, as there is hope for all that come in time.

Yours respectfully,
HENRY RUNGE, Route 2.

MISSOURI WOMAN CHOSEN FOR D. A. R. LIVING PICTURE SERIES

Mrs. A. H. Connelly of Kansas City to Impersonate Founder of Lindenwood College.

Mrs. A. H. Connelly of 611 East Forty-seventh street, Kansas City, has been selected by the Daughters of the American Revolution, at their living picture series to be given in Washington, D. C., this month, to impersonate Mrs. Mary Easton Sibley, wife of Maj. George C. Sibley, as "the most illustrious woman of Missouri." Maj. and Mrs. Sibley were founders of Lindenwood College, in 1827, and it is for this reason that the honor has been accorded to her memory. Mrs. Connelly has been studying the costumes of Mrs. Sibley's period and will imitate the quaint dressing of the hair which has been preserved in portraits of this pioneer woman.

Mrs. Connelly left Kansas City for New York, Saturday, April 9. She will have charge of the Missouri showings in this historical series of the Daughters of the American Revolution. These views later may be obtained for a showing at Lindenwood College.

Mrs. Sibley was a daughter of Judge Rufus Easton, who was sent to St. Louis on a confidential mission by the President, touching the doings of Aaron Burr. She was married in 1816 to Maj. Sibley, at the age of 15. Maj. Sibley was United States agent among the Osage Indians. Mrs. Sibley was a woman of advanced views, and in her later life she made the unusual trip to California, by way of the Isthmus of Panama. She has left writings showing an intense devotion to religion, and the conviction, even as early as the time of the Civil War, that women had a right to equal suffrage with men.

BANKERS PREPARE FOR MEETING

Missouri State Association to Hold Convention May 17 and 18.

The banks and trust companies of St. Louis are making elaborate preparations for the entertainment of the Missouri bankers who will attend the State convention of the Missouri Bankers' Association in St. Louis May 17 and 18. The convention will be held at the Shubert-Jefferson Theater and the headquarters of the delegates will be at Hotel Jefferson.

Edward Buder, chairman of the General Arrangements and Entertainment Committee, expects about 1500 Missouri bankers to attend the meeting. A feature arranged by the Entertainment Committee will be a boat excursion with vaudeville and dancing on the steamer. There will be a reception and tea for the visiting wives and daughters on Wednesday afternoon, May 18, at the Jefferson Hotel.

E. B. Pryor is chairman of the General Reception Committee and Edwards Whitaker is vice chairman. R. S. Hawes is chairman of the Committee on Reception of Speakers.

Says His Prescription Has Powerful Influence Over Rheumatism

Discoverer Tells Druggists Not to Take a Cent of Anyone's Money Unless Allenrhu Completely Banishes All Rheumatic Pains and Twinges.

Mr. James H. Allen suffered for years with rheumatism. Many times this terrible disease left him helpless and unable to work.

He finally decided, after years of ceaseless study, that no one can be free from rheumatism until the accumulated impurities, commonly called uric acid deposits, were dissolved in the joints and muscles and expelled from the body.

With this idea in mind he consulted physicians, made experiments and finally compounded a prescription that quickly and completely banished every sign and symptom of rheumatism from his system.

He freely gave his discovery to others, who took it, with what might be called marvelous success. After years or urging he decided to let sufferers everywhere know about his discovery through the newspapers. City Hall Drug Store, 5—Enderle Drug Co.—5 Johnson Bros Drug Co., 4 Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Weipert Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Co.; East St. Louis Agents, Chas. F. Merker, 3 stores, 326 Missouri Av., 323 E. "That's the Brand"

White Banner Malt Extract

(Formerly Known as Blue Ribbon Malt Extract)

Sale and Use Lawful

When the good wife buys a can of White Banner Malt Extract, she's sure to win her husband's gratitude. He knows "that's the brand" that gives him the results he wants.

When Prohibition closed the plant of a well-known Illinois Brewing Company, the capital invested faced loss and the workers unemployment. To avoid these evils, a new company was formed to make malt extract. Again the plant is running. The old employees, using the same equipment and many of the same processes, are now transforming the barley into White Banner Malt Extract—a food product of wonderful merits.

Don't hesitate to ask for White Banner Malt Extract anywhere. Its sale—its use—are legal.

TEXAS TOWNS NAMED FOR ITS HISTORIANS

Volume by Z. T. Fulmore for State Historical Society Reveals Origin of Names.

By the Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Tex.—The Spanish period and Anglo-American colonization of Texas left their traces in the names of counties in the State, according to "The History and Geography of Texas as Told in County Names," a volume by Z. T. Fulmore, a fellow of the State Historical Association.

La Salle County was named for Robert Cavalier Sieur de la Salle, who was born in Rouen, Normandy, Nov. 11, 1643. He came down the Mississippi River from Canada during the period 1678-1685 and in sailing for the mouth of the river he came too far west and landed on the coast at Matagorda Bay in 1685. He built a fort on Garcitas River and his body was buried in some unknown spot near the present city of Navasota.

Medina County probably was named for Medina, the author of the tables used in determining latitude and longitude on De Leon's first expedition into Texas, when the name was given to a river, according to Mr. Fulmore.

Nolan County was created and named by the Legislature in 1876 for Philip Nolan, the first American victim in Texas of Spanish treachery. Nolan was murdered by the Spaniards in 1801, while on a trip from Kentucky to Texas to gather wild horses.

Presidio County's name is from the Spanish "Presidio," meaning a fortress garrisoned by soldiers. It is on the Rio Grande, opposite the Mexican settlement of Presidio.

Refugio was named for the mission, "Our Lady of Refuge," in honor of the Virgin Mary.

San Augustine County was named for a presidio, "San Augustine de Ahumada," which was established on the Trinity River in 1791.

San Jacinto County was named in honor of the great battle which was fought near the stream of the name April 21, 1836. The stream was named in memory of Saint Hyacinth, the anglicised form of San Jacinto.

San Saba came from San Sabada (Holy Saturday) and probably the river for which it was named was so called because it was discovered on Holy Saturday, the historian said.

Trinity County was named for the Trinity River, the name coming from the Spanish, Trinidad, adopted as a geographical name in all Latin American countries.

Uvalde County took its name from Uvalde Canyon, named for Juan de Ugalde, Governor of Coahuila in 1778, with the additional power of commandante of arms in 1786.

Victoria was named for Guadalupe Victoria, Mexico's first President.

Austin County was named for Stephen F. Austin, "father of Texas." He was one of the first to colonize the State with Anglo-Americans, coming in 1821.

The name of the old municipality of Mina was changed to Bastrop in honor of Baron de Bastrop, created a Baron in 1827. The county got its name from the municipality.

Chambers County was named from Gen. Thomas Jefferson Chambers, born in Orange County, Va., April 13, 1802, and interested in Texas after coming here as a young man.

De Witt County received its name in honor of Green de Witt, a native of Kentucky, who later established a colony in Texas. Hayden Edwards, a Virginian and impressario who helped colonize Texas, was honored by the naming of Edwards County.

Gonzales was named for the town of Gonzales, after Rafael Gonzales, Governor of Coahuila and Texas in 1825.

Leon County was named for Martin de Leon, a native of Tamaulipas, Mex., who established a ranch and later a colony in Texas, which latter formed the county.

McMullen County was named for John McMullin, who came from Ireland in 1828 and formed a colony of his compatriots.

McMullin's journey also resulted in the name of San Patricio County, for St. Patrick, Ireland's patron saint.

Robertson County got its name from Sterling C. Robertson, impresario and colonist and son of Elijah Robertson, who founded the city of Nashville, Tenn. Sterling Robertson was active in the campaigns against the Mexicans.

IRENE

AN UNPARALLELED TRIUMPH EXTENDING FROM NEW YORK TO LONDON—AUSTRALIA AND THE ORIENT.

The GREATEST GIRL IN THE WORLD

"IRENE" is classed with the three or four big musical hits of the last twenty years. It is nothing in the world but that wonderful, bewildering thing, CHARM, a quality that it is as hard to put your finger on as a perfume. But audiences always quickly recognize and love to be mastered by sheer charm, when it sweeps over the footlights and takes their hearts by storm. The book by James Montgomery is a human document of wit and naturalness that could stand by itself, but to it fittingly is a tuneful, rollicking score by Harry Tierney and some particularly attractive lyrics by Joseph McCarthy. The song-hits include "Alice Blue Gown," "Castle of Dreams," "Irene" and "The Last Party of Every Party," all with ravishing dance accompaniments.

NOTHING IN THE PAST HAS EQUALED THE MAGNITUDE OF ITS SUCCESS!

For Dandruff

Those little flecks from your head that fall upon your clothing and spoil your pleasure are dandruff—a scalp disorder. Conquer it completely under money-back guarantee. Use Kotalko. Amazingly quick, lasting benefit reported by legions of men, women, children. Save your hair! Get new hair. It is possible in many cases even after baldness—absolutely proved. Remember, KOTALKO—at any busy drug store. Watch your mirror! Show others this advertisement.

Hair Free Arm Pits

There are many things which will remove superfluous hairs—but many of them so irritate, burn and redden the skin as to make it a sight to look upon. It is no longer necessary to go at it in such a savage manner. Superfluous hair can now be removed by an application which is absolutely safe and never fails to remove every hair so thoroughly that not a vestige of it remains. There is only one thing that will do this, and that is sulfo solution. This can be obtained from any drug store. The hairs are merely moistened with it for a few moments and then are seen to literally wither and dissolve away and are wiped off, leaving a skin absolutely perfect, spotless, soft and smooth. This is the sensible method, and no matter how sensitive the skin, or how thick the hair growth, it never fails to remove the hairs completely and thoroughly.

Skin Creams, to Accomplish the Greatest Good, Should Be Freshly Made.

Your complexion is not merely in the very outer skin. It is deeper than that. It is in that part of the skin immediately underneath the outer layer. Complexion creams which merely affect the outer layer are, as a rule, very ineffectual. A method gaining wide use because of its tremendous success lies in the use of zintone, a powder which is mixed at home with a little glycerine and dissolved in water. This makes an exquisite cream. The zintone can be secured at any drug store in one-ounce packages. This is also a very economical method. By liberal use of this article, a tremendous difference in the complexion is noted in a few days by the disappearance of muddiness, sallowness, red spots, freckles and other blemishes.

To Remove Blackheads Without Pinching or Squeezing.

There is only one preparation sold exclusively for the instant removal of blackheads, without pinching or squeezing the flesh, and that is neroxin. Try this powder (not a soap) on your wash cloth tonight and see how quickly the blackheads are dissolved. Neroxin powder in original package is to be found at any drug store, and a package will last for some time.

WOMAN TO LECTURE TOMORROW

Wellesley alumnae, Smith College alumnae, and members of the College Club have been invited to a lecture, "The New Responsibility of American Women," which is to be given in the Vandervoort Auditorium at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, by Miss Florence Jackson, head of the Woman's Educational and Industrial Union of Boston, Mass., and a national authority on vocational guidance for women. She is a lecturer at Vassar, Wellesley, Smith, Bryn Mawr and other Eastern colleges. She comes West on invitation of the Lindenwood College Club. The music faculty of Lindenwood will present a program at her address, in which Miss Garnett Kingsley, contralto, will give a group of songs; Dr. John Thomas, director, will play piano numbers, and Miss Hatch and Miss Gray, ensemble numbers.

President and Mrs. John L. Roemer will entertain for Miss Jackson with a dinner and dance at the college Wednesday evening. A luncheon in her honor will be given Tuesday by Dr. and Mrs. Kurt Stumberg, at their St. Charles residence. Miss Jackson is to lecture at Lindenwood Tuesday evening.

LANMAN WILL RECALLS LIFE OF TESTATRIX

Former New York Society Leader Spent Last Years of Life in Convent.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NORWICH, Conn.—In the Probate Court here before Judge Nelson J. Ayling and his assistant, Miss Helen M. Drescher, there was a hearing last week on the will, recently discovered, of Mrs. Gertrude Haile Lanman, who died suddenly in New York on Dec. 23, after her return from Norwich to the Convent of Marie Reparatrice, in Twenty-ninth street, which of late years had been her home.

Mrs. Lanman was the widow of William Camp Lanman, a descendant of Gov. Jonathan Trumbull ("Brother Jonathan," as Gen. Washington called him during the Revolution), was the daughter of Dr. A. B. Haile of Norwich, her mother having been Mary May, a member of the famous Southern May family. She inherited the substantial fortune of her parents and also that of her aunt, Miss Gertrude May. Until several years after her husband's death she resided in a beautiful home facing Chelsea Parade, in Norwich, spent her winters on the Riviera or in rural England, and was a familiar figure in New York society, making long and frequent stays at the Plaza. Her entertainments, both in Norwich and in New York, were noted for their elegance and originality.

Following Mr. Lanman's death his widow's fortune was dissipated through bad investments, said to have been advised by relatives, and she also lost through having founded the Haile Club for working girls, fitting up a four-story block in the business center of Norwich with class and recreation rooms and every comfort and luxury. In time Mrs. Lanman came to the point where it was necessary for her to sell her fine home and its contents—handsome furniture, ornaments and curios collected here and abroad.

While residing so much in New York, her attention was called to the self-sacrificing lives of the Blue Nuns of the Reparatrice Order, and, having become interested in Catholicity during her years of travel abroad, she began to study and seek instruction, and after due time was baptized into the Roman Catholic Chuch in Manhattan. It was her desire to join the cloistered order of nuns, but physicians assured her that she had a heart affection which was liable to cause her death suddenly at any time, and after several weeks' trial of the arduous regimen of the hard-working sisters, she was compelled to abandon her wish for a life service in the convent. However, she took up settlement work, teaching, translating, etc., for the convent, and being an accomplished needlewoman, mended the priceless laces, restored rare tapestries and the like, for the sisters, who do such delicate work on order.

Oil Stream Knocks Man Off Derrick.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WEST COLUMBIA, Tex.—Wm. Capanier, an oil field worker here, was sitting on top of a derrick fixing the crown-block when the well came in suddenly and unexpectedly. The solid column of oil struck him, knocking him off of the derrick. His skull was fractured and he was seriously injured.

"Cure Your Rupture Like I Cured Mine"

Old Sea Captain Cured His Own Rupture After Doctors Said "Operate or Death."

His Remedy and Book Sent Free

Captain Collings sailed the seas for many years; then he sustained a bad double rupture that soon forced him to not only remain ashore, but kept him bedridden for years. He tried doctor after doctor and truss after truss. No results! Finally, he was assured that he must either submit to a dangerous and abhorrent operation or die. He did neither! He cured himself instead.

"Fellow Men and Women, You Don't Have To Be Cut Up, and You Don't Have To Be Tortured By Trusses."

Captain Collings made a study of himself, of his condition—and at last he was rewarded by the finding of the method that so quickly made him a well, strong, vigorous and happy man.

Anyone can use the same method: it's simple, easy, safe and inexpensive. Every ruptured person in the world should have the Captain Collings book, telling all about how he cured himself, and how anyone may follow the same treatment in their own home without any trouble. The book and medicine are FREE. They will be sent prepaid to any rupture sufferer who will fill out the below coupon. But send it right away—now—before you put down this paper.

Argument Over Relation of "Pistle" and "Pistol" Among Odd Twists of Law

One Attorney, in Divorce Suit, Refers to Woman Who Married Man of Wealth as "Matrimonial Profiteer."

Odd twists and humors of the law, as set forth in recent decisions by various Courts of Appeal in the United States, are set forth in the March number of "The Docket" (West Publishing Co., St. Paul).

IN Garaz v. Texas (222 Southwestern Reporter, 1105) the Court said: "The complaint and information charge appellant with carrying a 'pistle.' The testimony shows that he carried a 'pistol.' Objection was made to this testimony, on the ground of variance between the allegation and proof. It is urged that 'pistle' is a word meaning a communication, and that the well-known rules of idem sonans and bad spelling do not apply. Appellant's authority for asserting that 'pistle' is the name of a communication is the Century Dictionary. Reference thereto discloses that said work prints the word as obsolete, and quotes Mr. Chaucer, who wrote in old English some 700 years ago, as using it. We do not think that the fact that an early English poet, in the exercise of his license, should have used this word in that sense, would necessarily give it any standing at this time, or would likely mislead a Brazoria County Mexican, defended by a pair of able lawyers, into the mistake, in preparing for trial upon a charge of unlawfully carrying a 'pistle,' of seriously thinking himself charged with unlawfully carrying a communication."

"Matrimonial Profteer"
Is Newest of Species.

Profiteers and infinitum have made their appearance in the last few years, and have been classified and are freely recognized by their victims. A new one of the species, profiteer matrimonialis, has been isolated, and is referred to for the first time in Koebel vs. Koebel, 176 Northwestern Reporter, 552, in the following language: "It is also charged in defendant's cross-bill and argued by counsel that plaintiff's motive in marrying defendant was solely a commercial one, unmixed with any tinge or touch of sentiment, and counsel argues that the proofs show that she was a 'matrimonial profiteer.' It is rather to be inferred from counsel's argument that he thinks the failure of this marriage compact, instead of being classed among the domestic tragedies, should have been classed among the weekly commercial failures."

Automobile Driver
Must Keep Own Side

Idaho has joined those states holding that an automobile driver on the right side of the highway, meeting another on the wrong side, must stick to his course, and is not justified in turning to the left by any apparent intention of the other to refuse to turn. Budge, J., dissents. The dilemma of a driver who turns to the left and collides with another is that he has demonstrated the fallacy of his belief that the other did not intend to yield the way, while the other driver is fortified by having done just that which the law requires. Occasional hardship may result but an unvarying requirement of compliance with our American rule of "keep to the right" leaves no uncertainty in the driver's mind. (Cupples Mercantile Co. vs. Bow, 189 Pacific Reporter, 48.)

Administrator Sues
Husband of Client.

The Court of Appeals of Kentucky in Robinson's Adm'r vs. Robinson, 220 Southwestern Reporter, 1074, reversed a judgment for defendant sustaining a demurrer to a petition as amended and dismissing the petition. The action was brought by the administrator of a deceased wife against her husband, who assaulted and killed the wife, for damages for her wrongful death. The wife left children surviving, who, under statutes enacted pursuant to the Constitution, were entitled to one-half of any recovery; and the coulrt held that if, as a matter of fact, the administrator of one spouse has the right to sue the survivor, the action for the mother's death could be maintained by the administrator for the benefit of the children to the extent they are entitled to any possible recovery. Judge Clarke in discussing the Constitution, giving a right of action for wrongful death, said:

"Both the language and the purpose of the constitutional provision are so clear as to leave no room for construction, and we could not impose any limitations or insert any exceptions not therein expressed without exceeding judicial authority. We are therefore clearly of the opinion that these provisions of the Constitution and statutes were intended to, and do, confer a right to sue for damages in every case where death results from injury inflicted by negligence or wrongful act, except only where, under the very provisions of these enactments, an action is impossible because the responsible party is also the sole beneficiary of any possible recovery. * * * Nor can the fact that the defendant is entitled to one-half of the recovery defeat the right of the plaintiff."

Husband Cannot Enjoin Wife
From Nagging Him.

A husband can get no relief in a court of equity against the nagging conduct of his wife, in view of an opinion of the Minnesota Supreme Court by Chief Justice Brown in the case of Drake vs. Drake, 177 Northwestern Reporter, 624, which affirmed an order sustaining a demurrer to the complaint. The complaint set up conduct of the wife, which the court held would amount to nagging, consisting of an alleged systematic campaign against the husband of cruel and inhuman treatment by annoying and otherwise making his life miserable. She, it was alleged, went to his office, and in the presence of others charged him with immoral conduct; made false and truthless accusations; tried to drive him into bankruptcy; practically ruined his health; caused societies to cancel his membership, and created scenes on the street when she met him.

Experts Endorse Cantilever Shoes

The National Y. W. C. A., in the interest of the health and comfort of its 400,000 members, made an exhaustive study of correct footwear for women. They reported in favor of a shoe which has (1) an inner sole line following the line of the foot; (2) room for the toes without crowding; (3) broad heel; (4) flexible shank allowing action of arch muscles.

All these are distinguishing features of Cantilever Shoes

The Board of Police Surgeons of New York made an independent investigation, and their report also recommends the flexible shank shoe. "The stiff shoe does not permit free play for the muscles, which become cramped, weak and wasted." In contrast, a flexible shank shoe allows the foot to exercise and the arch muscles to grow strong. Cantilever Shoes correct fallen arches.

The Police Surgeons' Report emphasizes the fact that the toes should point straight ahead and that the arch, which bears the weight of the body, should be supported at the heel, the big toe and the outside of the foot. In Cantilever Shoes the natural inner sole line and the tilted heel encourage correct position of the foot, and proper distribution of the weight.

These shoes are good-looking, as well as "correct" and very comfortable. Made in the popular leathers, with moderately high heels and low heels.

CURIOUS DECISIONS OF COURTS CITED IN RECENT LAW REVIEW

Reporter, 145, and a writ of habeas corpus was denied. Petitioner had been convicted and sentenced to the State penitentiary for not less than 10 years nor more than 20 years at hard labor, and to pay a fine of $500 and costs. In discussing the case Judge Bourquin said:

"In the matter of his offense and sentence, obviously petitioner was more sinned against than sinning. It is clear that he was in the hands of one of those too common mobs, bent upon vindicating its peculiar standard of patriotism and its odd concept of respect for the flag by compelling him to kiss the latter—a spectacle for the pity as well as the laughter of gods and men! Its unlawful and disorderly conduct, not his just resistance, nor the trivial and innocuous retort into which they goaded him, was calculated to degrade the sacred banner and to bring it into contempt. Its members, not he, should have been punished.

"Patriotism is the cement that binds the foundation and the superstructure of the State. The safety of the latter depends upon the integrity of the former. Like religion, patriotism is a virtue so indispensable and exalted its excesses pass with little censure. But when, as here, it descends to fanaticism, it is of the reprehensible quality of the religion that incited the massacre of St. Bartholomew, the tortures of the inquisition, the fires of Smithfield, the scaffolds of Salem, and is equally cruel and murderous. In its name, as in that of Liberty, what crimes have been committed! In every age it, too, furnishes its heresy hunters and its witch burners, and it, too, is a favorite mask for hypocrisy, assuming a virtue which it haveth not. So the mobs mentioned were generall the chosen and last resort of the slacker, military and civil, the profiteer, and the enemy sympathizer, masquerading as superpatriots to divert attention from their real character. Incidentally, it is deserving of mention here that in the records of this court is a report of its grand jury that before it attempts had been made to prostitute the Federal espionage law to wreak private vengeance and to work private ends.

"As for the horrifying sentence itself, it is of those criticised by Mr. Justice Holmes in Abrams' case, 250 U. S. 616, 40 Sup. Ct. 17, 63 L. Ed. 1173, in that, if it be conceded trial and conviction are warranted, so frivolous is the charge that a nominal fine would serve every end of justice. And it, with too many like, goes far to give color, if not justification, to the bitter comment of George Bernard Shaw, satirist and cynic, that during the war the courts in France, bleeding under German guns, were very severe; the courts in England, hearing but the echoes of those guns, were grossly unjust; but the courts of the United States,

THE SCIENTIFICALLY BUILT WATCH

A Watch or a Bracelet—which do you buy?

A woman does not buy a bracelet when she wants a watch. Yet, that is really what thousands of keen and experienced women buyers are doing unknowingly every day. And it is not their fault.

Ladies' wrist-watches are fashionable and they are always going to be fashionable. A lady does not buy a wrist-watch to take the place of a bracelet. She purchases a wrist-watch to tell her the time. And a wrist-watch that is always "going wrong", "stopping," or that spends most of its life upon the repair bench—that kind of a watch is neither beautiful nor useful—it is an expensive luxury.

Alas, there are scores of thousands of ladies' wrist-watches hiding their worthlessness in bureau drawers, knick-knack and jewel boxes because their owners discovered they were made merely to look at. And the majority of these watches bear foreign names. But as they were sold at such "low" prices, much lower than a tiny Waltham for instance, their owners thought that they were saving money.

A watch is bought upon "faith". And there is not an article sold wherein and whereof we can be so much deceived as in a watch. It is not the jeweler's fault. The demand for reliable, fine watches is greater than the supply. If he sells foreign watches he cannot take them to pieces to see if they are put together "right." He has no means of testing the metals, of knowing the pedigree of the different "parts." He, too, buys upon faith. He gets the blame when the "works" go wrong, not the maker who lives four thousand miles away.

There are ladies who may be reading this advertisement who own tiny, exquisite looking wrist-watches that simply will not "go" or keep time. They have sent them to the leading jewelers in their town, but the trouble cannot seemingly be put right. Why is this?

There are two reasons: one, that the watch was sold at a price which forbade fine workmanship and materials. Two, that the watch lacked standardization, which is essential in tiny wrist-watches if they are to keep continuous and dependable time.

And you cannot purchase a dependable wrist-watch except at a relatively increasing price as the size of the watch decreases. In other words, the smaller the watch the greater the cost. Errors of workmanship can exist in, say, a watch of medium size, that would be disastrous in a tiny watch. The "works" of the tiny watch must be perfect even to the fraction of a human hair. For instance:

When the dial of a ladies' wrist-watch gets below the size of a twenty-five cent piece, the cost of such a watch mounts rapidly; and when the dial decreases to the size of a dime, the cost has increased at least four to five times as much. The smaller the watch, the greater the cost. That is, if the watch was made to keep dependable time. And a small ladies' wrist-watch is rarely dependable if it lacks standardization. The fame, reliability and worth of the Waltham Watch has been built upon this undeniable fact. The tiniest ladies' wrist-watch made on this continent is a Waltham; although its dial is even smaller than a dime, it keeps the same dependable time as the larger Waltham gentlemen's watch, known all over the world for its accuracy and reliability.

And the reason this tiniest of ladies' wrist-watches keeps the time "day in and year out," is because it is standardized. It is a tiny, but perfect reproduction of the highest grade, larger Waltham Watch. Every part, every jewel, wheel and pinion-bearing is perfection itself because of exact standardized reduction in size. Just as you see a star reflected in a dewdrop—so in these exquisite, tiny, perfect time-pieces you have beauty, plus a lifelong service, which is the only reason why you desire to own and to buy a wrist-watch.

Do not be misguided by "lower prices" or "just as good," or high sounding foreign names when you go to buy your wrist-watch. No lady desires a watch that will soon be hidden away among disused trinkets, or that will cost her a small fortune in upkeep.

The more tiny the watch, the more it will cost you; but a beautiful, small wrist-watch is a prized possession indeed, when you can depend upon it. The name of Waltham upon the dial is an assurance of integrity in workmanship, of dependability, and true value for what you pay for it. It will profit you to insist that your wrist-watch be a Waltham.

Public Carriers Shall Hold Forgotten Parcels.

A passenger on a subway car, on reaching his destination, took with him a parcel which had been left on the car by another passenger, who had previously alighted. He was stopped by a railway guard, and asked what he was going to do with the parcel, and replied that he would keep the package and advertise for the owner. The same question was asked by the railway superintendent, and the same reply given. The passenger was then placed under arrest, and held in $500 bail, and remained in a cell until the bail was furnished. The package, on being opened, disclosed a loaf of bread. The next morning he was tried and acquitted of a charge of petit larceny. An action was instituted by the passenger against the railway company for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution. The complaint was dismissed, and judgment rendered for defendant at a trial term, which judgment was affirmed by the Appellate Division. The latter judgment was affirmed by the Court of Appeals of New York in Foulke vs. New York Consol. R. Co., 127 Northeastern Reporter, 237.

The majority opinion, which was written by Judge Collin, makes clear the status of property left by departing passengers on public conveyances. Such property is not abandoned or lost property, but passes to the carrier as a gratuitous bailee, with a corresponding duty of safekeeping for the owner; and the arrest of a passenger taking such property is justified, as the taking from the carrier's possession with intent to deprive the true owner thereof is larceny.

Accidental Adulteration of Milk Not Proved.

An action for the recovery of a penalty for selling adulterated milk to a cheese factory was tried by the New York Supreme Court at Trial Term for St. Lawrence County in People vs. Hart, 181 New York Supplement, 796. Defendant's wife had accidentally spilled four quarts of clean water into a can of milk, and before offering it for sale she informed the cheese maker and the inspector of the accident, and asked them to accept the milk and deduct the weight of the water. Judgment was rendered for the people for the minimum penalty of $50. Judge Van Kirk in discussing the case said:

"If this seems a strict construction of the statute in this particular case, it is not more severe than the protection of the public requires, or than our courts have upheld. The plaintiff's wife was not a witness. We are not informed how the accident happened, but the fact that the adulteration of the milk was admitted when in the presence of the inspector suggests a necessity for enforcing the statute as it reads. All milk received from customers at factories is not tested. If a person may deliver milk into which water has been poured and have it weighed, until an inspector is present and the milk is about to be tested, and then avoid the penalty by declaring that a certain quantity of water has been accidentally poured into the milk, the public would not be well protected, and the purpose of the statute would not be accomplished. Had the defendant obeyed the statute, he would simply have lost, because of his own mistake, the sale to the factory of his one can of milk; he could still have used it in many ways."

Move to Enjoin Action of Ordinance Fails

A suit to enjoin the enforcement of an ordinance of the City of Los Angeles making it unlawful to practice law in the city without procuring a license was heard in the United States District Court for the Southern District of California, Southern Division, in Overton vs. City of Los Angeles, 263 Federal Reporter, 951. Complaints contended that, since the Federal Court admits lawyers to practice, that privilege could not be taxed by a city.

The contention was based on the theory that to tax the privilege of practicing law in the Federal Court would be to tax one of our Federal institutions, and be in violation of the Federal Constitution providing for Federal Courts. During the argument counsel expressed regret at being unable to find authorities directly in point. Judge Trippet's re-

INGROWN NAILS

Toe Nail Turns Out Itself if you Toughen the Skin

A noted authority says that a few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensative skin underneath the toe nail, that it cannot penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost overnight.

"Outgro" is a harmless, antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

ECZEMA

Also Called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Water Poison, Weeping Skin, Etc.

DR. CANNADAY

Eczema Specialist for 15 years.

For fifteen years I have been treating one disease alone, ECZEMA. I have handled over one million cases. I do not pretend to know it all, but I am convinced the disease is due to an excess of acid in the blood, and closely related to rheumatism and cancer. This acid must be removed.

Eczema is called by some people Itch, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Weeping Skin, etc. I am fully convinced Eczema is a curable disease, and when I say it can be cured, I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for a while to return worse than before. It makes no difference what other doctors have told you, or what all you have tried, all I ask is just a chance to prove to you that this vast experience has taught me a great deal that would be of help to you. If you will write me today I will send you a free trial of my mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will do more to convince you than I or anyone else could in a month's preaching. It's all up to you. If you suffer any more with eczema and refuse to merely write to me for free trial, just blame yourself. No matter where you live, I have treated your neighbors. Merely dropping me a postal today is likely to give you more real comfort in a week than you ever expected to enjoy again. Do it right now, your very life may be at stake.

search met with more success, however, and his labors were rewarded by finding what he called "the very best of authority concerning the controversy," being two cases in the United States Supreme Court, Brown vs. State of Maryland, 12 Wheaton, 419, 6 L. Ed. 678, and Royal vs. State of Virginia, 116 U. S. 572, 6 Sup. Ct. 510, 29 L. Ed. 735.

Continuing, Judge Trippet said: "The opinion in Brown vs. Maryland was written by Chief Justice Marshall. The case involved a statute of Maryland, which required importers of foreign articles to take out a license, and made it a penal offense for violating the law. Chief Justice Marshall held that the law was in violation of the provision of the Constiution which provides that Congress shall have the power 'to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states, and with the Indian tribes.' In deciding the case the Chief Justice said:

"'But, should it be proved that a duty on the article itself would be repugnant to the Constitution, it is still argued that this is not a tax upon the article, but on the person. The state, it is said, may tax occupations, and this is nothing more. It is impossible to conceal from ourselves that this is varying the form without varying the substance. It is treating a prohibition, which is general, as if it were confined to a particular mode of doing the forbidden thing. All must perceive that a tax on the sale of an article, imported only for sale, is a tax on the article itself. It is true the state may tax occupations generally, but this tax must be paid by those who employ the individual, or is a tax on his business. The lawyer, the physician or the mechanic must either charge more on the article in which he deals, or the thing itself is taxed through his person. This the state has a right to do, because no constitutional prohibition extends to it. So a tax on the occupation of an importer is, in like manner, a tax on importation. It must add to the price of the article, and be paid by the consumer, or by the importer himself, in like manner as a direct duty on the article itself would be made. This the state has not a right to do, because it is prohibited by the Constitution.'

"The statement here concerning the power of the state to tax the lawyer may be regarded as obiter dictum; but what this great jurist said concerning the Constitution of the United States must be accepted as authority, even though it were contained in a letter to a friend. And it would be presumptuous on my part not to heed what he says."

"The bill was dismissed."

Evidence Obtained by Illegal Raid Excluded.

In the case of Ex parte Jackson, 263 Federal Reporter, 110, on application for habeas corpus to secure release of petitioner, who was held for deportation as a dangerous alien, Judge Bourquin of the United States District Court for the district of Montana, in condemning the use of evidence secured during an unlawful raid, eloquently expounded the law relating to the personal rights of security and safety secured by the Federal Constitution, in the following statement: "The law and courts no more sanction such evidence than such methods, and no more approve either than the thumbscrew and the rack. Otherwise the vicious circle of age-old tyranny—to subject to and convict by unlawful means because guilty, and to condemn as guilty because subjected to, and convicted by, unlawful means, to which both alien and citizen fall victim. The Declaration of Independence, the writings of the fathers, the revolution, the Constitution, and the Union, all were inspired to overthrow and prevent like governmental despotism. They are yet living, vital and potential forces to those ends, to safeguard all domiciled in the country, alien as well as citizen.

"For the inalienable rights of personal security and safety, orderly and due process of law, are the fundamentals of the social compact, the basis of organized society, the essence and justification of government, the foundation, key and capstones of the Constitution. They are limited to no man, race or nation, to no time, place or occasion, but belong to man, always, everywhere, and in all circumstances. * * * No emergency, in war or peace, warrants their violation; for in emergency, real or assumed, tyrants in all ages have found excuse for their destruction. * * *

"Assuming petitioner is of the so-called 'Reds,' and of the evil practice charged against him, he and his kind are less a danger to America than are those who indorse or use the methods that brought him to deportation. These latter are the mob and the spirit of violence and intolerance incarnate, the most alarming manifestation in America today. Far worse than the immediate wrongs to individuals that they do, they undermine the morale of the people, excite the latter's fears, distrust of our institutions, doubts of the sufficiency of law and authority. * * *

"They are no new thing, these present excesses. They are the reactions of all great wars, and in due time run their course. In his Constitutional History of England, Freeman describes much the same following the Napoleonic wars, viz., that in England those who ventured to raise their voices to reform corrupt politics and oppressive government, or to improve conditions for the working class, were bitterly denounced as pro-French, charged and tried for treason, popular clamor and violence directed against them, and the bar intimidated from defending them. How history doth repeat itself! * * * And yet confidence in the Constitution and national sanity is justified. All extremists will fail to overthrow them. Even as the 'Reds,' the advocates of arbitrary power, whether within or without

Burroughs Calculator

If you have much figuring to do in your business, you are undoubtedly acquainted with the Burroughs Adding Machines and you probably know something about Burroughs Bookkeeping Machines.

But do you know that there is another type of Burroughs figuring machine especially designed for extremely rapid figuring, where a printed list of items is not necessary—for that big figure job in every business where all that is wanted is the answer?

With a Burroughs Calculator any clerk can work out figure problems faster than the best trained specialist can do them by mental calculation. For example, to figure that well-known discount—less 80-30-15-2 involves eight separate mathemetical problems which have to be solved whether you put down the figures on paper or carry them in your head. With the Burroughs Calculator it is only necessary to know the decimal equivalent of the discount to be taken, and by a simple mechanical operation the answer appears on the dials of the machine.

The Burroughs Calculator

This handy little machine—easy to learn, easy to operate, goes straight to the answer; extending and checking invoices and freight bills; gathering cost, selling price or profit totals; totaling weights and quantities; proving ledger postings and trial balances; extending and adding inventory figures; and analyzing production records.

Ask a Burroughs man to show you the Calculator. It will give you a new conception of the speed and accuracy with which all sorts of routine figuring can be done.

The A B C of Business

Adding, Bookkeeping and Calculating represent the three great groups of figuring operations that constitute the A B C of business. To handle these operations the Burroughs Adding Machine Company manufacture three types of machines in a wide variety of styles and sizes, among which may be found a machine that will fit the needs of any business, large or small.

5000 Sufferers to Get Free Trial Plapao

No Need to Go Through Life Wearing a Useless Truss

This generous offer is made by the inventor of a wonderful "all-day-and-night" working method which is to be used to tone up and strengthen the relaxed muscles, thereafter doing away with painful trusses altogether, and the necessity for dangerous operations.

NOTHING TO PAY

To the extent of 5000 sufferers who write—Mr. Stuart will send a sufficient quantity of the Plapao, without charge to enable you to give it a thorough test. You pay nothing for this trial of Plapao, now, or ever.

STOP USING A TRUSS

Yes, stop it, you know by your own experience, it is only a makeshift, a false prop against a collapsing wall, and that it is undermining your health because it tends to retard the circulation of the blood. Why, then, continue to wear it? Here is a better way, which you can now prove for yourself, free of charge.

PLAPAO EXUDES THROUGH THIS OPENING

"A" is the enlarged end of the PLAPAO-PAD, which overlies the atrophied and weakened muscles to keep them from giving away further.

"B" is the properly shaped Pad, to be applied in such a way that it blocks up the hernial orifice, and tends to prevent the contents of the abdomen from protruding. Within the Pad is a reservoir. In this reservoir there is placed a wonderful absorbent astringent medication. As soon as this medication is warmed by the heat of the body it becomes soluble and escapes through the small opening marked "C" and is absorbed through the pores of the skin to strengthen the weakened muscles and effect a closure of the openings.

"F" is the long end of the PLAPAO-PAD which is to be plastered over the hipbone—a part of the frame-work of the body calculated to give the necessary solidity and support to the PLAPAO-PAD.

USED FOR A DOUBLE PURPOSE

First: The primary and most important object of the PLAPAO-PADS is to keep constantly applied to the relaxed muscles the medication called Plapao, which is contrastive in nature, and taken together with the ingredients in the medicated mass is intended to increase the circulation of the blood, thus revivifying the muscles and restoring them to their normal strength and elasticity. Then, and not until then, can you expect the rupture to disappear.

Second: Being made self-adhesive, purposely to prevent the pad from shifting, they have therefore proven to be an important adjunct in retaining rupture that cannot be held by a truss.

Hundreds of people, old and young, have gone before officers qualified to acknowledge oaths, and sworn that the PLAPAO-PADS cured their ruptures—some of them most aggravated cases—and of long standing.

CONTINUOUS NIGHT-AND-DAY ACTION

A striking feature of the Plapao-Pad treatment is the comparatively short time it takes to get results.

This is because the action is continuous—night and day, throughout the whole of the 24 hours.

There is no inconvenience, no discomfort, no pain. Yet minute after minute, while you are going about your daily duties—even while you are sleeping—this wonderful [illegible]

FRECKLES

A THING OF THE PAST

Get rid of them now, this very minute by new method. DERWILLO (liquid) protects the skin so that freckles will not appear, and with proper protection from wind and hot sun freckles cannot exist. If they have already made their appearance, with proper protection they rapidly disappear. Derwillo does this for you. The very first application proves it. Just try this test: Note to what extent your freckles show, then apply Derwillo and examine again and see how much fainter they appear. By using DERWILLO throughout the summer you will remove them and keep them away entirely. Druggists refund the money if it fails. Derwillo not only removes freckles, but instantly beautifies the complexion as well. There is no substitute for Derwillo as no other freckle remover does this, so do not accept a substitute, then you won't be disappointed. Your druggist has it or can get it for you. It is absolutely harmless in every way. ST. LOUIS UNIVERSITY MAN RECEIVES D. A. C. CITATION

Lieut. John T. Maguire Rewarded for Extraordinary Heroism in Exermont Engagement.

Lieut. John T. Maguire of 4429 Olive street, former St. Louis University football star, has received from the War Department the official citation under which recent award to him of the Distinguished Service Cross was made. The citation follows:

"For extraordinary heroism in action near Exermont, France, Oct. 4, 1918. Although severely wounded, Lieut. Maguire refused to be evacuated and continued to lead his platoon until again wounded and forced by exhaustion, due to loss of blood, to be evacuated."

Lieut. Maguire was wounded twice previously, once by a rifle bullet at Seicheprey and later by a revolver bullet in the face at Cantigny. He was a First Lieutenant in B Company, 18th Infantry, First Division.

CURIOUS DECISIONS OF COURTS CITED IN RECENT LAW REVIEW

law, will in due time pass away. It is for the courts to restrain both, when brought within jurisdiction."

Denied Alimony While Living in Husband's House.

A wife suing for a limited divorce for cruel and inhuman treatment was granted temporary alimony and a counsel fee of $250. She and her infant child were, at the time, living in her husband's house, where he also resided. The Supreme Court of New York, Appellate Division, Second Department, in Bruggemann vs. Bruggemann, 182 New York Supplement, 87, modified the order by denying alimony pendente lite, and reducing the allowance for counsel fee to $100, for the following reasons, as stated in the opinion of Presiding Judge Jenks: "It is true that the woman deposes that she had been ordered to 'get * * * out' of her home; but she is not corroborated, and she does not specify either time or circumstance. If such an order was given, evidently she felt secure to disobey it; and, for aught that appears, her stay is voluntary and neither degrading nor dangerous. If the affidavit of her husband is to be credited, her abode in the home is agreeable to him, aside from its effect upon this litigation or the saving of his money. There is no proof that the woman and the child are not afforded maintenance in this house according to the station of life of the parties. The purpose of alimoney is support. * * * It should be denied in this case. * * * I do not advise a denial of any counsel fee, especially as the defendant intends to raise the question of jurisdiction, which he may do at trial, * * * but I think that only $100 should be allowed. The condition of the Special Term calendar affords a trial forthwith, if both parties are anxious for a disposition of the issue upon the merits."

A ball with which three little girls were playing rolled under a bear cage, and in attempting to recover it one of the children was severely injured by the bear, which reached between the bars of the cage and caught her by the hair and severely tore her scalp. The cage was safeguarded by a fence and was elevated over a foot from the ground. An action for the injuries was brought on the the theory that the keeping of the bear constituted a nuisance, making liability absolute. The trial court dismissed the complaint at the conclusion of plaintiff's case, which ruling was affirmed by the Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court, First Department, in Guzzi vs. New York Zoological Society, 182 New York Supplement, 257. Judge Merrell wrote the opinion wherein he expressed the court's views on the question as follows:

"We are unable to see any legal basis for plaintiff's claim that the keeping of the bear undr the circumstances constituted a nuisance. The New York Zoological Society is chartered by the Legislature, and maintains in Bronx Park, for educational and entertainment purposes, a display of wild animals. The animals are safely confined in cages, and suitable fences for keeping the public away from the cages have been erected. The defendant is there conducting this exhibit under legislative authority, and it cannot possibly be guilty of maintaining a nuisance under the circumstances."

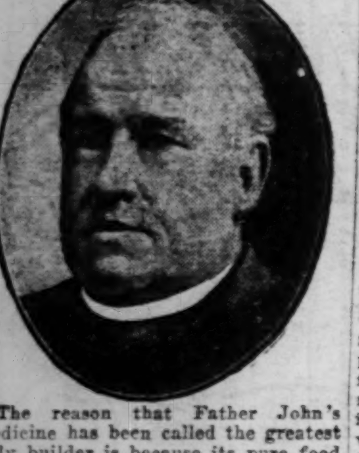
Why It Is Called "The Greatest Body Builder"



The reason that Father John's Medicine has been called the greatest body builder is because its pure food elements are so prepared that those who are weak and run down, under weight and in poor health, are able to take up the nourishment which it contains and really make use of it in rebuilding flesh and strength.

The system follows nature's own method in thus establishing normal flesh and strength. Father John's Medicine is not a stimulant and is guaranteed free from alcohol or dangerous drugs.

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY CONVENTION MAY 2-4

Backers Seek to Have New Administration Send Cabinet Members.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO.—A request that the new administration adopt a liberal plan of having the various Cabinet members attend conventions and gatherings of national importance, in order that the Government may be guided in giving recognition to worthy undertakings, have been made by the Mississippi Valley Association, through the organization's president, Harry H. Merrick, of Chicago.

In line with the above request, Merrick states, that he hopes to have the administration inaugurate the plan at the coming convention of the Mississippi Valley Association, to be held at New Orleans, May 2, 3 and 4, by having H. C. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, attend and participate in the agricultural conference, which, according to Merrick, promises to be one of the most important of the six conferences at which will be discussed, in detail, the economic phases of the valley territory.

That the request is meeting with popular sentiment is evidenced by the fact, Merrick states, Wallace feels kindly towards the movement and in all probability will be present. E. T. Meredith, former Secretary of Agriculture, under President Wilson's administration, will also attend the conference.

"The Mississippi Valley prestige, as a producing area of agricultural products, demands that every effort shall be exerted towards developing this natural asset to the fullest possible measure," says Merrick. "The citizens of this vast area are working in harmony to the end that even greater production may be had. But, there are many phases of development that these citizens can be largely assisted in through the aid of Government co-operation. It is the intention of the Mississippi Valley Association to secure this cooperation by placing before the proper authorities at Washington the needs and aims of the Mississippi Valley in an intelligent and comprehensive manner.

"Surely there can be no more authentic method to impress the Government with the genuineness of these efforts, than to have individual interests, representing every state and community in the Mississippi Valley, express themselves in open conference before the Cabinet members, who in turn, can terminate their findings to the authorities at Washington for their consideration and co-operation.

"In every phase of valley development we shall urge the fullest Government co-operation. Waterways, transportation, economics, reclamation, foreign trade, merchant marine, and agriculture will be discussed in detail at these conferences, and, while it may not be possible to have Government officials present at all of these, it is our intention to place the information before the officials in order that the Mississippi Valley citizens may receive the proper Government support and sympathy in their efforts."

SAYS HIGH SCHOOL WORK PRODUCES BACHELOR GIRLS

PHILADELPHIA.—Does a high school education make bachelor maids?

Elizabeth McDowell, teacher of commerce in the South Philadelphia High School for Girls, reports that parents she has visited in her capacity of co-ordinating teacher, raise this question.

The duty of the co-ordinating teacher, an innovation in the public schools here, is an attempt through visits to the home and work places to co-ordinate the school, the home and industry in the training of the future citizens.

Some of the reasons why girls are taken from school, Miss McDowell has found, are:

To earn money so that an older brother can go to college.

The girl is taking music lessons and she cannot afford to do that and go to high school.

The time between graduation and marriage will be so short that her earnings would be of little benefit to her parents.

High schools, say some parents, "spoil" girls and make them "too smart."

"In my early experience as a visiting teacher I found many parents who were opposed to a high school education for girls because the girl was then less likely to marry," says Miss McDowell.

"Each year I find fewer complaints of this kind, but I still find many foreigners who think high schools spoil the girls. What has happened is that the foreign parents have depended so much on the older children for guidance and advice that the children feel themselves superoir to them."

THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA

WHAT has been the lasting heritage of the war? In brief, a nation of keener thinking, knowledge-demanding people. The war had a profound effect on the 100,000,000 inhabitants of this country. It carried their interests from the town or city in which they live across the water into foreign countries, to every part of the world. They became no longer content to know only their neighbor across the street, but they wanted to learn of their neighbors in all nations of the earth. The war created in the people a thirst for knowledge, world wide in compass. The war instilled in the people the habit of thinking broadly in world wide terms, of wanting information on subjects they never dreamed of before, of thinking more deeply on the problems of the day. Over the two and a half years since the war, during the political, social, economic adjustment in this country, this habit of the people has grown stronger and stronger until today there has never been manifest such eagerness among the people for knowledge—knowledge on every conceivable subject under the sun.

The Britannica Goes Hand in Hand With the Awakened World

Where can people find the means to satisfy this demand for knowledge? The greatest reservoir of knowledge in existence—authoritative and comprehensive—is the Encyclopaedia Britannica, the most widely known, the most reverenced—the resource of thousands of men and women, seekers of knowledge in every generation for a century and a half. It is the book of the hour to satisfy the increased demand for knowledge by the awakened people of today.

Are You Keeping Abreast of the Times?

Today as never before the man and woman needs every ounce of knowledge he or she can obtain in order to cope with the present business, political, social and economic readjustment. Business particularly has been facing new and strange conditions, endeavoring to get back to a normal basis. In this tremendous readjustment it has been the men with the broad foundation of knowledge who, as executives and workers in our industries, have been able to take the responsibility and have risen speedily to positions of greater power and greater remuneration. To the business man, manufacturer, the worker in the industries, the Britannica will furnish information of practical, helpful and comprehensive character, and furnish a knowledge which will give to the man broader insight into his work and the problems of today.

The man who holds his job today during this readjustment period is he who is particularly fitted for his work, the man who knows more than his fellows. Knowledge is always above par in the market and the easiest commodity in the world to sell, as an employer will gladly pay your price if you have the knowledge to deliver. An investment in the Britannica will pay you many times over in dividends of knowledge, pleasure and satisfaction.

The Most Authoritative Work in the World

The Britannica has had a long and enviable career, and has grown in authority and esteem from generation to generation until it occupies the position today as the great reference book, ahead of any other in any country or in any language. It has had as its contributors a host of the greatest experts in the entire world throughout the 150 years of its existence. When you read an article in the Britannica, therefore, you feel confident that the information is reliable and authoritative, for the Britannica is the product of the wisest minds of the day, each a great specialist in the particular subject on which he is furnishing an article in the Britannica.

The Britannica discusses in a way that you can understand every branch of science, industry, literature, art, religion, inventions and engineering, history and race development, architecture, astronomy, chemistry, sociology, education, steam, electricity, geology and geography, biography, law and physics. You and your family will find in the Britannica a liberal education.

A Means of Self Development—A Home University

In placing the Eleventh Edition before the public, the Press of the University of Cambridge announced: "The Eleventh Edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica is now offered to the public by the University of Cambridge in the hope and belief that it will be found to be a trustworthy guide to sound learning, and an instrument of culture of world wide influence." Seldom has a hope been so quickly and completely realized. Thousands of owners have found the Britannica an indispensable means of self education. An instructor at Princeton has written that the Britannica has become the "collection of books" which Carlyle might term "the true university;" a teacher in a business college that "by its purchase I have secured access to a university education;" the president of an insurance company that "universally possessed it ought to educate the race. It is the people's university."

How shall America readjust her industrial conditions? Is the present League of Nations likely to succeed? Will the cost of living fall abruptly? Will wages continue high? Is the fall of the Bolshevist regime in Russia imminent? Will Germany fulfill its treaty obligations?

By means of the extraordinary articles in the Encyclopaedia Britannica on economics, industries, politics, government, labor and capital you will be able to obtain a clear insight into the problems of today.

What the Britannica Will Do for You

The Britannica will stimulate you to improve your education whether or not you've had a college education. It will furnish you with a teacher of any subject you wish to study—a teacher who is master of his subject and tells what he knows in clear, simple language—a teacher who is always at your command.

It will give you the answers to the thousand and one questions that the morning paper, sermons and books prompt in every active mind. It will make everything you see, read and hear more interesting.

It will enable you to lay out a plan of education for your children and keep abreast with their studies.

It will give you the history of every country in the world, every race, every city and the lives of all the men and women who have left their mark upon the world.

It will tell you more about every city, town, mountain range, lake, sea, desert, river, and every other place of interest than you would learn by visiting them.

SIMPLE APPLICATION THAT DISSOLVES BLACKHEADS

No more squeezing and pinching to get rid of those unsightly blemishes, blackheads. There is one simple, safe and sure way to get them out, and that is to dissolve them. To do this, just get about two ounces of calonite powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet sponge—rub briskly over the blackheads for a few seconds—wash the parts and every blackhead will be gone.

Pinching and squeezing out blackheads make large pores, and you cannot get all of the blackheads out this way—while this simple application of calonite powder and water dissolves every particle of them and leaves the skin and pores in their natural condition. Any druggist will sell you the calonite powder, and about two ounces will be all you will ever need.

PERSIAN TEXTILES ON DISPLAY AT MUSEUM

Rich Brocades and Velvets of 16th Century Show Oriental Taste for Color.

Like a colorful section of the Orient transplanted bodily to Western surroundings, is the gallery of Persian and Indian textiles, glass, ceramics, miniatures and metal work collected by R. Khan Monif, which is on view at the City Art Museum in Forest Park. In all these objects the innate Oriental feeling for color and design is a most prominent feature. The iridescent turquoise and lustered potteries of Rakka, Rhages and Sultanabad were described in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch.

Not less attractive, and far more colorful, are the richly patterned brocades, velvets and embroidered panels of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, with which the walls of the gallery are hung. The old Persian weavers worked in a leisurely fashion, developing with infinite skill and patience the intricate patterns which had, perhaps, been inherited from generation to generation. Predominating among the decorations used on the pieces shown at the museum is the palmette, the characteristic Persian motif, made familiar to Americans through such Western adaptations as the once highly popular Paisley shawls. The origin of this motif, which resembles in outline a pointed and gracefully curved leaf made up of various flower and plant units, is, according to Monif, now quite forgotten. It may be a conventionalized representation of the cypress tree, which in Persia is the emblem of life, having none of the somber associations usually attached to it in Western countries.

Palmette in Many Forms.

The pieces shown exhibit the palmette in every conceivable variation of form and color in brocade, needlework and printed stuffs. There are fragments of rich brocades, possibly from the garments of court officials, in which the palmette is made up of tiny florets of vibrant but soft-toned reds and purples, placed against backgrounds of gold or silver threads. In these stuffs, glowing with subdued color, we see that the Persian weavers and dyers discovered the secret of broken and vibrating color effects long before the European impressionists. Other examples of brocades have a decoration consisting of a repeating pattern of flowers, flowers and birds and various plant forms, all marked by the same soft, glowing harmonies of color. Much of this splendid color is due to the employment by the Persians of vegetable dyes exclusively, which were prepared often by members of the family of the weaver, from formulas developed through many generations.

Section Devoted to Cut Velvets.

One section of the wall is devoted to cut velvets of striking design. Some of these are boldly patterned with floral figures in red pile upon gold or silver backgrounds, and others are in delicate silver grays. In one of the latter pieces the gray squares are filled with tiny flowers of such delicacy and variety of color as to impart to the fabric a gentle iridescence not unlike that upon the old Syrian glass in a nearby case.

There are many examples of embroidery and needle work, showing the most delicate and painstaking workmanship and with characteristic refinement and richness of color. Examples of stuffs having designs printed from blocks in the manner of European calico are also shown. Some of the textiles are of Indian manufacture, the weavers of India, particularly in the north in the region of Cashmere, having been strongly influenced by the Parsian tradition.

Monif, the owner, is in St. Louis with the collection.

The exhibition will close April 20.

The Doctor's Advice

by Dr. Lewis Baker

Orrie writes: "I have been taking salts to purify my blood and cure my skin of itching and pimples, but don't get much benefit. Please prescribe for this."

Answer: I advise three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur), composed of sulphur, cream of tartar and vegetable extracts that remove constipation and purify the system. Take this treatment for several months for best results.

"Nerves" writes: "I want your free advice. I seem to have gone all to pieces. I am irritated and annoyed by dizzy moments, nervousness, fickle appetite, no strength and life has no pleasures for me any more."

Answer: There are thousands who live too fast and then find themselves in your plight. The nervous vigor has been deranged. A tonic invigorating medicine called Cadomene tablets will afford aid to Nature by supplying more food-energy and give your system a chance to recuperate, when calm nerves should take place of shattered nerves.

"Laborer" asks: "I am so affected with painful kidneys that I cannot work regularly. Backaches and often have chills and fever, making me real sick for a day."

Answer: A good tonic, soothing and neutralizing medicine for such complaints is Balmwort tablets. Try them and continue a few weeks and I am sure you will write me of your recovery.

"Mildred" writes: "I am constantly embarrassed because of the fact of my extreme thinness. I have absolutely no color in my face and lips and I am dull and lifeless most of the time. Please advise me what to do.

Answer: If you are so thin and pale and your lips and cheeks are colorless it is because your blood is so deficient in red corpuscles. This can be easily overcome by the use of three-grain Hypo-Nuclane Tablets, which can be had from any druggist in sealed cartons with full directions for taking. When the blood is enriched by the use of these tablets your weight will increase.

"Fern" writes: "I have suffered with a bad cough for some time and I am tired most of the time, which I think is due to the severe coughing. Can you give me a remedy?"

Answer: Get a 2½-oz. package of essence Mentho-Laxene and make according to directions on the bottle, then take a teaspoonful every hour or two until the cough is cured. This makes a full pint of the very best and safest cough syrup.

Mrs. M. asks: "My scalp itches terribly, is feverish and a great amount of oily dandruff is present. What is good for this?"

Answer: Apply plain yellow Minyol about once a week as per directions. This relieves the itching, overcomes the dandruff and makes the hair beautifully glossy and vigorous. Obtain in 4-oz. jars of druggists.

M. S. H. writes: "I am a bad-blood victim and have used mercurial treatment without much success. I suffer greatly with rheumatic pains and aches."

Answer: Vitiated blood is often the cause of rheumatism, and to thoroughly cleanse and purify the blood I recommend the use of elixir Chin-Cea compound. Well-stocked druggists supply it in 8-oz. sealed bottles, with full directions.

Mothers! Give Youngsters Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

They like Dr. Caldwell's, and it quickly relieves their constipation and headaches.

BEGIN to teach the child regular daily elimination as young as possible, and much constipation will be avoided later in life. The most convenient hour throughout life is immediately upon arising. It does not then interfere with play, school or work.

It is a mild, gentle laxative safe for young babies; effective for grownups. It is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, and most economical as a sixty cent bottle will last you many months.

For your information, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a compound of Egyptian Senna and other simple laxative herbs with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. Look on it as a good family friend, useful to relieve constipation and symptoms like headache, biliousness, colds, fever, bad breath, loss of appetite and sleep. TUBERCULOSIS COSTS $3,000,000 YEARLY Survey Shows St. Louis Loses That Amount Annually in Money and Efficiency.

Tuberculosis costs St. Louis more than $3,000,000 every year, according to figures compiled by the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis. This cost is in actual money paid out for the care of tuberculous persons, for the industrial loss because of impaired efficiency, for the economic loss through death, and for the potential loss through invalidism.

The Committee of One Hundred, formed about a year ago to make a survey of the cost to the nation of preventable diseases, which was headed by Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale, established that the economic value of a life to the nation is, at a minimum, $1700. There were 940 deaths from tuberculosis of the lungs alone in 1920, which, on this basis, means that tihs city suffered a potential loss of $1,598,000. Computing the loss on the same basis from other contagious diseases, it is found that smallpox cost the city nothing potentially, because there were no deaths from that disease; that whooping cough cost $51,700 through 31 deaths from that disease; that measles cost $202,300 through the 119 deaths from that disease; that typhoid fever cost $35,700 through 21 deaths; that the 260 deaths caused by diphtheria and croup cost the city $442,000; and that the cost of scarlet fever through 24 deaths was $40,800. This makes a total of $773,500 as the potential cost of all other contagious diseases in St. Louis in 1920, as against $1,598,000 loss because of tuberculosis.

In the matter of wages, tuberculosis cost the city $1,029,300 in 1920. This is figuring on an average wage of only $3 a day. Estimating the actual cost of the treatment and care of tuberculous patients in St. Louis in 1920, figuring medical attention and nursing at the minimum given in the New York survey of Dr. Hermann Biggs, $1.50 a day, the total reaches $514,650. Therefore, the economic loss through 940 deaths was $3,141,950. This is a smaller figure than that of 1919, because there were fewer deaths from tuberculosis in 1920.

St. Louis is said to rank fourth in its provisions for fighting tuberculosis. The Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis, through its educational and social service work, the City Health Department, the municipal nurses, and numerous other public and private health agencies, are trying to advance this rating. All have joined in the effort to obtain an increased municipal appropriation for tuberculosis work in St. Louis. Another hearing before the Board of Estimate and Apportionment on the proposed new antituberculosis appropriation is to be held this week. The Tuberculosis Society compiled the figures on economic loss for use at the hearing.

NEW LAWS BASED ON AMERICAN STATUTES ADOPTED IN SAMOA

Ten Commandments of Bible Were Original Laws of Native Inhabitants.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PAGO PAGO, American Samoa, March 1.—A new code of laws based on American statutes has developed in American Samoa from the disturbance of last year which culminated in the suicide of the Governor, Commander Warren J. Terhune.

The revised laws, drawn by Capt. Waldo Evans, the new Governor, and Judge A. M. Noble, and submitted to the native chiefs, mark an interesting change from the early laws provided for the Samoans.

When in 1900 the first Secretary of Native Affairs, Judge Gurr, asked the native rulers of the Samoan villages to submit laws to him for recommendation to the first Governor, he received from various villages a copy of the Ten Commandments of the Bible. This accompanied with the suggestion that penalties for their violation should consist of a fine in the shape of a hog and a barrel of beef.

These recommendations were not adopted in whole, for such penalties would have resulted in every offense paving the way for a feast in the village. This, officials decided, would prove too much of a temptation for the natives.

It is the custom of the Samoans, and was then, that when any offense is complained of and the offender not known, for the native pastor, or native magistrate, to compel each person in the village to declare his or her innocence by oath on the Bible.

On one occasion some church money was stolen from the box of a Samoan pastor, where it had been placed for safekeeping. The native pastor immediately went from house to house with a Bible, swearing in every inmate, but everyone declared innocence. He, however, forgot to take the oath himself, and the theft remained a mystery.

Some years afterward, the pastor became seriously ill and his relatives were called together. Having made certain that they were all in a forgiving mood, he then confessed that he was the culprit. Under the circumstances his people felt they could not but forgive him. Thereupon it was astonishing how rapid was his recovery.

Class on Pageantry for Churches.

A class on church singing and church pageantry will be conducted in two of the West End churches today by H. Augustin Smith, musical director of the Chautauqua Assembly of America. Smith is on his way home from Japan, where he went to stage a religious pageant in the world's Sunday school convention in Tokio. He will speak this afternoon at the Third Baptist Church and tonight at the West Presbyterian Church.

Tells About Arising "Every Hour or So" Throughout the Night, Because of Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Danger Signals for You!

"For two years I had suffered from disorders of the kidneys and bladder. Distressing pain in the back and hips, depression and extreme nervousness. Many nights every hour or so I would have to arise, as the pressure in bladder region was unbearable. My ankles swelled and my skin became dry and harsh. After using Balmwort Tablets I noticed relief and continued taking until now I feel wholly relieved of pain and suffering. I am glad to recommend Balmwort Tablets as a most reliable beneficial medicine."

Thus writes Mr. W. E. Goff, prominently connected with the D. L. & W. R. R., Syracuse, N. Y., just one of thousands who have found

For kidneys Balmwort and Bladder TABLET

DIVORCES WIFE ON 'CAMOUFLAGE' GROUNDS

Texas Man Says She Posed as Girl of 20 and After Wedding a Son, 18, Appeared.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WICHITA FALLS, Tex., April 9.—Carl Walker of Burkburnett, Tex., and formerly of St. Joseph, Mo., believes that the art of camouflage should be abolished in so far as it pertains to women.

Walker has obtained a divorce from his wife, Mrs. Maude Walker, in the District Court here, on grounds of misrepresentation and cruelty.

He testified that when he was courting his wife, a year and a half ago, she represented herself to be about 20 years of age. He was 20, also. He said that he was always gentle and kind to his wife and that he treated her as an innocent child and would not permit her to hear or see any of the ways of the world. He also said that when they were married he had $500 and was making $19.25 a week, and permitted her to buy pretty clothes and spend money freely for amusements.

After six months of married life, Walker said, a young man appeared on the scene. The newcomer was 18 years of age and was introduced to him by his own wife as her son. Here Walker investigated and found that his wife, whom he had always regarded as a tender child and who had represented herself as a young maiden, had been married before, that the 18-year-old boy was her son and that in reality she was 49 years old when he married her.

Walker said he grew indignant and proceeded to tell his wife what he thought, whereupon, he said, she threw him bodily out of the house and told him that if he didn't like it he could "beat" it, which he said he did.

The Court granted the divorce and Walker agreed with the Court that his wife had "put it over on him."

A Woman's Way

"I tried for four months to get my wife to try Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, which I know had helped a friend of mine who also suffered from stomach trouble. She insisted her case was different. I finally had to bribe her with a new dress. The first dose produced remarkable results, clearing up her complexion and restoring her appetite. She can now eat things she hadn't been able to for many years." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. BRISCOE COMPANY PLANS GREAT EXPANSION

Following the recent election of Clarence A. Earl as president, the Briscoe Motor Corporation has announced plans for the immediate future, which not only reflect the generally favorable motor car outlook, but bid fair to place the Briscoe high among the leading producers of the country in a relatively short time.

During his long connection with the automobile industry, and perhaps more particularly during his service as first vice presidennt of the Willys-Overland Co., Earl came to be recognized as a man who did things, and who had an abiding faith in the future of his industry.

His association with Briscoe gives him a car well and favorably known to the trade and the public; a group of plants second to none in efficiency, and the backing of financial resources adequate for any possible development.

As the first step in an aggressive campaign designed to give the Briscoe complete and country-wide representation, Kelly R. Jacoby has been appointed general sales manager. Jacoby was vice president in charge of purchases at the Willys-Overland. His appointment is a very definite indication of the company's future selling policy—to keep continually pushing ahead, and to support the actual sales work with both effective dealer co-operation and complete service to the Briscoe owner.

J. R. Findlater, a Briscoe veteran affectionately known to thousands of motor car distributors and dealers as "Jim," will remain as vice president, and realize a lifelong ambition to go to the happy haven of the automobile man in becoming Pacific Coast manager for the company.

RECORD PRODUCTION FOR DODGE BROTHERS

Announcement was made this week by Dodge Brothers that during the 12 months just ended the factory production, measured in dollars and cents, was with one exception the greatest in the history of the automobile industry. The exception is generally accepted to refer to the production of the Ford Motor Co.

In commenting on the record, a factory official emphasizes the fact that throughout the year no effort was made to establish any record, but the enormous production represented the normal growth in demand.

In connection with the factory announcement, Frank R. Tate of the Tate Motor Car Co. cites the local sales of Dodge Brothers cars for the month of March as showing the rapidity with which the motor car industry is returning to normalcy.

The volume of business consummated by the local distributer last month exceeded that of any month last year with the exception of March, 1920, which was the largest business in the history of the organization, last month being but 15 per cent less than the record month.

MANY REPUBLIC BUSSES OPERATING IN COUNTY

A new field for the Republic truck has been opened by the F. C. Meyer Motor Co., its distributer in the St. Louis district, and one that is proving profitable for all the interests concerned. The truck chassis is being given a spacious and handsome omnibus body, the capacity of each about 30 persons, and put into interurban service in St. Louis County. The omnibus enterprise is that of parties other than those in the Meyer company.

The latest 'bus, which has been labeled "Manchester Road," will shortly enter the run between Maplewood and Hollow, the latter near the Franklin County line and about 32 miles out. It is about the ninth vehicle of that type constructed under order by the Meyer company within the past year and a half, and all have been pronounced business successes, according to their owners. On the Lemay Ferry road, where the service was begun with a flivver 'bus, there are now two of the 30-passenger carriers on Republic truck chassis.

TO ESTABLISH CHAIN OF BATTERY STATIONS

A new U. S. L. battery service station, known as the Spinks Battery Service and Equipment Co., has opened at 6316 Delmar boulevard. L. T. Spinks, formerly of the General Motors Co., is president of the new company which is establishing a chain of battery service stations throughout the city.

In an endeavor to assist the Automobile Club in its membership drive the new company is offering a 25 per cent discount on U. S. L. batteries, rentals and recharging to all car owners placing their applications to the Auto Club through them. In other words, the purchaser of an average size battery receives a free membership to the Automobile Club.

BATTERY EXCHANGE NOW ON WASHINGTON AVENUE

The Battery Exchange, Inc., local distributers of the Philadelphia Diamond Grid storage battery, formerly located at 1830 Locust street, are now in their new home at 3311-13-15 Washington avenue.

According to Harry Brockman, president of the company, the new home, with a frontage of 75 feet on Washington avenue and a depth of 150 feet, is one of the most complete battery service stations in the city. It is also the first building to be erected on Washington avenue since the street has been widened. A formal opening of the station will be held April 15.

TELLS HISTORY OF RUBBER INDUSTRY

"Golden Year of Goodrich" Show Value of Rubber to the World.

So many of the things that go to make up the comfort and convenience of our daily life are taken for granted that it is small wonder most of us do not realize the important things that rubber does for us every day and how much it has increased the comfort and happiness of our existence.

The story of rubber and the story of one of the biggest of the rubber companies run almost parallel in their interest, and it is with particular interest that the pages of a booklet called "The Golden Year of Goodrich" are read. This is the story of the B. F. Goodrich Co. of Akron, to be sure, but it is also, none the less, the story of rubber and its development because it was Dr. Benjamin Goodrich who established the City of Akron as the center of the manufactured rubber industry of the world and the development of this company is the measure of the importance of the rubber industry as a whole.

The closing of 1920 marked the 50th year of the B. F. Goodrich Co. That half century has seen rubber take its place in the development of the motor car industry and if it had done nothing else that would be an important and significant service to humanity.

Rubber, however, enters into so many other things in industry, in the home, in transportation and in the activities of war as well as of peace, that to catalogue the list of things that rubber is and does would be roughly to give a picture of our daily lives. This is interestingly told in the booklet which the Goodyear Co. has issued by way of introduction to the interesting story of Dr. Goodrich's life.

A. A. A. EMBLEMS AGAIN ON WHITE HOUSE CARS

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 9.—The White House automobiles have new A. A. A. radiator emblems. President Warren G. Harding is a member of the Marion County Automobile Association that is affiliated with the American Automobile Association. At the direction of David Jameson, president of the national body, seconded by F. F. Bentley, head of the Ohio association, the A. A. A. headquarters here had special emblems made for the official governmental cars showing that the car-user believed in locality, state and nation-wide motoring co-operation.

Having made numerous road trips between Washington and Marion, most of the route being over the "Old National Road," President Harding has repeatedly come in contact with actual highway conditions, and in consequence has given the subject no small amount of attention. One point which he has always emphasized has had to do with proper maintenance after construction, and this opinion has been expressed by him again and again.

There is a belie fthat in any future Federal help to the States in highways, the "Head of the Nation" will insist upon a maintenance provision which shall be definitely expressed.

PRESENT DAY GASOLINE HINDERS LUBRICATION

The entire automobile industry seems to be asleep as to the serious danger lurking in the heavy end gasoline which is now being furnished throughout the country, according to Webster Colburn, vice president and general manager of the Dorris Motor Car Co., St. Louis.

The present-day motors have not been built to burn this heavy fuel, or kerosene. The result is serious dilution of the crank-case lubrication, as well as low gasoline mileage. Lack of lubrication is also subjecting motor cars and trucks to tremendous wear and unless the motors are improved to handle this heavy fuel, the operating cost on all cars and trucks will rise to stupendous proportion.

Colburn further states that the Dorris Motor Car Co. is developing an improved intake and exhaust manifold which will add from 10 to 50 per cent to the gasoline mileage and that it is expected to eliminate the danger from crank case dilution. Coincident with this improvement will come an improvement in the actual operation of the cars and trucks, which will be very noticeable.

NEW BATTERY STATION FOR WESTINGHOUSE

A new service station for Westinghouse batteries will open Monday at Seventeenth and Locust. The new company, which is incorporated, will be known as the St. Louis Battery Sales and Service Co. Gus Blair formerly of Murphysboro, Ill., is president of the new organization. T. B. Outhouse, also of Murphysboro, will assume active charge in the capacity of secretary and general manager.

The building selected is a very suitable one, with plenty of room for giving service on many cars inside at one time without crowding.

A complete stock of Westinghouse batteries will be carried, and free testing and filling service will be rendered on all makes of batteries.

The new distributors' territory will include Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri.

RAIL CROSSING PERIL PUT UP TO MOTORISTS

Probably more serious accidents occur among motorists at railroad crossings than at any other points in the highways, says Leslie Childs, legal editor of American Motorist.

"In the light of all this, it behooves the motorist to know just what is expected of him by law at points of this kind.

"It would seem that the courts have placed the duty to stop, look and listen at railroad crossings squarely upon the motorist. He cannot hope to recover for injury received at points of this kind unless he can show entire freedom from contributory negligence.

"And in exercising the required care he must of necessity take into consideration the physical surroundings of the particular place, such as trees, houses, etc., that may obstruct his view. If the surroundings demand it, he must not only stop, look and listen, but should get out of his machine and walk ahead to make certain the way is clear."

NEW HEIGHTS REACHED BY A GOOD NAME

In numbers and in monetary value, the production of Dodge Brothers cars during the twelve months recently ended, was, with a single exception, without parallel.

There is a deep and a special significance in this sales record.

Because they did not seek it in the ordinary way, it is all the more impressive that sales precedence should have been conferred upon their product.

The point of this achievement is that from the day the business was founded, Dodge Brothers never once laid stress on mere volume of production.

They never strove to surpass in the quantity of cars produced during any given period.

Their thought lay deeper than that. It was a deliberate thought, which looked toward the ultimate, not the immediate.

Their implicit conviction was that the one thing with which they should concern themselves was the true value of the cars they manufactured.

Given that good value, they were assured that greater and greater sales must of necessity follow.

They had faith, in other words, in the discernment of the average man and woman of America and of the world.

They were satisfied that as the value of Dodge Brothers car revealed itself, appreciation, admiration and larger volume would automatically follow.

They visualized this great good will, ever growing and continuing to grow, as long as motor cars should go forth bearing their name

They never permitted themselves or their associates to lose sight of this great principle in which they believed so thoroughly.

Their life work had taught them that there was no other sound way in which to build.

The lesson of it, the logic of it, is too plain, too clear and too complimentary to Dodge Brothers to require or permit extended comment.

Suffice it to say, that Dodge Brothers are more deeply appreciative than ever of the confidence it demonstrates on the part of the buying public.

Suffice it to say that this institution will never deviate by so much as a hair's breadth from the manufacturing principles which have brought about this unique and splendid tribute from the American people.

FAN BELT CARE AND ADJUSTMENT

The proper working of the fan at any engine speed, and hence the suction of the right amount of air to cool the water in the radiator, says Buick, depends solely on the fan belt. It is, therefore, important that the fan belt be kept in good working order.

When installing a fan belt, the first thing to do is to see that the pulleys are in line. This may be determined by placing a straight edge across the face of both pulleys at the same time. If the pulleys are out of their proper place, the upper pulley may easily be adjusted.

By loosening the fan spring tension and allowing the fan to drop to its lowest position, the belt may be worked around the carnkshaft pulley. It is always advisable to place the belt in position by hand, never using sharp tools for this purpose.

The next step is to raise the fan until the belt is tight; then turn down the spring tension adjustment nut. With this done, in order to determine the proper tension on the belt, press on the blades of the fan with the fingers. The fan should turn easily, yet not spin. The spring tension should be adjusted to give this result.

More fan belt trouble results from belts being too tight rather than too loose. A belt that is too tight has a tendency to draw one of the pulleys out of line.

HEAVY TAX BURDEN ON AUTO INDUSTRY

Last year the automotive interests paid the Federal Government approximately $150,000,000 in excise taxes.

Owners paid the various states nearly $75,000,000 in license fees.

It is estimated that personal property taxes on motor vehicles netted another $100,000,000. Recently a plan was advanced by a national body which would have added $150,000,000 more to the Federal tax burdens in 1921.

It is estimated that the plans which will be offered in the various states to raise revenue in 1921 will add approximately $100,000,000 more to the list.

This makes a total of $575,000,000 in fixed and proposed taxation.

The National Automobile Dealers' Association voices the following protest against this tax burden:

"How much more taxation can the automobile industry stand? Must we be picked upon because we are a big business, and made to shoulder the major portion of the State's revenue? If we are singled out, who is going to present our side of the case? Can we do it singly? No.

"The only successful way for us to present our side of the case is with united effort. The National Automobile Dealers' Association is the only body moving in national dealer matters, and besides this activity, it is assisting in State legislative programs wherever feasible."

WEAR AND TEAR TIRES EXPLAINED

The fact that tires on the right-hand side of a car wear out faster in proportion than those on the left-hand side puzzles motorists. The popular supposition that this wear is caused by turning many corners to the right is incorrect, says Motor Life. The fact is that the increased wear is actually caused by the pitch of the road, which throws more of the car on the right side than on the left.

The slope of the road causes the right rear tire to carry more weight than the left rear tire. Thus the right rear wears the faster of the two. The right front also will wear more rapidly than the left front, for the same reason.

However, as the left rear wheel receives a driving pull while the right front does not, it will wear the faster of the two. Under average conditions the right rear tire wears out first and the left front last.

To secure uniform wear from a set of tires, change them around about once a month. Particularly is it important to reverse the rear tires. After the rear tires are worn down reverse them with the front.

How Many of Your Friends Have Driven Their Car a Year?

The great majority of the cars you see on the streets are more than a year old, yet many of the cars offered by the Newell Reconditioned Car Department have had less than a normal year's service.

Every car is repainted, and reconditioned, and is priced today to represent the maximum value possible for the money.

In place of the trials and tribulations of a cheap new car you will have the comfort, satisfaction and dependability of a high-grade motor car—and the cost will be the same.

Buick

Buick Dominance

By rigid adherence to definite principles of motor design and chassis construction, Buick has built a name for endurance throughout 20 years of production.

And by incorporating improvements in body design, changes in mechanical units of proven practicability and refinements of detail, Buick has led in motor car development.

Steadily and consistently, Buick has maintained its dominance in the motor car field—its preference among car buyers. Not from beauty, nor luxury, nor power, nor price, not from any one thing or quality—but by combining all.

Today, when car buyers are critical as never before, Buick's permanent standard of value rather than price, becomes the deciding factor—makes Buick the logical purchase.

BRISCOE
The Trustworthy Car

A Direct Statement—and a Challenge

The motoring public has grown tired of the one-feature car—the car that stresses one point of satisfaction to the exclusion of all others. An unusual motor—a freak spring suspension—the winning of a race—a stunt or an unproved departure from standard design is not a safe criterion for judging a motor car.

Every feature of desirability must be taken into consideration. And on that basis we're making one definite statement.

The 1921 Briscoe Is the Best Car Built Today and we will prove it

What Combined Qualifications Make the Best Car

Let's put them down, and give each one the value to the average purchaser as shown by careful analysis—taking 100 points for all.

1. Reliability
This subdivides itself into
Engineering efficiency	6

		100

How the Briscoe Meets These Qualifications.
Take the 1921 Briscoe and measure it against perfection

1. Reliability

The 1921 Briscoe is a car light in weight, yet possessing the maximum of strength. This has meant the development of special steels; it meant the purchase of hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of machinery—much of it specially designed—so that we could make all the essential parts of the car in our own great plants. It meant a careful study of motor-car design here and abroad. And it means now 100 per cent plus in sturdiness, strength and durability.

2. Power

The Briscoe has a remarkable reserve of power that carries it almost without effort wherever wheels will track. Hills that make most cars overheat and drop back to second speed are taken on high, with never a trace of motor-labor or boiling. Sand and mud have no terrors for the wonderful power-plant. You can readily prove this for yourself in a demonstration spin.

3. Economy of Operation

The Briscoe motor is world-famous for low fuel consumption. Owner's records of 20-25 miles to the gallon are the usual thing. The amount of unsprung weight has been so reduced and the car so perfectly balanced that tires seem almost everlasting. And the chassis is so simple and sturdy that few adjustments are necessary, and those are easily made.

4. Appearance and Convenience

It was Briscoe who originated the idea that beauty is not a matter of dollars and cents. Compare the appearance of the popular-priced car of a few years ago with today, and you will realize the great influence of Briscoe design-ideas. Briscoe, too, first realized that comfort was just as essential in the low-priced car as in its expensive brother. That is why, today, you can ride all day in a Briscoe over the country roads without feeling tired. And a child can operate it.

5. Price

That means not alone the actual number of dollars you pay, but what you get for each dollar. Briscoe today gives you more automobile value and more automobile satisfaction per dollar than any car on the market, bar none.

We Challenge a Comparative Test

To any car, and all cars, we make this definite challenge. Taking the points of motor-car satisfaction indicated above, we will enter the 1921 Briscoe in a series of competitive tests, with the American Automobile Association or any other impartial motoring organization as the judge. The tests are to involve a thorough try-out of every car on every point, and each car is to be given a comparative rating by the judges on each test.

And to every motor-car buyer we offer the same opportunity for the most thorough test. Come in and study the car; then let us demonstrate in any way you wish. Give us a chance to prove our statement—the 1921 Briscoe is the best car built today.

Strength of American, British and Japanese Navies Compared

U. S. Naval Intelligence Officer Analyzes Respective Power of Each Force in Units

Chart Showing the Relative Strength of the Three Navies in Ships Built or to Be Built.

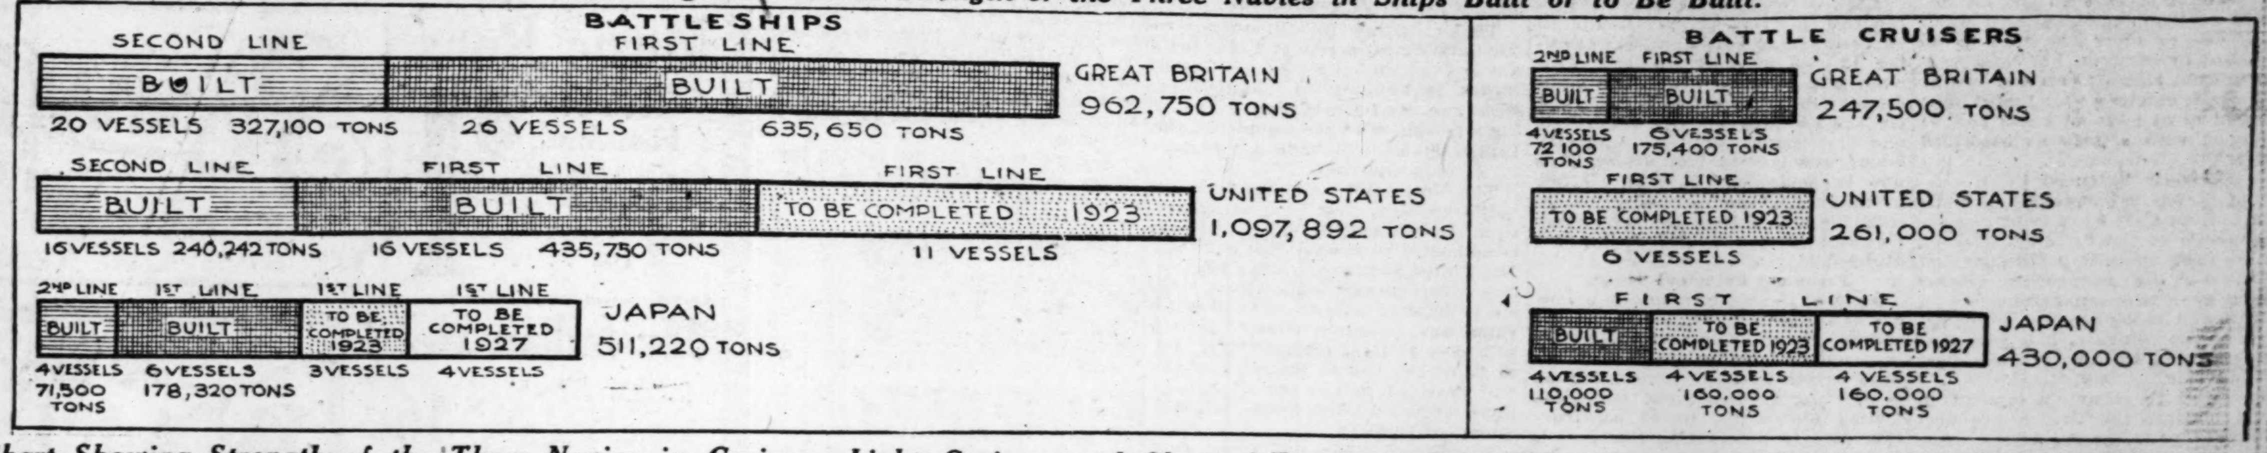

Chart Showing Strength of the Three Navies in Cruisers, Light Cruisers and Destroyers, Built or Building.

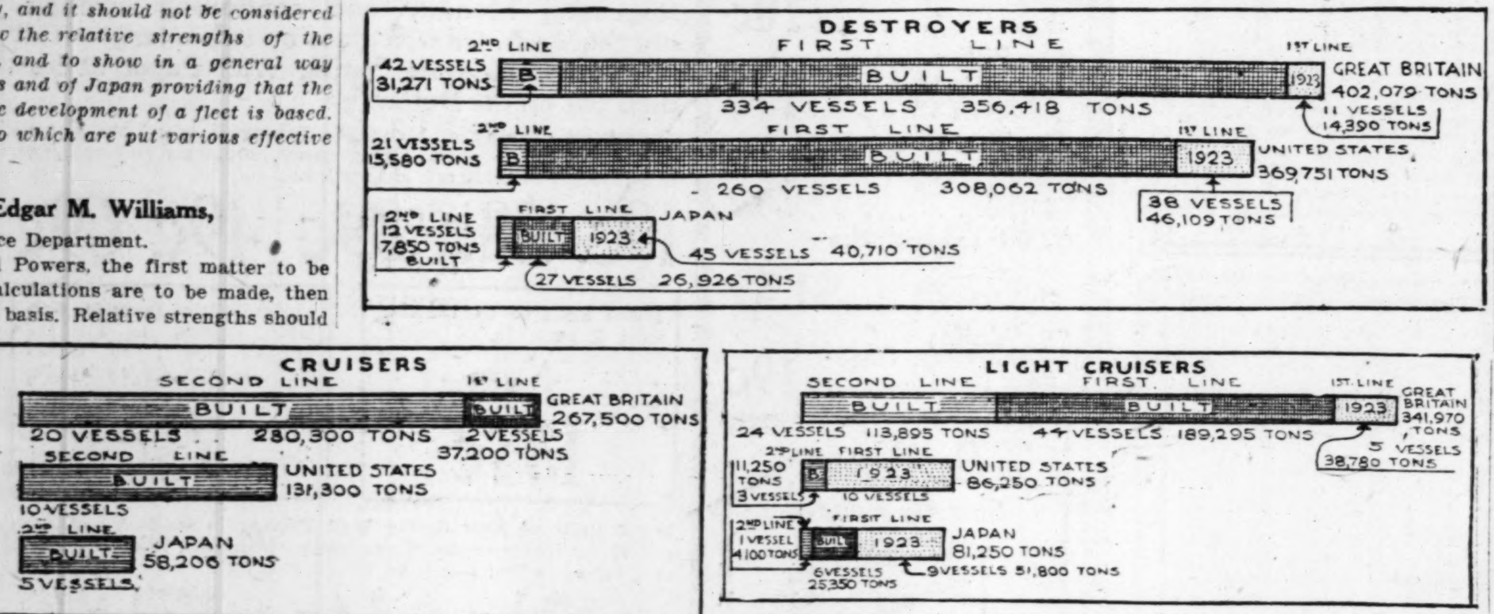

Chart of Tonnages of the Three Navies in Effective Ships Built or Building, Submarines Excluded.

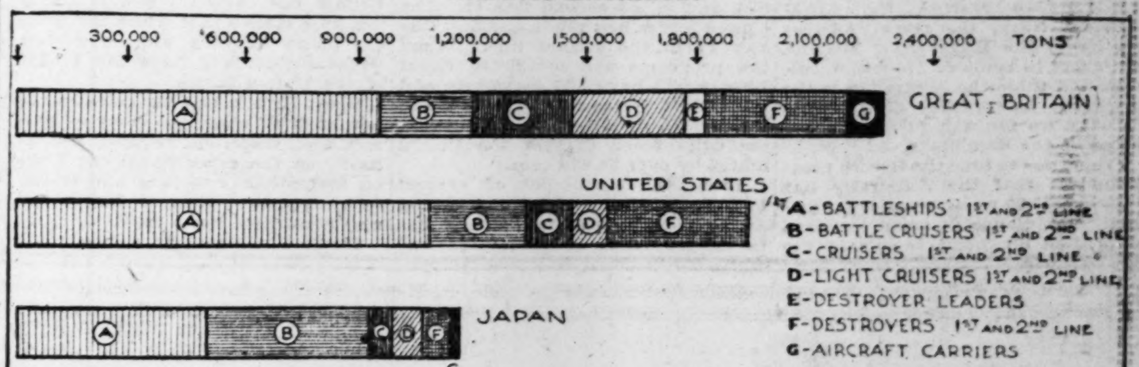

Explains Needs if Battleship Remains the Major Fighting Arm About Which the Remainder of a Fleet Is to Be Built Up.

In this article no attempt has been made to argue for or against the United States further expanding her navy, and it should not be considered in that light. It is written merely to show the relative strengths of the three leading naval Powers of the world, and to show in a general way the needs of the navies of the United States and of Japan providing that the battleship remains the unit upon which the development of a fleet is based. The article also briefly explains the uses to which are put various effective fighting vessels.

By Lieutenant-Commander Edgar M. Williams,

Of the U. S. Naval Intelligence Department.

IN COMPARING the strengths of naval Powers, the first matter to be decided is the basis upon which the calculations are to be made, then each navy must be reduced to the same basis. Relative strengths should be based on effective fighting ships, or ships which can be used effectively in a modern war; in other words, vessels which may proceed to sea and be able to meet the newest enemy ships of the same type with a reasonable chance of engaging in an action the outcome of which will be successful to themselves. This assumes that the personal of the opposing vessels are of equal expertness.

In the following comparisons it has been assumed that to be effective, and therefore to enter into the calculations, battleships, battle cruisers, cruisers and light cruisers, are less than 20 years of age, while the other types are less than 15 years of age. This will necessarily eliminate a great many vessels due to age. Many others are left out because their types are not of use in a fleet action; some of the types form a valuable support to a fleet, but without the battle fleet they would be of little or no value. Under the last-named class come auxiliaries, patrol boats, chasers, mine sweepers and mine layers.

From the foregoing remarks it can be seen that when the statement in these tables is made that a nation has a certain number of ships, it does not mean that it possesses just that specific number. The nation may have two or three times that number.

Before undertaking a comparison it will be helpful, if not absolutely necessary, to explain what the various types are and the purposes of these types.

Battleship of First Line.

The battleship of the first line is the perfect fighting unit. It has been developed step by step to its present state of efficiency. In its design the naval constructor has struck what he considers to be a perfect balance. A certain percentage of displacement is allowed for armor, a certain percentage for armament or guns, and a certain percentage for machinery and structural weights.

A naval war cannot be decisively ended before the major ships of the combatant fleets have made contact and one of the fleets of major ships destroyed or so crippled that it will require such extensive repair that it will not be again effective before all other naval vessels and commerce can be destroyed or driven to cover. To bring about this decision requires battleships which are well supported by auxiliary craft to keep off the enemy submarines and torpedo craft. The battleship of the first line is required to be a heavily armored ship displacing not less than 20,000 tons, carrying at least 10 guns of 12 inches or larger, and making a speed of not less than 20 knots. Considering the rapid progress made in warship design since the launch of the Dreadnought in 1906, one might safely say that a battleship outlives its usefulness in much less time than 20 years, but for the purpose of this paper the age limit will be placed at 20 years.

Battleship of Second Line.

Battleships of the second line are those battleships under 20 years of age not up to the standard set for battleship of the first line. They must displace over 16,000 tons and carry guns of 12 inches or larger. The battery may be mixed caliber, but the heaviest guns must be at least 12-inch.

Their work is cut out for them in forming a second line of defense and for the purpose of acting as escort to the vessels of the train. There is a certain stage in a naval war where they may be invaluable, that is after an indecisive but damaging fleet action, where the ability to throw second-line battleships into the fleet line may turn the tide and bring victory.

The Battle Cruiser.

In the battle cruiser the perfect balance of the battleship has been disregarded. These ships have the displacement of a battleship and guns as heavy, but the armor is lighter and the speed higher. Their purpose is to form a fast wing for the battleships, which will have the speed to gain a superior or advantageous position over the enemy battleships and from this position deliver a heavy fire. It is necessary for the battle cruisers to carry guns of equal range to those of battleships, or of greater range in order to damage without being reached by the enemy fire.

Battle cruisers properly handled may be able to force the enemy battleships to change course or formation, causing them to place themselves at a disadvantage regarding the opponent. They may also be used to frustrate any such attempt by the enemy battle cruisers.

This type is still further used in screening operations. A fleet should never proceed to sea without being well guarded by numerous scouts which make up a screen. The duty of the scouts or screen is to deny the enemy information of our own forces as well as to secure information relative to the enemy forces. Battle cruisers may be placed in the lines of the screen to pursue and destroy any enemy vessels which may attempt to pierce the screen or which may succeed in piercing it. The battle cruisers have the speed and gun power to accomplish this feat. This action may be considered as defensive. They may act offensively and fight their way through the enemy screen. The latter may mean their destruction, but probably not before the desired information has been obtained and sent to the commander-in-chief by radio. To stop a battle cruiser bent on securing information in this manner will require a single ship equal at least to a battle cruiser, or will require a number of torpedo craft; submarines might luckily be in a position to stop her, but if they are not, it is not likely that they will be able to reach an advantageous position for attack.

A further use of the battle cruiser is as a commerce raider having the speed to overtake the fastest merchant vessels and to get away from any pursuers outside of battle cruisers, and having the gun power to fight off fast ships which might pursue. Battle cruisers carrying guns of 13.5 inches or larger and capable of a speed of 27 knots or faster, are battle cruisers of the first line. Those of the second line carry 12-inch guns and make up to 27 knots speed.

Cruisers and Light Cruisers.

Cruisers, first line, are those large, fast cruisers having a displacement of 8000 tons or more and capable of a speed of not less than 27 knots. Their uses are various, but are mainly for screening and for fighting off parallel types and light craft. They may be used as commerce raiders, or as ecorts for merchant convoys.

Cruisers, second line, have the same requirements and uses as those of the first line, except that the speed is not required to be as high as 27 knots.

Light cruisers, better known as scouts, are used for scouting and screening operations. They must have high speed and excellent sea-keeping qualities. Those of the first line are required to be capable of a speed of 27 knots or more, and must carry guns of about six inches or larger. Their displacement should be from 4000 tons to 8000 tons, although the line need not be closely drawn at these limits, provided they possess speed.

Those of the second line are not equal to the duties of those of the first line; they are required to have a displacement of 3500 tons or over, and should have a speed of at least 25 knots.

Destroyer Leaders.

Destroyer leaders or flotilla leaders are in a class which might be said to lie midway between the light cruiser type and the destroyer type. They were designed for the purpose of acting as flagship for a flotilla of destroyers. They are sometimes untechnically called super-destroyers.

Every flotilla of destroyers, which is usually made up of about 18 boats, must have a flagship. To handle a force this size a flotilla commander is required, the same as is an Admiral required to handle the administration of a force of battleships. The flotilla commander must have a staff and facilities for quartering the men of that staff and for carrying on his clerical work. The flotilla leader was designed with this end in view, and also to provide special signal and radio arrangements. They required to displace at least 1500 tons and to make a speed of at least 30 knots.

Destroyers of the first line displace upward of 800 tons and make a speed of not less than 27 knots. They must be able to steam with the fleet. Those of the second line displace from 500 to 800 tons and must make a speed not under 24 knots. To enter either of these classes they must be not over 15 years of age from date of launch.

Fleet Submarines.

Fleet submarines must be large, high-speed boats with excellent sea-keeping qualities that they may be able to keep up with the fleet, to act as scouts or be used as a mobile mine field. A commander in chief who realizes the presence of enemy submarines will move with caution, and will not deliberately enter a nest of them. It can be readily seen that the submarine which has the speed to reach a given position from the enemy battleship line may be used to cause that fleet to change course. Fleet submarines might also be "planted" and held submerged, then the enemy battleships led into the submarine nest.

Fleet submarines in the scouting line might be able to dive under the enemy screen and make contact with the enemy fleet, either attacking or gaining desired information and again getting clear by running submerged under the screen.

Fleet submarines of the first line displace 1000 tons or more and have high speed. Those of the second line have a displacement of 1000 tons or more, but not the speed of the first line.

Submarines of the first line displace from 500 to 1000 tons and possess moderate speed. Their uses are various. They may cruise with the fleet, but are too slow to be of much use in a fleet action. Their most probable use will be to act independently of the fleet on coast defense operations, or to lie on the enemy lines of communication attacking troop convoys, cargo convoys, etc.

Submarines of the second line displace from 300 to 500 tons. They are used much the same way, but due to their size their radius of action is much reduced.

Cruiser submarines are boats with a very long radius of action and with excellent sea-keeping qualities. They are capable of remaining at sea for very long periods of time without replenishment of stores, and are able to visit remote parts of the world where they may prey on enemy commerce. They displace upward of 2000 tons.

The monitor sype submarine is a special type developed in the World War by the British. They are very large vessels carrying one 12-inch gun. They were probably designed for use against the German batteries on the Belgian coast, but the armistice was signed before they could be put to a real test.

For any submarine to enter into the comparisons given in this paper, it must have been launched not more than 15 years ago; i. e., on or after Jan. 1, 1906.

Aircraft Carriers.

Aircraft carriers are fast vessels having a long, flat, clear deck from which airplanes of the land type can rise and on which they can alight. These vessels must be fast for various reasons. They carry a very light battery and therefore must, to a large extent, depend upon their speed for safety. Another reason is that due to their comparatively short length it may be difficult for a plane to get up to rising speed in the length of the deck. If the speed of the ship is added to the speed of the plane over the deck, sufficient wind force against the plane to cause it to rise will soon be reached. Conversely, in landing, the speed of the ship may be used to check the plane.

SIZE OF AMERICAN AND JAPANESE NAVIES COMPARED BY OFFICER

There is no doubt but the airplane will form an important factor in future scouting operations. Battleships, battle cruisers, cruisers, etc., often carry one or more airplanes to be launched by catapult, but these vessels are not aircraft carriers. To be an aircraft carrier a vessel must have a speed of at least 20 knots and be equipped with a deck as described above.

Perfectly Balanced Fleet.

The perfectly balanced and well-rounded-out fleet consists of numerous vessels of the foregoing classes. As the fleet grows in battleships, the numbers in the supporting classes should grow proportionately.

Although today we see many articles to the contrary, it is true that Great Britain has the greatest fleet in the world.

In order to stimulate interest in naval matters the British are presenting ships to the dominions, these ships, in all probability, to form a basis upon which to build. The British Empire has navies known as the Royal Indian Marine, the Royal Canadian Navy, the Royal Australian Navy, the Royal New Zealand Navy, and in some of the other colonies. Of these the Australian is the strongest. In speaking of the British navy we mean it to include the navies of the dominions.

From time to time the British press announces that the Admiralty has marked certain naval vessels "for disposal." A glance at some standard publication on naval vessels of the world will show that as a general rule these ships are of obsolete type, or are worn out by war service. This is not always the case. For example, a few months ago the battleship Canada, which was launched in 1913, was sold to Chile. Aside from the fact that this ship was building in England for Chile at the outbreak of the war and was owed to Chile or owed to Chile in equal value, she was a "black sheep" to the British fleet because she carried an odd-sized gun: i. e., 10 14-inch, where all large British guns are 12-inch, 13.5-inch and 15-inch.

Marked for disposal, according to the British Press, are practically all battleships and battle cruisers carrying 12-inch guns or smaller. Just what will be done with these ships remains to be seen. The battle cruisers are destined for the dominions, and the battle cruiser Australia, which was labeled "for disposal," is now in Asutralia. It is hardly fair in making a comparison of navies to strike a ship from the list merely because she is reported to be "for disposal."

Economy Principal Topic.

All over the world economy is now one of the principal topics of conversation. As an example for economy in the United States, Great Britain's navy is often cited. Great Britain is building 11 destroyers, while the United States has under construction 38. In mentioning this fact is it taken into consideration how many each nation now possesses? In first line destroyers Great Britain has 334, and in the second line 42. The United States has 260 in the first line and 21 in the second line. When the programs are completed Great Britain will have 387 destroyers and the United States will have 319, and the British displacement in destroyers will exceed that of the United States by over 32,000 tons.

From the standpoint of present building programs alone, the United States does appear to be very extravagant. When the armistice was signed Great Britain had in the process of building four 41,200-ton battle cruisers of the class of the Hood. Three of these were broken up and only the Hood completed, which today is the greatest battle cruiser in the world. Why was this done? For economy? Yes. But there was another reason. The German navy being a thing of the past, only one other country in the world owned ships of the battle cruiser type; Japan had four, and Great Britain was still supreme with 10 battle cruisers and by a margin of six.

Building Programs.

To go further into discussion of the building programs of Great Britain and the United States, the United States is building 11 battleships, first line, and Great Britain none; but when these 11 are completed, the United States will have a superiority of only one ship.

The United States is building six battle cruisers, first line, as against Great Britain's none. When these six are finished each navy will have six. The United States is building 10 first-line light cruisers, while Great Britain is building only five. When these ships are complete Great Britain will have 49 light cruisers, first line, to 10 of the United States; and she will have 24 in the second line to three of the United States, making a total of 73 to 13.

In submarines of all types, first and second line, the United States has 98 built and 44 building; Great Britain has 165 built and 19 building, this means that when the present ships building are completed, Great Britain will have 184 to 142 of the United States.

Great Britain has her colonies and her lines of communication to protect, and, therefore, requires a large navy; on the other hand, the United States has two long and widely separated coast lines to guard, and also requires a large navy.

If an agreement is entered into between the United States, Great Britain and Japan to cease building for a certain period, the powers entering into this pact will probably agree to stop construction after the completion of the present building programs.

The graphic charts on this page explain the strength of these three powers at the present time and when the present building programs are completed, with the exception of their strength in submarines and aircraft carriers.

The Japanese building program being divided into two general sections, part is to be completed by 1923, the remainder by 1927. Neither the program of the United States nor that of Great Britain, in any class of ships, extends beyond 1923. There will be no further increase in battleships of the second line, for none is building.

As no accurate figures for the tonnages of submarines can be given, only numbers of vessels are shown in the following table.

Standing today by classes:

	G. Brit.	U.S.	Jap.
Fleet submarines, 1st line	18	2	0
Fleet submarines, 2d line	7	0	0
Submarines, 1st line	71	52	0
Submarines, 2d line	66	44	10
Cruiser submarines	1	0	0
Total	165	96	10

Counting in vessels now under construction, and assuming them to be complete by 1924, these three Powers at that time will stand as follows:

	G. Brit.	U.S.	Jap.
Fleet submarines, 1st line	36	6	(?)
Fleet submarines, 2d line	7	0	(?)
Submarines, 1st line	71	94	10
Submarines, 2d line	66	44	19
Cruiser submarines	1	0	(?)
Monitor submarines	3	0	(?)
Total	184	144	29-|-

Probably 30 others of unknown class, making a total of 59.

Great Britain has six aircraft carriers, while neither the United States nor Japan has any built. The United States is building none, but is converting the collier Jupiter, renamed the Langley, into an aircraft carrier. As the Langley can make only about 15 knots, she is too slow to even enter the second line, and will, there, be disregarded in these calculations. As a matter of general information, the Langley will displace 19,360 tons. Japan has on her building program one aircraft carrier. No separate diagram is given to show these craft.

Destroyer leaders are owned by Great Britain only, and she has 24 built and one building. Neither the United States nor Japan is building destroyer leaders. In a case of emergency light cruisers might be used in the place of destroyer leaders, pro-

STUDENTS PAY HONOR TO JOSEPH PULITZER

Seventy-Fourth Anniversary of Late Publisher's Birth Celebrated in New York.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 9.—The seventy-fourth anniversary of the birth of Joseph Pulitzer was celebrated last night by the Sigma Delta Chi fraternity, including the student body of the Pulitzer School of Journalism, in the Westminster, 420 West 116th street. S. P. Jones, president of the Columbian Chapter of the fraternity, as it now is named, proposed that its name be changed to the Pulitzer Chapter. The proposition will be acted upon at a future meeting.

Ralph Pulitzer, son of the founder of the school; Herbert Bayard Swope, executive editor of the World, and members of the faculty made addresses. Mr. Pulitzer said he hoped the fraternity would strive for development of the highest principles of the newspaper profession, instead of mere tricks of the newspaper trade.

"Real journalism is life in ink," said Mr. Pulitzer. "If journalism can keep the honesty of life before the public it never need be ashamed of itself. Hang-dog journalism publishes the details of divorces for the lust and not for the real news value in them. Real journalism has the merit of cleanliness and gives honest pictures of life.

"My father, Joseph Pulitzer, was interested not only in portraying life but also in molding it. The public usefulness of an aggressive press transcends its mistakes. If the Sigma Delta Chi is to accomplish its purpose it will magnify uses and minimize abuses."

Swope told the students that when a man is called a great reporter he has received the highest tribute. He added, in part:

"The news columns of the American press are superior to those of Europe, even of England, which I select because the British is by far the best press in Europe, in that the American press intelligences and forms public opinion in columns reasonably free from the partisanship and political prejudice which for the most part characterize the British press.

"Joseph Pulitzer's influence in American journalism in making it independent was his greatest legacy.

"It is the duty of every newspaper man to be able to approach any person, no matter how highly placed, on a basis of intellectual parity. The newspaper man always has something to give, and need never be apologetic.

"A true tribute that could be paid to Joseph Pulitzer would be to repair an omission regarding the official name of the School of Journalism as an act of elementary justice and recognition of the greatness of its founder by always referring to it as the Pulitzer School of Journalism."

Prof. Charles P. Cooper, head of the department of news writing and editing, said the two enduring monuments of Joseph Pulitzer are the World and the School of Journalism, and that he lives today in the World as an exemplification of his principles.

Dr. John W. Cunliffe, director of the School of Journalism, said journalism is a profession of public service, not a mere business.

Among those at the dinner were Prof. R. C. E. Brown and Dr. Dan B. Brummitt, editor of the Epworth Herald.

BOY SENDS WIRELESS TO MOTHER

Advises Her of Train's Delay by Use of Radio.

SHENANDOAH, Ia.—There is one woman, at least, in Omaha, who believes that every home should be equipped with a wireless outfit. She is the mother of 14-year-old Lane Axtell, a wireless student of Omaha.

Mrs. Axtell expressed her high regard a few days ago when her son was here, visiting another radio student, when he learned the train on which he was to return to Omaha was late. Making use of the wireless apparatus the youth began sending out messages to his mother, telling her of the delayed train in the hopes of one of his friends in Omaha would pick up the information and telephone her. One of the messages was caught and was telephoned to Mrs. Axtell by one of the boy's friends.

'IRENE' OPENS WEEK'S ENGAGEMENT TONIGHT

Popular Musical Comedy at Shubert-Jefferson — "Satires of 1920" at American.

A musical comedy the tune of which have preceded it here is "Irene," which opens a week's engagement tonight at the Shubert-Jefferson. A revue which comes from the Pacific instead of the Atlantic coast, Fanchon and Marco's Californian production, "Satires of 1920," is the offering at the American, also opening tonight.

"Irene," now in its second year, has been played not only in New York, but in London. Its book—and it is said to have a real plot—is by James Montgomery, author of "Going Up," "Ready Money," and "Nothing But the Truth." The lyrics are by Joseph McCarthy and the score was composed by Harry Tierney. It is in two acts of seven scenes, and the story tells the triumph of a shopgirl Cinderella.

Raymond Crane, comedian in last summer's municipal opera company, has the part of a male modiste masquerading under the name of Madame Lucy. Others in the cast are Dale Winter, Rollin Grimes Jr., Marjorie Moore, Gladys Nagle, Dorothy Whitmore, Marjorie Dalton, Lou Ripley, Jane Kearney, Cark Haydn, Robert Knight, Howard Freeman and Earl Redding.

The "Satires of 1920" is also declared to have a story, touching on aspects of the motion picture industry. In the cast are Arthur West, Al Wohlman and John Sheehan, comedians; Eva Clark, soprano; Muriel Stryker, classic dancer; Daisy de Witte, ingenue, and Lucille Harmon, soubrette. A chorus of 24, with unusual costuming and novel settings, is promised.

William Collier Next Week.

William Collier, in "The Hottentot," a comedy, is announced for next week at the American, and is to be followed by Victor Herbert's operetta, "Eileen." The engagement of the Winter Garden "Passing Show," which was scheduled for next week at the Shubert-Jefferson, has been canceled.

The Lightner sisters, Newton Alexander, William Taylor and a company of 10 lead the Orpheum program this week, in a one-act musical comedy entitled "Little Miss Vamp." Others on the bill are: Anna Chandler, singer and comedienne, with Sidney Landsfield; De Haven and Nice, in "Follies of 1776;" Joe Towle, monologist; Ed Lord and Margie Fuller, in "Bits of This and That;" the Marmein Sisters and Dave Schooler in "A Revelation of Dance and Music;" and Jack Le Vier, in "All in the Spirit of Jest."

Features at other vaudeville houses are announced as follows: Columbia, Will Fov and Florence Kelly, in a comedy, "Good By;" Grand, William Brack and a company in a variety sketch; Rialto, Henry Santrey and his syncopated band, with Bert Barker and a company in "Prevarications;" Empress, Julane Johnson and a company in a petite revenue; and King's, "Nine O'Clock," a farce, calling for a cast of six. Tonight's performance at the German Theater, Lafayette and Jefferson avenues, will be a benefit for the stock company's soubrette, Milly Mayerhofer. The play is a four-act musical comedy, "Schuetzenliesl." The Gayety offers Jean Bedini's latest burlesque, "Twinkle Toes."

U. R. RECEIVER WOULD EXPEND $1,615,869

Wells Asks Court Authorization for Construction Work and Improvements.

Rolla Wells, receiver of the United Railways Co., filed a petition in the United States District Court yesterday for authorization to spend $1,615,869.50 for construction and improvements in the current year. This amount includes $585,036 for improvements which were authorized last year, but are not yet completed.

The chief new expenditure for which authorization is asked, is $250,000 to build a new car shed at Broadway and Taylor avenue to take the place of one now at Broadway and Salisbury street. The new shed would house 130 cars of the Broadway, Taylor and Bellefontaine lines. Other improvements are the strengthening of several bridges on the Kirkwood-Ferguson line and the making of loop and switching track changes at Delmar and De Baliviere avenues and at the intersection of the Page and Hodiamont lines.

ORDERS FINES, NOT "COSTS", IN COUNTY

Prosecuting Attorney Mueller Gives Instructions to Justices of Peace.

Prosecuting Attorney Mueller of St. Louis County, in issuing verbal instructions yesterday to county Justices of the Peace that they must set all their criminal cases for one day each week in order that the prosecutor may be represented, announced that the "cost evil must be stopped." In the future he will demand a fine in every case in which the evidence warrants conviction, Mueller said.

The majority of St. Louis County Justice courts cases are traffic law violations and Mueller dealt in his instructions with these cases. He has advised his assistants to insist, for instance, on at least the minimum penalty, $25 and costs, in vehicle lighting law violations. These include driving with a single light, parking at the side of the road with dimmers, or driving with dimmers.

"The use of dimmers on automobiles parked at the side of the road is being abused," Mueller said. "In driving one mile on the North and South road Wednesday I saw five automobiles parked. The law requires that objects shall be visible in the light cast by automobiles for a distance of 150 feet and that the lights shall be visible 500 feet away."

His assistants have been instructed to demand a fine in traffic violations where the evidence is sufficient to warrant arrest. Where it is not the arrest should not be made, he said. At present many traffic violators tried in the Justice Courts are discharged on payment of costs, $12.60. In some cases there may be extenuating circumstances, Mueller said, but usually the assessment of costs indicates there is sufficient evidence for a conviction and fine.

Justice Stecker of Clayton said that with Mueller's instructions in effect he intends to dismiss dimmer cases without costs until the law has been tested. Justice Werremeyer said he is opposed to the law but is willing to assess fines.

Constable Julius Schoenbein of Central Township said that his deputies were instructed several weeks ago not to make arrests in dimmer cases except where there is evidence the automobile was stopped for illegal purposes.

SIZE OF AMERICAN AND JAPANESE NAVIES COMPARED BY OFFICER

vided there are enough vessels of this type to spare a few from their regular duties. The tonnage Great Britain has is 41,774, with 1750 building.

In destroyers, first line, both Great Britain and the United States are well supplied and well in the lead of Japan. Of the 45 on Japan's building program 15 are known to displace a total of 16,710 tons; the displacement of the remaining 30 is problematical. Assuming each of the 30 to be of the minimum displacement to enter them in the class of destroyers, first line, they will displace a total of 30 times 800, or 24,000 tons, which means Japan has under construction or on her building program a total of 40,710 tons.

Scientific Expansion.

The British navy might be said to have expanded along scientific lines. By this is meant that for each battleship built the requisite numbers of auxiliaries and supporting types are added. The battleship being the unit around which the fleet is constructed and assuming that the British have the proper number of supporting units for each battleship, we can easily calculate the number of supporting units required for a similar balanced fleet. Therefore, assuming that the British navy will be balanced when the present program is completed and taking into consideration only vessels of the first line, with the exception of submarines, all of which will be grouped together as first line, the British fleet will have for each battleship, assuming 26 battleships, first line:

Class of ship	No. when program is complete	No. per battleship.
aBttle cruisers, 1st line	6	.23
Light cruisers, 1st line	49	2
Destroyer leaders	25	1
Destroyers, 1st line	345	13
Submarines, 1st line	71	3
Fleet submarines*	43	1.65
Aircraft carriers	6	.23

Considering the United States navy on the above basis, assuming 27 battleships, first line:

Class of ship	No. in class when program is complete	No. required
aBttle cruisers, 1st line	6	6	0
Light cruisers, 1st line	10	51	—41
Destroyer leaders	0	27	—27
Destroyers, 1st line	298	351	—53
Submarines, 1st line	94	73	•21
Fleet submarines	6	46	—40
Aircraft carriers	0	6	— 6

—Deficiency. •Excess.

The above figures show that in order to balance the United States fleet on the same proportion as the British there must still be built 41 light cruisers, 27 destroyer leaders, 53 destroyers, 40 fleet submarines and six aircraft carriers. There is an excess of 21 in submarines, first line, and just enough battle cruisers.

Taking the Japanese navy the same way on a basis of 12 battleships, first line, which she will have on completion of her present program (one ship of an odd class being eliminated):

Class of ship	No. in class when program is complete	No. required
Battle cruisers, 1st line	12	3	•9
Light cruisers, 1st line	15	23	—8
Destroyer leaders	0	12	—12
Destroyers, 1st line	72	156	—84
Submarines, 1st line, and fleet submarines	40	53	—13
Aircraft carriers	1	3	—2

—Deficiency. •Excess.

JUDGE FARIS FINES 11 ON CHARGES OF VIOLATING DRY LAW

Theodore Koenig, Owner of Saloon in Which Whisky Was Found, Is Fined $300

DECLARES SOFT DRINK BARS CAUSE TROUBLE

Man Who Described Self as "Former Saloon Keeper Looking for a Job," Is Fined $25.

The soft drink bars which formerly were saloons were severely criticised in the United States District Court yesterday by Judge Faris when he fined 11 defendants who had pleaded guilty to violating the prohibition laws, the fines aggregating $2175. He made it clear that he would not be lenient with former saloon keepers who remain in the "soft drink" business after being arrested for selling intoxicants.

In passing sentence on Theodore Koenig, a saloon keeper at 5625 Pennsylvania avenue, who pleaded guilty to having had two quarts of whisky and 50 gallons of mash on his premises, the Judge said: "These soft drink bars are causing 99 per cent of the trouble in enforcing the prohibition laws."

The Judge asked if Koenig was still in the business of selling drinks, and when told that he was he fined Koenig $300, though an attorney had asked clemency on the ground that Koenig was a man of small means and that the mash was intended for making beer for his own use.

Admits Having Whisky.

Wesley J. Becker, who described himself as "a fornfer selaoonkeeper looking for a job," pleaded guilty to a charge of having had a quart of whisky in his former saloon at 3699H Olive street last December. There was no evidence of a sale.

In explanation Becker told Judge Faris he not only had whisky but sold it. At the time of the sales, he said, his five children had scarlet fever and one died later. He said he was in desperate financial straits and sold whisky to get money for expenses caused by his children's illness.

"That is the fairest, squarest and most honest statement I have heard in this court for many moons," said the Judge. "I am going to reward you for it by fixing your fine at $25 and costs."

Mrs. Jeannette Quinn, who formerly conducted a saloon at 517 Market street, pleaded guilty to having a pint of whisky when prohibition enforcement agents visited the place last November. Through a lawyer she said her husband owned the saloon, but after he left her she conducted it until she could sell it. Judge Faris said that in view of her sex and her matrimonial difficulties he would be lenient. He fined her $50 and costs.

Another Pleads Guilty.

Charles Snitzer pleaded guilty to having sold whisky in his saloon at 205 South Broadway. After being told that Snitzer was still in the same business at the same place Judge Faris fined him $300.

Bartolomeo Stallone, a barber, who was arrested by policemen last December while carrying a five-gallon can of "moonshine" whisky from a garage to an automobile, pleaded guilty to a charge of having liquor in his possession in violation of the Volstead act and was fined $250 and costs.

Harry G. Johnson, who formerly conducted a saloon at 310 Olive street, was filed $100 and costs on his plea of guilty to a charge of having liquor in his possession last November when he was arrested by policemen. His Attorney asked leniency for him because he is 60 years old, had quite the saloon business shortly after his arrest, and has small means. Judge Faris, in announcing the fine, said he was taking these circumstances into consideration.

Saloonkeeper Fined $500.

John Soanka, proprietor of the bar in the Wainwright building, was fined $500 on his plea of guilty to having one quart of liquor in his possession last December, when prohibition enforcement agents visited his place. Another charge is pending against Soanka.

Herman Belcher, who operates a grocery store, meat market and soft drink saloon at 1827 California avenue, was fined $300 on his plea of guilty to a charge of having whisky in his possession last November.

John Castellano of 2740 Wash street, who has only one arm, was fined $50 on a plea of guilty to a charge of having three quarts of raisin whisky in his possession. He said that he intended the liquor for his own use.

Steve Sawitzsky, former proprietor of a saloon at 1700 Chouteau avenue, was fined $200 when he pleaded guilty to a charge of having liquor in his possession last September.

Theodore Feduch, a bartender in Sawitzky's saloon, was fined $100 and costs on his plea of guilty to a charge of selling a drink of whisky to prohibition enforcement agents while he was tending bar there.

BILLIONS NEEDED FOR SCHOOLS, SAYS EDUCATION LEADER

Country Should Spend $3,000,000,000 a Year on Schools, Illinois Teachers Are Told by Commissioner Claxton.

The progress being made by the United States is constantly increasing the demand for men and women of higher education, and the consequent demand for trained and efficient teachers, said P. P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education, in an address yesterday at the final session of the three-day convention in the East St. Louis high school auditorium of the Southwest Division of the Illinois State Teachers' Association.

"We have always maintained extensive commercial relations with other countries, but recently we entered upon greater activity in this line," said the speaker. "Instead of depending upon the other countries to deliver goods at our shores or come here for our products, we are operating a merchant marine, which is going after what we want and delivering our produce to the other countries. This line alone is greatly increasing the demand for men of higher education, and the school boy of today in the most remote rural school can qualify for these high positions if given proper schooling. He can obtain such schooling from efficient instructors, and efficient instructors cannot be obtained for salaries that are being paid in some school districts.

"Men and women of higher education are also needed in industrial, commercial and agricultural affairs, more so today than ever before, and the demand is constantly increasing. The young men and women realize the opportunities that education opens to them more today than ever before. There are six times as many boys and girls in high school today as there were 20 years ago.

Outlay for Higher Education.

"In 1870 $5,000,000 was spent for higher education; in 1880, the sum was $6,000,000; in 1892 it was $17,000,000; last year the sum was $182,000,000, and this year it will be about $225,000,000.

"The newer demands of education show us that the old methods fail to measure up to the requirements. We should have longer school terms, and a high school education should be given to every boy and girl. But the old methods do not permit meeting the demands.

"A teacher must constantly be a missionary. It is wrong for the public to be cannibals and eat the missionary. The profession of teaching must pay as good salaries as are paid persons in other lines who have to devote years in becoming qualified for the work. We don't want special favors, half-rates on railroads, and other courtesies of that nature. What we want is pay sufficient to permit us to pay for what we get and feel that we are receiving compensation equal to the value of the service rendered.

"School teachers in Missouri last year received less than the salary paid rural mail carriers. I know, because I have a cousin living in Southwest Missouri who used to be a school teacher. When I met him a short time ago at Springfield, I asked him how he was getting along teaching school. He replied: 'I've quit teaching school and am making a living now.' He said he spent five hours a day as rural mail carrier, for which he received $1850 a year, and had plenty of time to take care of his farm. A rural mail carrier receives three times as much salary as the average country school teacher.

Expenses Contrasted.

"In 1919 there was paid in Federal taxes one-third as much as it cost for education. Last year the people of this country paid two and one-half times as much money for chewing gum as was paid for higher education. There was spent for cigarettes 100 times as much, and the amount of money paid for face powder was greater than the amount expended for elementary and secondary schools. The food luxury tax in Ohio last year was more than it cost to pay all cost of the public schools in the first 19 years of this century.

"The nation should co-operate with the States in acquiring and disbursing funds for educational purposes. Last year the Government collected 6,000,000,000 without getting anything on property.

"Much depends on what we do in the schools. We must do our patriotic duty to give the boys and girls of the United States the best possible education. The nation benefits by the higher education acquired by the boys and girls, and nobody ever lost anything by being more efficient.

"The annual appropriation for training teachers now is $25,000,000, but should be raised to $75,000,000, and with this amount only one-fourth of the number of teachers needed for a country of this size can be trained. The increased enrollment in the colleges and high schools necessitates more money, and the country needs to spend $3,000,000,000 a year for public education and state schools, as compared with $1,250,000,000 now spent.

"The inheritance, corporation, industrial and income tax should all be used to some extent for the school fund. Teachers' pay should be increased from 100 to 200 per cent. The country needs $1,000,000,000 at once to spend for building and equipment. This is required for the extension and greater opportunities for the preparation of teachers. Nobody grows poor by acquiring a better education, therefore the more we pay the richer we become."

A Message From the President of the Cadillac Motor Car Company

Year after year it has been necessary for us, at this season, to caution prospective buyers of the Cadillac Motor Car against possible disappointment in the matter of securing delivery.

The necessity was never more urgent, as it is our conviction that the months of May and June, and the remainder of the year, will witness the greatest shortage of Cadillac cars in the history of the company.

The Cadillac company is firmly committed to the policy of building 8-cylinder cars, which will continue to be the Standard of the World.

Present prices on Cadillac Motor Cars will remain unchanged throughout the year 1921.

CITY TOMORROW WILL ASK FOR GAS RATE REHEARING

Petition to Public Service Commission Gives Three Reasons Why Higher Rates Are Unjustified.

The city's petition for a rehearing of the case under which the Public Service Commission granted the Laclede Gas Light Co. an increase of from 23 to 70 per cent in gas rates will be filed with the commission tomorrow.

It declares that if the commission had taken into consideration the fact that the need of the Laclede for added revnue had been decreased $300,000 by a decline in the price it pays for gas oil, the result would have shown earnings in excess of a reasonable return upon property of the company used and useful in the public service.

The petition also states that the Laclede's contract for 600,000 tons of coal during 1921 at $5 a ton and the same amount during 1922 at $4.50 a ton was improvidently made and that the effect of the increase in rates is to compel the public to pay for the results of that improvidence.

The third cause of appeal cited is that the rate or return allowed, 7.74 per cent upon tentative valuation of $30,000,000, is excessive and that 6½ per cent would have been sufficient.

It is further asserted that the evidence presented by the city showed that the Laclede could continue to meet operating expenses and fixed charges without any advance in rates.

The old rates were 85, 60 and 50 cents according to the amount of gas used. The new rates authorized are $1.05, 90 and 85 cents.

MAN GIVEN SEVEN-YEAR TERM ON ROBBERY CHARGE

Elton Thorp Is Convicted Despite Wife's Efforts to Establishd Alibi.

A jury in Judge Landwehr's court yesterday sentenced Elton Thorp, 23 years old, to serve seven years in the Penitentiary for robbery in the first degree. He was found guilty of holding up James S. Crane of 5328 Kensington avenue, Aug. 7, 1920, and robbing him of $312.

Thorp's wife and a number of his friends testified that at the time of the robbery he was at the Wabash Club in Ferguson.

Thorp was acquitted by a Circuit Court jury March 23 of a charge of holding up Michael Foley of 5874 Garfield avenue and robbing him of $10.10. Witnesses had testified that he was attending a picnic at the time of the robbery.

Plan to Enlist Foreign Students.

A tentative plan of "selling" St. Louis to foreign students in school and colleges was devised at a meeting Friday night between the Executive Board of the Sales Managers' Bureau and the heads of colleges and schools here. The plan provides for the students' honorary membership in the Chember of Commerce and similar organizations, and inspection trips through industrial plants.

RED CROSS AID TO VETERANS INCREASING

More Than $9,600,000 Expended for This Purpose by Chapters During 1920.

More than $9,600,000 was expended during the year 1920 by the American Red Cross in its service to veterans of the world war, according to a report summarizing activities in this field for last year announced by the Southwestern Division headquarters of the Red Cross in St. Louis.

During the year 1920, 2514 chapters of the Red Cross throughout the nation still found it necessary to maintain service for the disabled service man as a major part of their peace time programs, and a total of more than 200,000 service claims alone were handled through them or national headquarters, dealing as the disabled men's agents with the various Government departments. National headquarters funds defrayed $2,600,000 of the expenses connected with this post-war work, and the chapters made up the rest from local funds.

It is estimated that the peak of service to veterans has not been reached, and chapters are reporting constantly increasing demands by the former soldiers and sailors. To meet this need a centralization of Red Cross work for veterans is being put into effect, under the direction of Arthur E. Foote, former Major attached to the General Staff of the United States Army.

In order to attend to the needs of the disabled man in Government hospitals, the Red Cross has increased its staff of workers at these places to 410, and spends $1,000,000 yearly on the work, which is defrayed from national funds.

A fund of $375,000 has been appropriated by the Red Cross to be used as a loan fund for men accepted for vocational training so that they may be provided for until they begin to receive monthly maintenance pay from the Government. Ninety per cent of the money loaned to trainees while their cases were in the "investigation status" has been repaid, the announcement states.

Loans are also made by local chapters to men waiting for Government claims to be paid, and during last year a total of $3,166,000 was utilized for the relief of the men and their families, the announcement adds.

SENATOR IRWIN NOW TO GET REAL CHANCE AS ART CRITIC

Appointed on Advisory Committee of Mural Decorations Commission After Attack on Paintings.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 9.—Senator Irwin, who made his debut as an art critic during the last session of the Legislature, at which he vigorously attacked the bill appropriating $300,000 for mural decorations for the Capitol, will now have an opportunity to demonstrate his capacity as a critic.

The Mural Decorations Commission met here yesterday and appointed an Advisory Committee, and made Senator Irwin a member. Gov. Hyde also was made a member, but he had less confidence in his artistic knowledge, and said today that he felt the Advisory Committee should advise the commission—composed of experts—only on matters of business.

The other two members of the committee are Jefferson City business men, accredited with an artistic bent. Irwin dubbed the mural decorations in the Capitol building as "flub-dub" art.

St. Joseph Car Fare to Be 9 Cents.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 9.—The Public Service Commission today handed down decisions permitting the St. Joseph Railway, Light, Heat and Power Co. to increase steam heating rates six cents per 1000 pounds, and granted the same company power to charge a nine-cent cash street car fare, ticket fare at three for 25 cents, and authorized to put in effect a 4 per cent increase in electric lighting rates. Value of the company's property was fixed as follows: Heating department, $198,238; railway department, $4,065,229; electric lighting department, $2,972,204.

MAXWELL

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Maxwell Motor Sales Corporation wishes to bear witness to the wonderful work of reconstruction accomplished by the new and powerful organization now manufacturing the good Maxwell motor car.

The six great Maxwell plants in four cities have been brought to a high state of proficiency.

Inventories have been reduced to normal, costs lowered, efficiency increased, and manufacturing practices greatly bettered.

The good Maxwell, through sheer increased merit, has been entrenched more strongly than ever in public approval.

One of the final steps in this process of rehabilitation was reached in Detroit on Friday, April 8.

For months, the banks and interests concerned in the upbuilding of these properties have held ready for this new management, new cash in the amount of $15,000,000.

To establish clear title to the properties (which has the effect of rendering these funds immediately available upon the discharge of the receivership and the consummation of the reorganization) and to insure the continuance of the present policies, a temporary receivership was consented to in the United States District Court at Detroit on Friday by all of the interests involved.

The friendly and constructive character of the action is indicated by the appointment as receiver of W. Ledyard Mitchell, who, with Arthur E. Barker, has been in active charge of the management of the properties since the reconstruction process began.

In adopting the somewhat unusual policy of giving these facts in detail, this company is actuated by the conviction that the high standing of the Maxwell properties can best be served by sharing with the public the good news of every step of their progress.

BOY DIES AFTER EATING EASTER EGG PICKED UP ON LOT

Lad, Mysteriously Poisoned, Found Lying on Sidewalk After Leaving School.

The funeral of Russell Held, 7-year-old son of Louis Held, 127 Edgar road, Webster Groves, who died Thursday of ptomaine poisoning, was held yesterday afternoon.

Street Commissioner Albert Bates at noon Wednesday found Russell lying on the sidewalk at Sylvester and Lockwood avenues. He was semi-conscious. Bates took him home, where a physician pronounced him to be suffering from ptomaine poisoning. At the school it was said that the boy had left at 10 a. m., after complaining of being ill.

No other member of his family had been ill, and it was not learned until Friday afternoon that he had eaten anything while away from home. Virginia Steele, a schoolmate, of 445 Standish avenue, told the police then that while some school children were passing in the rear of a grocery store Tuesday afternoon, the boy found an Easter egg on the lot. "He ate a little of it, then threw the rest away as if it didn't taste good," she said. Russell became ill on the following morning. No inquest was held, as this explanation satisfied the authorities.

WOMAN ATTORNEY HOLDS CLIENTELE ALTHOUGH IN JAIL

Miss Lulu M. Collins, Former President of Pike College, Busy While Prisoner at Bowling Green, Mo.

CHARGED WITH DEAL INVOLVING FORGERY

Is Accused of Sending False Note to Mrs. Ida Burrus of St. Louis, but Attributes It to Jealousy.

From a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BOWLING GREEN, Mo., April 9.—Miss Lulu M. Collins, Pike County barrister, former president of Pike College, is practicing law these days from a cell in the Pike County jail, and preparing to defend herself against her accusers and the Pike County Bar.

Miss Collins has been in jail three weeks, in default of $2500 bond, charged with forgery and with uttering and selling a forged instrument. It is alleged, in an information procured by Prosecuting Attorney Rufus L. Higginbotham, on the complaint of Daniel Grimes, a negro, that on Sept. 16, 1920, she forged a promissory note for $500, purporting to be signed by Grimes and his sister, Sarah Smith, to the order of Mrs. Ida Burrus. Victor S. Smith, chairman of the Grievance Committee of the Pike County Bar Association, is assisting in the prosecution.

As she sits in her cell with her law books at hand her clients come and go. She gives attention to the details of cases pending in the Circuit Court at Bowling Green and the Common Pleas Court at Louisiana, and is preparing to file petitions for the ensuing term of court.

If one asks her why her law office is in a cell and why clients make a path to her door, she mentions the man who made a better mousetrap than his neighbor, and the man who wrote a better poem than the other poets wrote.

Former friends, who might qualify as bondsmen, have not done so, but there has been no lapsing of the loyalty of the lowly, whom chiefly she has served, and no dwindling f the devotion of Miss Willa Nora Mitchell, former county superintendent of schools, friend and companion of Miss Collins through the years.

Attachment of Long Standing.

The dilemma which has befallen Miss Collins has drawn renewed attention to the remarkable attachment of these women for each other. Both were born at Louisiana. Their families were neighbors and friends. They grew up together and went to school together and graduated from the same high school. Both became teachers. Miss Collins, older by several years than Miss Mitchell, also studied law.

Miss Mitchell was elected County Superintendent of Schools and held that office for 14 years. In 1907, Miss Collins became head of Pike College, a co-educational institution at Bowling Green. Miss Mitchell was associated with her in conducting it and both lived at the college. In 1916 they sold it and it was converted into a high school.

Miss Collins then took up the practice of law, opening an office in the Phoenix Building, with rooms adjoining which she and Miss Mitchell occupied as living quarters, takng their meals out or doing light housekeeping there. For five years they have lived in the office building, their friends and Miss Collins' clients having access only to the office, which was also sitting room and library of their suite.

After Miss Mitchell ceased to be County Superintendent, she taught in the county schools, continuing to make her home in the suite. Of late she has not been teaching.

Their association at first caused comment, but as the years passed it came to be accepted as a matter of course. They were always together except when their daily duties separated them. They were sufficient unto themselves in social and intellectual companionship.

In type they are distinctly divergent. Miss Collins, who declines to give her age, but who is said to be about 48, is masculine in physiognomy and mentality and of dominating personality. Miss Mitchell, who is said to be about 40, is attractively feminine in every line and characteristic.

Miss Collins Aggressive.

Miss Collins, always aggressive and often pugnacious, doing a man's work and asking no favors, made enemies, but even these admit her energy and ability, her generosity and public spirit. Miss Mitchell, bright and attractive, with a happy disposition and a pleasing personality, has made nothing but friends.

All Bowling Green and most of Pike County has known these two through the years as Miss Lulu and Miss Willa.

Now, with Miss Lulu behind the bars, Miss Willa, David to her Jonathan, is attending to the details of Miss Collins' law business and helping her with her correspondence and running the many errands which must be run for a woman lawyer of many activities.

Among the most intimate friends of Miss Lulu and Miss Willa has been Mrs. Burrus, formerly of St.

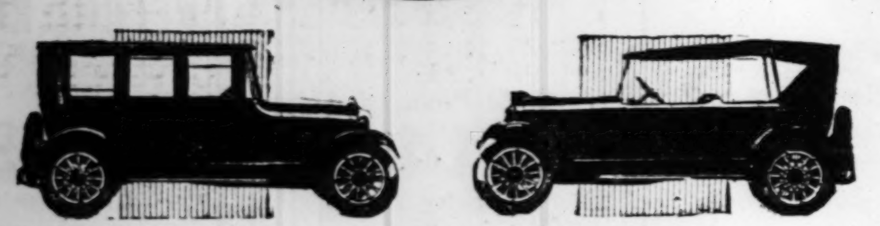
REO



These Four Reos Are All "Pleasure Cars"

We no longer use the term "Pleasure Car" to designate passenger carrying automobiles, as we did in the early days.

The term was too narrow—too limited in its meaning—to properly define that which has become an every day, every hour necessity to the man of affairs.

Nevertheless each of these four Reos, is in very truth a pleasure car.

For the Reo owner experiences a pleasure that is denied most others.

Pleasurable riding; pleasurable performance; and that exquisite pleasure one feels when he knows his car will go anywhere, any time, and occasion not even a thought on his part as to its doing so.

A degree of dependability that is almost absolute is a Reo quality.

It is a common thing—not the exception, but the rule—for a Reo owner to drive 10,000 to 20,000 miles and "never see a spark plug" nor know from personal observation that there is a carburetor or a motor under the hood!

Verily every Reo is a "Pleasure" car in the sense that its owner derives pleasure from every minute he spends in his Reo.

WOMAN ATTORNEY HOLDS CLIENTELE ALTHOUGH IN JAIL

Louis. Miss Collins had aided her in placing some loans and when, as she says, Miss Collins went to her and told her that Daniel Grimes, an aged negro owning 100 acres of land wanted to borrow $500, Mrs. Burrus consented to loan it to him. The note which Miss Collins brought bore what purported to be the signature of Sarah Smith and Grimes' mark, attested by F. A. Davis. At the expiration of the 90 days Mrs. Burrus says Miss Collins went to her and told her that Grimes, on account of the bad roads, could not get to town, and obtained a three weeks' extension. Later Mrs. Burrus heard that Miss Collins had collected $100 on another loan in the same neighborhood and had not accounted for it, so she made an investigation and was informed by Grimes and Mrs. Smith that they had made no note and had received no money. Davis said he had not attested the instrument.

In the meantime, Miss Collins had given Mrs. Burrus as collateral two $2000 notes secured by deed of trust on property in Minnesota, purporting to be signed by Silas King.

Mrs. Burrus has received a letter signed "Silas King by A. Fay King," denying that he executed the notes and professing ignorance of the papers.

Engaged in Land Deal.

The Minnesota property was inherited by members of the Parsons family of Bowling Green. They sent Miss Collins to Minnesota to look it over. She bought the property from them and, according to information received from a Minnesota land registrar, sold it to King.

When Miss Collins was arrested her bond was fixed at $1500. She waived preliminary examination, but a hearing was held for the purpose of fixing bond. The crowd was so great that the Justice of the Peace had to move to the Circuit courtroom. Grimes, Mrs. Smith, Davis and Mrs. Burrus testified. The permanent bond was increased to $2500.

Miss Collins thought she had friends who would not suffer her to remain in jail for want of a $2500 bond, but no qualified person has come forward. "Getting into jail and needing a bondsman is the acid test of friendship," is her comment on her continued detention.

When it appeared that her stay in jail might be of some length she adapted herself to her hampered situation. She had Miss Mitchell bring her some of her law books and established herself at a small table behind the bars of her cell for continuing the practice of her profession.

She had a couple of visitors when the Post-Dispatch correspondent called, and Miss Mitchell had just come with the afternoon mail and she had other engagements which would preclude an interview until 7 o'clock. If the correspondent would come back at that time she sent word she would see him.

At that hour she was alone, and after she had asked a great many questions about the information that had been obtained on the outside, and about what people were saying about her, she made her defense, which proved to be a counter offensive against the lawyers of Bowling Green and Pike County to whose envy and activity she ascribes the prosecution.

She presented her case line upon line, as she might present it to a jury if objections to its relevancy failed, scorning with a lawyer's consistency to point out significance or draw conclusions, relying upon the cumulative effect. She began with the one who made a better mousetrap and the one who wrote a better poem, which, indeed, explained why the world made a path to a person's door, but also accounted for the envy which was visited upon the one who did things better.

Quotes a Newspaper Poem.

A newspaper poem which admonished patience in tribulation was lying on her table. She read aloud a part of that.

She passed over her struggles when she began to practice law and came quickly to the triumphs she had won.

"For the last term of the Court of Common Pleas at Louisiana," she said, "nine new cases were filed. Miss Collins filed three and represented the defendant in another. When I filed my last case in the Circuit Court before coming to jail, 28 new cases had been filed for the April term. Twelve of them were filed by Miss Collins."

She told of the gratis service she had rendered to the drafted men and their families, which drew protests from other lawyers, and of the Federal grand jury inquiry at Hannibal of charges that she had aided evasion of service, and of her vindication and commendation.

She mentioned that the Pike County Bar Association was prosecuting the case and that, although under the law she was entitled to be represented by counsel, no lawyer was preparing to defend her.

She quoted a lawyer as saying: "We've got her where we want her now," but read from a letter, received in jail, retaining her to file a suit and said she expected to file the first petition for the ensuing term of court.

Miss Mitchell came in and listened with frank admiration to Miss Collins' arraignment of the members of her profession whom she considers her foes.

She refused to talk about the charge against her and the Minnesota collateral and other deals mentioned. "It would be entirely out of line," she said, "to discuss a transaction which is the basis of pending proceedings. The truth will come forth at the trial."

Since Miss Collins has been in jail her mail has increased substantially. An explanation was suggested when Chief of Police Raufer received a letter from an ex-soldier at Birmingham, Ala., enclosing a clipping which made an appeal to "doughboys" for Miss Collins, who was said to have been the first notary in the United States to give free service to soldiers and their families and who was said to have given assistance to thousands in making claims, adjusting insurance, seeking lost boys, etc., but who was now broken in health and strength and in need of financial help quickly.

It bore the purported signature of Harry Hobbs, private, Company F, 803d Pioneer Infantry, Bowling Green.

Chief Raufer took the letter and clipping to Prosecuting Attorney Higginbotham. He made inquiry and did not find Harry Hobbs.

Many letters addressed to newspapers in remote parts of the country are said to have been sent out of Bowling Green.

Miss Collins was asked about Hobbs. She picked up from her table a soldier's discharge paper, and folded it so that only the name showed. The name on it was Harry Hobbs. "He was a little overenthusiastic," she said.

It was 10 o'clock when Miss Collins, having exercised a lawyer's prerogative to try her case in her own way, consented to signal the turnkey to release the correspondent. Miss Mitchell left at the same time and on the way to her rooms in the Phoenix Building, she spoke earnestly of the qualities of Miss Collins and her service and sacrifice.

Standing at the foot of the stairs, where the light fell from the door of the Masonic lodge, she looked back toward the jail and said: "There's a woman. And her like is not to be found among men."

W. Virginia Peaches Wiped Out.

ROMNEY, W. Va.—Reports from this district, one of the biggest fruit centers in the Potomac Valley territory, are that the peach crop is entirely wiped out, but probably 60 per cent of the York Imperial apples are saved and plenty of Rome Beauties and Grimes Golden to make a crop.

MEXICAN COMMISSION WILL ARRIVE TUESDAY

Delegation to Inspect Industries Here and Explain Trade Conditions at Home.

A delegation of 11 Mexican business men, members of the Mexican Good Will Commission, will arrive in St. Louis Tuesday morning for a luncheon at Hotel Statler given by the Foreign Trade Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, the World Trade Club and the Manufacturers' Association. The commission has visited the majority of large cities in the United States for the purpose of explaining conditions in Mexico and to call the attention of business men to the International Trade Conference at Mexico City, June 20 to 26.

The delegation will stop here over Wednesday to make purchases. The commission will be met at Union Station by a committee headed by F. Ernest Cramer, chairman of the Foreign Trade Bureau, and Mayor Kiel. The commission will come to St. Louis from Cincinnati. F. Alvarez Moreno, Mexican consul in St. Louis, and Thomas L. Gaukel of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce will co-operate in the reception.

After the luncheon Tuesday the commission will be taken for a tour of industrial plants. Foreign Trade Bureau officials regard the visit as of great importance, believing Mexico to be an ideal market for St. Louis manufacturers, exporters and importers. The members of the commission will answer questions at the luncheon on business and trade with Mexico.

A delegation of 112 St. Louis business men is now in Mexico on a tour arranged by the Chamber of Commerce for the purpose of studying conditions.

The commission from Mexico consists of Fernando Leal Novelo, president of the Confederated Chambers of Commerce; Bruno Newman, vice president of the Confederated Chambers of Commerce of Mexico; Leopoldo H. Palazuelos, director of the Confederated Chambers of Commerce of Mexico; William L. Vail, director of Service Bureau of the American Chamber of Commerce of Mexico; Dante Cusi, representing the Italian Chamber of Commerce of Mexico; Adolfo Martinez, mine owner and member of the Confederated Chambers; Carlos B. Zetina, representing manufacturing; Camilo Sansores, sisal and hemp exporter; Huberto Sheridan, representing "El Universal," a daily newspaper; Capt. A. W. Lewis, capitalist, former director-general of the Seattle-Yukon Exposition and head of the Mexican Department at the last San Francisco Exposition, and John B. King, director Mexican Good Will Commission.

By the Associated Press.

WALLINGFORD, Conn., April 9.—Edward Lufbery, father of the late Major Raoul Lufbery, American ace, shot down in France, does not desire that his son's body be brought here for final interment. His wish, he stated today, was that the body remain in France, where Mrs. Lufbery, the mother, is buried. No member of the family here had requested that Maj. Lufbery's body be brought to this town.

It had been proposed by civic organizations to bring the body here.

St. Louis and Mexico

A large party of St. Louis business men, organized by the Chamber of Commerce, and headed by President Carter, is just now making a tour of Mexico. Vandervoort's is represented by its President on this tour. The primary purpose of the trip is not commercial. After years of revolution, Mexico has had, in Lincoln's phrase, "a new birth of freedom," and has achieved a new strength and solidity. This is a matter of so much importance that St. Louis' appreciation of it cannot be expressed by anything less than a visit of greeting and felicitation.

The new life and stability of Mexico under President Obregon does not surprise St. Louis. For more than fifty years—since the days when Vandervoort's was a young house with but little capital except the character and vision of its young founders—St. Louis has occupied a strategic relation toward Mexico, for this is the meeting point on the Great River of all the land routes from the gateways of Mexico's northern frontier. The best and most progressive citizens of the Southern Republic have been familiar presences on our streets and in our business houses. They have brought their families here and committed their children to our schools and universities. Thus all of us who have come in contact with them either in business or social life have known their courtesy and integrity, their love of music and of art, their instinctive preference for all fine things.

In the darkest hours of the revolution, St. Louis never despaired of Mexico. We knew that no nation could be lost that produced such men and women as our Mexican friends.

Today Vandervoort's joins its congratulations with those of the rest of the community. Mexico and the United States will always have need of each other. There is an inevitable interchange both of natural products and of the fruits of craftsmanship and art between temperate and tropical countries. Separated by the barrier of language and by the deserts of a portion of Northern Mexico, the people of Mexico and of the United States need to come closer and closer together. We need to know each other better in international effort, in social life, in commerce, and in trade.

It is our belief that St. Louis has come further along this road of better co-operation through closer relations than any other great American city; and Vandervoort's heartily congratulates the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce upon the organization of this pilgrimage of felicitation and good will in the day when Mexico's recovery of strength and stability is evident to all the world.

SYMPHONY SEASON SEAT HOLDERS ASKED TO PAY $50

Mrs. Charles M. Rice Says Present Return Is Only $20 for Year.

A suggestion that subscribers to season tickets at the symphony concerts should pay the entire cost of their seats, instead of paying less than half, as at present, is made by Mrs. Charles M. Rice, chairman of the Women's Committee of the orchestra guarantee fund.

The actual cost per seat each season, according to Mrs. Rice, is $50, while the average return per seat is $20. This leaves $30 for which the subscriber is indebted to the generosity of others. She urges that each subscriber contribute at least that sum to the guarantee fund.

The purpose of the Women's Committee is to popularize the guarantee fund subscription through many small donations as well as large ones. Every music lover in St. Louis, according to Mrs. Rice, should have the privilege of taking part in the support of the orchestra.

Subcommittees have been formed among women supporters of the orchestra in Kirkwood, Webster Groves, Ferguson and Belleville, and plans for such an organization are on foot in Alton.

CITIZENS' MILITARY CAMP

The camps will be conducted from July 15 to Aug. 10 and will be open to men between 16 and 35 years old who are physically fit. All expenses will be borne by the Government and no obligations are assumed by those taking the training. Those attending from this district will be sent to Fort Snelling, Minn., outside of Minneapolis, or Camp Pike, Ark., near Little Rock.

Y. W. C. A. ANNUAL CIRCUS

Proceeds of Entertainment Are Used for Summer Conference Trip.

The annual circus and county fair of the Young Women's Christian Association will be held May 13 at the association headquarters, 1400 Locust. Proceeds are used to send girls to the summer conferences in various parts of the country.

A seven-ring circus will occupy the big gymnasium, while the smaller "gym" will be devoted to the sideshows. Pink lemonade and peanut venders will be in evidence, and a troupe of clowns is training now for the event.

A gypsy encampment with fortune tellers and musicians will be a rival attraction to the circus, and concessions and booths will fill the second floor of the association headquarters at 1411 Locust street.

CALL MONEY RATE TIGHTENS AFTER DECLINE TO 5 PCT.

Contended That Quotation Was Lowered Faster Than the Natural Equilibrium of Funds Justified—All Markets Liquidated.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 9.—The Evening Post, in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"While the financial markets have been dominated during the past week by the imminence of the British strike, the effect has been one of stagnation rather than of pronounced weakness. The stock market, to be sure, after the first day or two of short covering turned reactionary, but the volume of trading was small and the unlooked for tightening in money rates certainly played as large a part in the declines as the news from broad. A larger part of cotton's weakness may be attributed to the British difficulties, but here again the volume of business was small and the magnitude of the decline comparatively unimportant. Wheat showed very little change, the Government's optimistic crop report having been very accurately discounted. Altogether the markets gave evidence of being thoroughly liquidated and in a frame of mind to take bad news in a philisophical manner.

"Tightening in the call money market, which carried the stock exchange rate from 5 per cent back up to 7 was dismaying to some who had thought that a much easier position had been permanently reached. Such persons had overlooked the fact that call money is a last surplus, remaining after other demands have been satisfied and that of the amount available in New York a large proportion represents balances left for employment by country banks. Accordingly, when the call rate drops sharply, these banks find more profitable employment for their funds at home. This week's tightening does not mean that the general tendency toward cheaper money had been interrupted, but simply that the call rate was lowered faster than the natural equilibrium of funds justified. The event is useful as furnishing a practical demonstration of the fallacy of expecting cheap money to appear overnight.

Wheat to Go Lower.

"Some grounds for encouragement are offered, meanwhile, by a long range view of the decline in commodity prices. It would be folly to imagine that further declines are not in store. Cash wheat undoubtedly will sell lower, and a reduction in steel prices is very probable. When, however, the latest declines in price indices are scrutinized it is at once clear that recent declines are much smaller than those of last fall. Dun and Bardstreet each show a decline of 4 per cent during March, but this compares with drops of from 6 to 13 per cent a few months ago, while it is obvious that a 4-per cent drop now is actually much smaller than a 4-per cent decline last fall. Consequently it would appear that while more troubles are to be encountered there is reason for feeling that the end is coming measurably nearer.

"Occurrances such as the British strike are now the chief discouragement to thoughts of better times. Raw material prices are exceedingly well shaken down, bank reserves are increasing rapidly and improvement can be detected in the money market, so that the chief factor that remains for adjustment is labor costs. Profits are the life of business and a wave of prosperity comes to an end because prices and production costs have become so inflated that profits disappear. As a corollary it follows that the purpose of a depression is to bring costs back to a point where operations at a profit can be resumed. At the present time gratifying or encouraging progress can be seen in most of the factors involved. But if labor refuses to contribute its share or assumes that there is a limitless amount of wealth for it to claim a part of the whole readjustment will be delayed and the existing depression intensified.

Lesson From Retailers.

"Labor, in fact, has now changed places with the retailers. Six months ago the latter was widely blamed for not taking his loss and offering his striking public a substantial reduction in prices. Sound business policy dictated such a policy as the loss could be materially reduced by obtaining a quick turn over. Many retailers now realize to their sorrow that the loss could not be avoided and that it was aggravated by delay in moving the goods. Similarly certain groups of labor now stand for no reduction in wages. Although the wise policy would be to take a cut and help get the industrial machinery going again, a result that would restore employment and with it labor's bargaining position, certain groups seem disposed to engage in a prolonged struggle which will be expensive, which will intensify the depression—a condition particularly weakening to labor's position and which, under existing circumstances is practically certain to end in defeat. If labor can profit by the retailers' recent experiences much suffering will be spared to the whole community and the outlook for a revival will be greatly improved."

Market Quiet Saturday.

"Trading on the Stock Exchange was again on a very quiet basis. During the first hour the market was particularly dull and narrow, with renewed weakness in rails, which resulted in a number of new lows, turning the whole list heavy.

"Thereafter industrials rallied rather well and toward the close showed net gains of better than 1 point in some issues. Rails, meanwhile, had become firmer, but were fractionally lower. Sterling at $3.98½ gained 1⅝ cents and the other European exchanges were generally firm with German marks an exception. Cotton and wheat showed little change.

"A deficit in reserves of $4,300,000 is shown by the Clearing House statement, this being a result of a decrease of $18,600,000 in surplus reserve and being accompanied by a decrease of $30,200,000 in reserve deposits at the Reserve Bank and a loss of $7,700,000 in Government deposits. Loans are less by $24,100,000 and deposits are less by $82,900,000."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 9.—There was a sharp contraction of dealings on the Curb Market today, and at times almost stagnation prevailed. Price changes generally were irregular, and with one or two exceptions were confined within fractional limits. Commission houses had but few orders and traders did less than on the smallest day recently.

Maracaibo attracted most attention, being firm at the start, and then breaking a point on selling pressure, with a later rally on short covering.

Simms Petroleum was dull, the sales being made at yesterday's low point. Carib Syndicate was quiet and comparatively heavy. Guffey Gillespie was traded in at a slight decline, but a later bid at a higher figure was not filled. Quotations for the Standard oils were about unchanged.

In the miscellaneous list most issues were steady. This was true of Southern Coal and Iron, U. S. Steamship, U. S. Ship Corporation, Durant Motors, Sweets Co. and Profit Sharing. Quite a number of other issues which had been active recently were lower in the quotations, but no transactions took place. United Retail Candy was quiet and heavy.

Mining stocks continued fairly active with considerable interest in National Tin, which scored an advance on rumors of important developments in the near future. Many other stocks were easier.

Bonds were about steady and only fairly active.

Foreign Exchange and Domestic Money

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 9.—The market for European exchange followed the lead of sterling closely all through the past week, with the exception of Italian and Danish, in which market operations were conducted without any reference to exchanges on the other European points. There was a reaction in sterling at the beginning of the week from the high level prevailing a week ago, a loss of 3 cents being sustained on Monday, but on the two following days a firmer tone was created chiefly because of hopes that the conference between the English Government representatives and the labor leaders would result in a settlement of the coal strike. On Thursday the news of the failure of the conference caused another reaction in sterling that had an influence on the other exchange markets. Yesterday the outlook for a general strike was followed by heavy offerings of sterling, carrying demand down to $3.87½, a loss of 5 cents from the high price of the week.

There was a resumption of the persistent buying of Italian exchange which carried lire checks up to 4.44, a new high for the year. Banking dealers had no definite reason to give for the continued advance in Italian exchange and suggested that movement might be due to syndicate operations similar to that of last year. Danish exchange also made further progress to higher levels, a decline of 17.65 being followed by an advance of 18.24 on Thursday. Reactions, however, occurred in these rates yesterday. German exchange moved within comparatively narrow limits and was without material change. French exchange followed sterling in its various movements all through the week.

There was pronounced unsettlement in South American exchange during the week, Argentine exchange falling to low record on Thursday, when paper pesos dropped to 32.50. Canadian exchange showed marked improvement, Montreal dollars moving up from 88.87 to 89.62.

The market today showed a steadier tone, following a rally that occurred in the late trading yesterday fro mthe low levels of the afternoon. Business was small and the upturn in rates was due to a great extent to the cessation of heavy offerings of sterling which unsettled the market in the preceding two days.

INTEREST ON DEBT TO U. S. EXPECTED IN BRITISH BUDGET

London Financial District Awaits Formal Negotiations Between Governments for Funding of British Debt.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, April 9.—In considering the labor situation here and in other European centers, the assertion that the movement is partly fostered by foreign Bolshevist influences, and even with some foreign money, should not be wholly ignored. Reckless assertions even attribute the difficulty to German plots both here and in France. All such statements doubtless should be regarded with skepticism, but I have reason for reaffirming that the main idea should not be entirely ignored. Whatever the truth lurking in these suggestions, however, the necessity for establishing real international peace is emphasized anew by the present developments, semi-war conditions favoring Bolshevist tendencies.

Calls Attitude Correct.

In the present labor dispute here the Government's attitude is correct and unchallenged. It would have been wise, however, to have given the miners longer notice of the date of decontrol. A more lengthy notice would have been the more desirable because the manner in which labors' demands for high wages and reduced hours have been handled by Government for years, was conveyed a wholly erroneous conception of our economic positions. The miners' refusal even to continue pumping during a temporary truce put labor hopelessly in the wrong and strengthened the nation's opposition to the demands. It is believed, however, that the transport workers and the railway men will strike.

Our Treasury and your Government are believed to be in touch concerning arrangements for funding the British debt but the financial district is now beginning to wonder when formal negotiations will begin. The best opinion is that the Chancelor definitely will include in the coming budget an amount to provide for resumption of interest service on the debt to America. A leading factor in the international monetary outlook is the present enormous accumulation of gold by America. It is considered that this must inevitably occasion lower money rates in your country. It is recognized, nevertheless, that the Federal Reserve Board's task is still arduous because it will doubtless recognize that so long as America remains Europe's banker, it will be impossible to allow cheap money and over-stimulate speculative activity. Other factors common to both sides of the Atlantic, moreover, complicate the monetary policy. Thus while dearer money has affected wholesale prices, retail prices are slow to fall. As a result high cost of living continues, which complicates economic progress and maintains the high cost of production.

Cheap Money Doubtful.

The dearer money exponents, therefore, advocate that retail prices should be lowered at all costs and as an example consider that if dearer money had been imposed here and retail prices had been forced down, temporary financial trouble might have occurred, but that lower wages would have been offset by reduced living costs. Unless, therefore, some extraordinary international trade stagnation occurs it is believed that money will not become universally cheap.

CHARLES DEVOY CHARGED WITH ASSAULT TO KILL

Charles L. Devoy, 41 years old, of 5837 Cates avenue, surrendered to the police at Central District yesterday morning after Assistant Circuit Attorney Schweitzer notified him that a warrant charging him with assault to kill had been issued.

Complaint on which the warrant was issued was made by Mrs. John P. Leahy of 5851 Cates avenue. Devoy was released on $800 bond to appear before Judge Hochdoerfer in the Court of Criminal Correction next Saturday. He refused to make a statement on the advice of his attorney, John S. Leahy, but said testimony at the hearing would be "interesting."

Mrs. Leahy charged that March 27 she went to the Devoy home with Devoy's niece, intending to get some clothing, and that Devoy pointed a revolver at her. Her husband, John P. Leahy, arrived later and broke the glass of a front door with his first. John P. Leahy, who is an attorney, represents the Devoy estate in Charles Devoy's suit to break his mother's will and ill feeling existed because of the suit.

INDIA REDUCES WHEAT CROP

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—A reduction of between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 acres planted to wheat in India as compared with last year was announced today by the department of Agriculture in predicting reduced production there. Last year's crop was 377,000,000 bushels.

Because Russia must be discounted, it was said the production in so important a wheat country as India has an important bearing upon world supply.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 9.—At the close of the present week the three matters uppermost in the mind of the financial community are, the great British labor crisis, the trade developments as they bear upon the question of whether or not the situation at large is getting better, and the course of money rates. The most pertinent comment upon the idustrial troubles in England has all along been that they are too stupendous in their possibilities to make it conceivable how a rupture could finally occur, or if it were to occur, how there could be a contest of any duration at all. The losses would be so fabulous and the suffering of the public so severe that one side or the other would have to give in quickly, or both strike a compromise. That the British Government could surrender to the unions has never been thinkable. Consequently the markets have never considered but one of three eventualities—first, an eleventh-hour settlement, second, an early compromise after the struggle was on, and, third, the complete defeat of the labor element.

Testimony regarding domestic trade conditions has again been very conflicting all week. The brightest spot is the automobile industry with some companies getting ready for greater output. The idea held in some quarters that the recovery here and in other lines like the textile trade, was merely a flash in the pan, is disappearing. On the contrary, the best judgment is that while progress will be uneven—that is to say by no means steady—the real turn in these industries has come and will prove a lasting turn. As to when a similar change will overtake other trades which are still scraping on bottom both as to prices and production, it is hard to say. Our trade representatives are fairly confident that prices with them are on the upgrade. It seems almost certain that the virtually complete shutdown at the copper mines will start copper quotations moving up before long, simply because the remaining surplus will have been worked off. The steel men are the most dubious of any.

March figures have just showed pig iron production the lowest on record in comparison with furnace capacity. When the Milvale Steel directors passed their dividend this week they spoke of the company doing business at a loss and had nothing to say that showed they were at all hopeful of a change. The president of the Bethlehem Steel Co. admitted that this would be a lean year for the steel companies, but looked for an improvement before the end of it. Summed up, the preponderating view in business circles is that the downward movement reached its climax at the close of 1920, that while in certain lines like steel the first quarter of 1921 will be even worse, the main tendency since the beginning of January has been toward recovery, and that this recovery will spread slowly and irregularly until in the closing months of the year it will comprise the countries' trade as a whole.

The Money Market.

We have had somewhat the same experience in the money market this week as we had two months ago. When Wall Street, aparently surfeited with call funds reduced its bid to 5½ per cent, the interior banks, which were lending out their large balances on stock market collateral, promptly called their loans on the ground, very obviously, that they could find more profitable employment for their money at home. As a result the lowering of call rates proved abortive as it had in February and there was a quick rebound to 6½ and 7 per cent. Two months ago this reaction wound up in a certain degree of actual stringency, which is hardly to be expected now owing to the very considerable strengthening of the Federal Reserve ratio which has occurred since then. Our imports of gold since Jan. 1 aggregate more than $130,000,000 and this is practically the net addition to the nation's stock of gold, because exports during the same period have been negligible. This gold movement, plus the release of capital from mercantile channels has meant a large expansion in the supply of lendable funds. It would have forced down money rates far more had it not been for the policy of the Federable Reserve Board in holding to its extreme scale of discounts.

There can be no criticism of this policy, even though these discount rates are plainly artificial. If the Federal Reserve authorities were influenced only by the question of the money supply they would no doubt have lowered their schedules before now. But they want to see "frozen credits" further reduced, as they must be in order to restore banking conditions to normal; therefore they are maintaining a scale of rates which is not justified by the relation of demand and supply.

The Crop Report.

The April crop report so far as its effect upon financial calculations is concerned, has proved something of a paradox. It was so good in point of indicated wheat yield as to be distinctly bad for the outlook for prices. With an estimated promise of a winter wheat crop 137,000,000 bushels larger than last year, and with a fourth of the 1920 harvest still in farmers' hands, it is easy to see why prices have been so persistently going down, and it is hard to see how the agricultural industry can look forward to a larger profit margin unless it can succeed in materially lowering its production costs. Once again, as has happened often in the experience of the last seven years, old-fashioned economic theory has gone astray. Theoritically a condition of very low prices—where the producers contend there has ceased to be any profit at all—will cure itself through restricted output. So far from this having occurred the acreage covered by the present winter wheat crop is one of the largest on record and the indicated yield has only been surpassed three times in the history of the country.

Saturday's Market.

In the markets the impulse today was to wait developments in the English strike situation. The morning advices appeared to hold out a trifle more hope of a last minute settlement than there had been when business left off yesterday. This hope, such as it was, found reflection in rather better London reports, a partial recovery from yesterday's severe drop in sterling exchange and a somewhat firmer tendency in cotton.

Trading in stocks again set a very slow pace. Professional dealers appeared a bit anxious to retire short contracts in the industrials and in order to do this to better advantage bent their energies to offering down the rails. There was some further real liquidation in Pennsylvania, which reflected misgivings regarding the dividends to be declared at the meeting scheduled for April 27. With Pennsylvania at a new low record it was not so difficult to drive down stocks like Union and Northern Pacific, Chicago and Northwestern and various others a half point to a point.

While the rails were sagging, the industrials were being quietly bought and in the last hour a fairly sharp runup occurred in some of the recent favorites in bear speculation, like Crucible Steel, Mexican Petroleum, Central Leather, Atlantic Gulf and general Asphalt. Steel shares were helped, as was quite logical they should be, by the announcement that the other independent companies had followed the lead of Lackawanna Steel and put prices of some of their leading products up some few dollars a ton. While this action was not taken in consequence of any improvement in demand, it was taken as an admission that the steel corporation officials were right in predicting that the price slashing inaugurated by the Milvale Steel two months ago would not stimulate business. With the schedules of the independents back pretty well to the level of the steel corporation, it becomes rather more doubtful whether the latter will feel it necessary to reduce its prices, as has been predicted, they would have to do sometime in May.

The Bond Market.

One of the few features in a very dull day with the bond market was the continued demand at rising prices for the Japanese issues. Japanese sterling loan 4s on large transactions reached 66, a gain of nearly 2 points in little more than a week. Both these bonds and the City of Tokio 5s which were dealt in at 60½ stand well above the previous highs of the year. The accumulation of Japanese issues is apparently connected with the improved outlook industrially and financially in the Japanese Empire. Chinese Government railway bonds continued their upward movement, which has been quite noticeable, for some time, gained another three-quarters of a point to 43½.

Liberty Bonds left off substanially where they did last night. In the foreign Government division Belgian 8s at 97¾ were a trifle higher. City of Zurich 8s held their recent recovery, selling at 96¾. French 8s were again rather heavy at 98⅜. Norway 8s held steady at 100⅛, and so did City of Berne 8s at 96⅝.

United States realty 5s, which have been picked up for some time past, sold as high as 87¼, which was a new top. Bell Telephone of Penna. 7s were not as much in demand and reacted to 103½. Midvale 5s were off a trifle to 75½. Rail bonds were scarcely affected by the heaviness in the stock. Pennsylvania 6½s continued to be freely supplied between 95⅞ and 95⅝. New Haven 6s lost some of yesterday's gain, selling at 61 and 61½. Generally the changes in this part of the list were very light and unimportant.

The Cotton Market.

The action of the cotton market today showed nothing, or little more than a continued disposition to wait for the outcome of the British labor troubles. The hope of an eleventh-hour settlement still seemed to prevail in some quarters, and it was suggested that when representatives of the railroad and transport men met Lloyd George to inform him of their intention to strike in support of the coal miners, some step toward peace might possibly be developed. Otherwise, however, there appeared nothing in sight to relieve anxiety, and whatever incentive traders may have found in the news, which, as a matter of fact, had no special coloring. No one seemed willing to risk the chances of an over-Sunday change in the British news. Trading consequently was limited to some further evening up of scattering accounts with the market opening steady at a decline of 3 to 6 points, and later holding within a comparatively narrow range.

While some little improvement has recently been reported in the demand for cotton goods for export, it has not been sufficient to have a stimulating effect on the general market, and mill curtailment continues at about the recent rate. In Fall River mills production for the week was about 120,000 pieces short of the normal capacity, and sales of print cloths for the period were estimated at only 60,000 pieces. Manchester cables said that numerous inquiries for goods are coming in, but that actual business was interrupted by the labor situation. Cloth orders for India were still being booked during the middle of the week. Local yarn merchants say there are many large inquiries in the market, but mostly for the purpose of securing a basis for making prices on forward deliveries of goods.

Remington Typewriter.

Despite the falling off in general business last year the Remington Typewriter Co. in its report for the 12 months ending Dec. 31, says that sales were larger than for any other single year in the history of the company. The sales abroad were particularly good according to the president of the concern. The report shows that there was earned a sum equal to $28.14 per share on the common stock after charges, inventory shrinkage, Federal taxes and preferred dividends. This compares with earnings of $21.46 a share on the common in 1919. Inventories of supplies, materials and work in process were written down to market prices of carried at cost, whichever was lower. All absolute parts as well as cost of invention and development, amounting to $1,313,186, was written off the amount, having been taken out of earnings.

Sugar at New York.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Raw sugar was unsettled today. The Cuban combination quoted 6.02 for centrifugal, but the market seemed to be governed by uncontrolled sugars, which were offered in fair volume at equal to 4⅝c for Cubas, cost and freight, or 5.77 for centrifugals. 5000 bags of Porto Ricos being sold at this level.

Refined was steady at 7.75 to 8.00 for fine granulated.

Futures were easier under selling by Wall street and commission houses on the easier feeling in the spot market and reports of financial difficulties in Cuba, with final prices 8 to 12 points lower. May closed at 4.70; July 4.80 and September 4.82.

BRITISH LABOR TROUBLE WEIGHS ON WHEAT LIST

Temporary Upturn Follows Government Crop Report—Export Sales Continue.

Uneasiness over the big labor tieup in Great Britain acted like a weight on the wheat market during the past week.

Aside from British strike developments, timely rains which meant the removal of any likelihood of a dry weather scare now counted most as an influence tending to lower the value of wheat. On the other hand, rallies were encouraged by a return of low temperatures, as well as by signs that export interests were already contracting for new wheat, and by Washington advices that the emergency tariff bill would be hurried through the House of Representatives. The Government crop report suggesting a smaller yield than recent private estimates had pointed to was also more or less of a temporary stimulus to buyers. In the end, however, all such factors were more counterbalanced by the breakdown of efforts to bring about a settlement of the British coal strike.

Corn and oats developed comparative strength owing chiefly to smallness of receipts, together with wet weather delay to seeding of oats.

Provisions lacked support, a decided increase having been shown in Western stocks of meats and lard.

LIVESTOCK MARKET DULL, PRICES DECLINE

Cattle Offerings Were Only Moderate, but Compared With Demand Proved Excessive.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last week.	Prev. week.	Year ago.
Cattle and calves	15,082	12,758	20,083
Hogs	60,147	54,255	77,615
Sheep	3,956	6,113	8,193
Horses and mules	1,190	1,149	2,833
Totals	80,375	74,275	108,724

In common with other western markets, trade in livestock at St. Louis the past week was inclined to rule slow at generally receding prices. In the cattle department sharp declines were inflicted on virtually all classes of stock, canner and cutter cows and veal calves excepted. Receipts of cattle and calves combined were moderate in number, the six-day supply totaling approximately 15,302 head. Compared to demand, offering was excessive.

The proportion of steers to the run was larger than usual and closing prices were 50@75c down for the week on virtually all kinds, killing grades as well as stockers and feeders. Quality of the steer receipts averaged high, numerous consignments Tuesday selling at $9 and better. Top was $9.40 for heavy beeves and $9.75 for lightweight steers and heifers mixed. After Tuesday no steers sold above $8.75 and the bulk of sales for the week extended from $7.50@8.50.

Barring canner and cutter cows, which were steady, butcher cattle underwent a sharp cut in price. Butcher yearlings and strictly best beef cows declined 50@75c, with medium and common cows showing a loss of 25@50c. The bulk of yearlings sold between $7 and $8 and butcher cows cashed mainly at $5.25@6.75.

Beef and bologna bulls were extremely dull throughout the session and closed 50@75c down for the period. The principal sales late in the week were from $3.75@5.50.

Veal calves showed considerable fluctuation and closed slightly higher for the week. Choice lights at one time rose as high as $9, though the bulk of lights for the period sold from $7.50@8.50, with some down to $7 at the low time.

Hog Trade Is Sluggish.

Under moderate receipts hog prices eased off somewhat in a dull, sluggish trade here the past week. The one exception was Wednesday, when order buyers invaded the market with something like the old-time spirit and absorbed about 80 per cent of the offerings. Market then slowed up, with prices weakening, with $10 representing the high mark at the close. This compared with $10.35 at the close of the preceding week. Declines of 25@50c are noticeable on practically all kinds. On several occasions, at the close, good light hogs sold down to $9.60. Strong-weight and heavy hogs were scarce and show the least depreciation. Best light hogs sold from $9.75@10 late, light butchers weighing 180 to 210 from $9.50@9.65 hogs weighing 215 to 250 from $8.90@9.40, and heavies from $8.50@8.85. Rough sows are quotable at $7@7.25 and stags $6@6.25.

Lambs Are Weaker.

A slight weakening in lamb prices was about the only development of the past week at the sheep house. Otherwise the market closed practically where it left off a week previous. Receipts continue light and mostly direct to packers, as owing to the small supplies coming and the relatively high prices asked, the big houses have for some time been drawing most of their supplies from other points. Nothing of importance sold after Tuesday, on which day clipped lambs went at $9.25 and good wooled offerings at $10. These prices are about a quarter higher than present quotations. Best lambs with wool would now sell around $9.50@9.75, clipped $8.50@9, fat sheep $5.50@6, canners $2 and choppers and bucks $3.50@4. Receipts for the week were 3956, comparing with 6113 the preceding week.

Uneven Trend in Horses.

Trade in horses at St. Louis showed an uneven trend, ranging from steady to $10@15 lower for the week. The market opened Monday strong and active on virtually all classes, but showed decided weakness in some departments Tuesday. Selling was irregular the rest of the week.

Receipts were only moderate in number, slightly over 500 head arriving for auction. Buyers bought freely Monday, but after that were inclined to be cautious. The most marked decline for the period was on Pennsylvania horses and the plain stock, these ruling off $10@15. Good, thick-made chunks, suitable for the New York and Boston trade, and blocky, good shaped Southerners held up well for the week and showed no great change in price.

Mules Lower on Small Kinds.

Declines in mules centered largely on the cheaper grades, some of these selling off $10 or more for the period. Big stuff and animals weighing 1100 to 1200 pounds held up fairly well, some Arkansas demand prevailing for these.

LOW TEMPERATURE FORECAST SENDS WHEAT PRICE UP

CHICAGO, April 9.—Forecasts of freezing weather toward the close came to the rescue of the grain market today, and most of the early declines were recovered, there being considerable spreading between the May and July wheat. At the finish wheat was unchanged to 1¼c up, including May $1.33¾ to $1.34 and July $1.12⅞ to $1.13. Corn was ⅛@¼c to ¼@⅜c net higher; oats showed a net gain of ¼c to ⅜c and provisions were unchanged to 20c higher.

While May wheat showed an easier tone and sold at the lowest figure on the crop, July was firmer, and averaged higher, because of buying induced by forecast for freezing temperatures over the belt, with reports of one-half to one inch of ice in parts of Nebraska and Iowa last night. While no damage was claimed, the trade were apprehensive that the crop might receive a serious setback, and the May-July spread narrowed, with much selling of May and buying of July. The seaboard reported 350,000 bushels sold to Germany and Belgium. It was estimated that the United States has 25,000,000 bushels of wheat sold for export to June 1, which has not been shipped.

Corn and oats showed a rather firm undertone, with some buying of oats on reports that the freezing temperatures in the West had done some damage. There was fair commission house buying of both grains on the breaks and the undertone for several days has been rather firm. Country offerings were limited.

Provisions averaged higher, with lard showing the most strength, the upturn in hogs being the main influence.

COTTON MARKET STEADY ON COVERING BY SHORTS

British Labor Troubles Curtails Business on New York Exchange at Week-End.

NEW YORK, April 9.—The cotton market was extremely quiet again today, with traders waiting for further developments in the British labor situation. There was very little selling, however, and toward the close prices advanced on covering and some trade buying.

July contracts sold up to 12.29c, or 14 points net higher, and the close was very steady at a net advance of 11 to 17 points although there was no change in the general character of the news.

The market opened steady at a decline of 3 to 6 points, under some further scattering liquidation, but offerings were light enough to suggest that the market had been well liquidated earlier in the week. A hope for some last-minute change in the attitude of British railroad and transport workers may have had a sustaining influence, but found very little encouragement in the morning news, and the opinion was expressed by some of the local traders that the market had pretty well discounted strike developments. This may have accounted for scattered covering later in the morning when there was also some buying for Liverpool and domestic trade account. May sold up to 11.76c, and October to 12.85c, and closing prices were at about the best point of the day. Manchester cables said that some orders were still being booked for India during the week, although business for forward delivery was restricted by the labor uncertainty. On the whole, however, the British trade news was commented upon and encouraging expectation of increased activity when labor conditions become more settled. There were also reports of an improved inquiry for cotton yarns in the domestic markets, but mill curtailment at Fall River for the week was estimated at 120,000 pieces, which showed no improvement, and print cloths were reported a shade easier. Reports from the Southwest complain of too much rainfall, and it is said that replanting will be necessary in some sections of Texas.

FARMERS TO HEAR LATEST IN MARKET RETURNS BY RADIO

Postoffice Department Makes Arrangements to Send Out Reports Daily From St. Louis.

By the Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Farmers within a radius of 300 miles of St. Louis will be able, beginning next Friday, April 15, to obtain the latest market reports by wireless. The radio station of the Postoffice Department at St. Louis will dispatch daily a national livestock market report at 11 a. m., a Chicago livestock market report at 11:30 a. m., a grain and potato report at 2 p. m., and a "radio-marketgram" at 7 p. m. The call signal will be "Q. S. T.," which means "everybody listen."

Arrangements are being made by the Bureau of Markets of the Department of Agriculture to secure the co-operation of the amateur wireless operators in the district covered, so that, upon receipt of the reports, they will be telephoned to producers, furnished to newspapers, filed with local telephone exchanges and posted on railway, postoffice and other town bulletin boards.

The bureau believes that as the service develops an increasing number of producers will desire to install their own wireless receiving sets to obtain the market news direct. Receiving apparatus sufficient to receive the reports cast from $50 to $150, and its operation is described by the bureau as simple.

Daily Reports Arranged.

Daily reports will be sent also from Omaha, Bellefonte, Pa., and Washington, D. C. The service is the outgrowth of experiments carried on at Washington for the last three months. Every business day in that period a "radio-marketgram" of from 400 to 600 words has been sent from the wireless station of the Bureau of Standards to stations within a radius of 200 miles.

Newspapers, farmers' organizations and individuals have co-operated with the Bureau of Markets in distributing the reports. The test has proved, according to the bureau, that the dispatching of up-to-the-minute market reports by radio is entirely practicable.

If the hearty co-operation of the wireless operators around Washington in connection with the experimental service is any criterion, the bureau says, there is no doubt that the reports now to be sent from St. Louis and the other distributing points will be widely disseminated in the Central and Eastern States. State agricultural colleges, through county agents and by organizing boys' and girls' radio clubs, may also give material aid, it is suggested.

Growers Seek Information.

According to specialists of the Bureau of Markets, one reason for the general dissatisfaction with the present system of distributing farm products is the farmer's lack of up-to-date information on prices and conditions at national agricultural market centers. Heretofore, no method has been devised for acquainting producers with national market conditions immediately after the close of the market. The result was that some growers went for days, and even weeks at a time, without such necessary information.

Before any considerable improvement can be effected in marketing methods, say the Bureau of Markets' specialists, producers must learn to study and to analyze both national and local market conditions, for it is only by knowing the markets that producers can hope to stand on an equal footing with distributers and to regulate the flow of farm products to meet the demand. It is wrong economically, and ruinous financially, the specialists assert, to permit a condition to exist where one market is glutted with produce at the same time that another market is undersupplied.

University to Send Out Weather Report to Rural Districts

St. Louis U. Wireless Operators Will Furnish Data Supplied by Government Bureau.

Beginning Friday, the wireless telephone station at St. Louis University, working in conjunction with the Weather Bureau, will send out daily weather forecasts over a surrounding territory comprising several hundred square miles. This is chiefly for the benefit of remote rural communities that have no way at present of getting the daily weather reports.

It was said yesterday at the university that numerous inquiries and offers to co-operate had been received in the last few days from country banks, farmers' associations, country newspapers and the like.

Certain of these will be chosen as receiving centers, and from them the reports will be distributed. It is probable that most of these stations will be installed at country banks. The wireless telephone receiver will be equipped with an amplifier which will carry the sender's voice loudly enough to be heard throughout the banks, and, in some cases, on the street.

The messages will be sent each morning at 10 o'clock. It is believed that when news of this service is widespread, those who are interested will find means either to hear the reports in person, or to have them telephoned. This, it is pointed out, will be easily arranged, as in some of the rural telephone systems, all telephones are on the same line, so the message could be received by all subscribers simultaneously.

Thus, if the plan works out as expected, farmers unable to get into towns where there are receiving stations, will arrange with some person in town to telephone the bulletins.

The service will consist of the daily forecast, the stage of contiguous rivers, and likely will include other useful information. The university authorities are considering the possibility of catching the daily bulletins sent out from the Arlington station near Washington each afternoon by the Department of Agriculture, and of including them in its morning messages.

Communities from which inquiries concerning the contemplated service have come, range from Kahoka, Mo., and Quincy, Ill., on the north, to Cape Girardeau on the south, and from Central Missouri localities on the west, to Illinois towns almost as far east as the Indiana line.

It is planned to constantly expand the service, both in respect of the number of receiving stations, and in the length of the daily reports.

HOME-BUILDING ON CATLIN TRACT NEARS REVIVAL

Unusual Number of Sites in That Eligible West End Addition Recently Acquired, Realty Men Report.

LATEST PURCHASE FOR BRIDAL GIFT

Prices Being Paid Said to Range From $130 to $200 Per Front Foot — High-Class Houses Imperative.

By Berry Moore.

The Catlin tract, facing Lindell Drive and Forest Park, and extending from Union boulevard to Skinker road, is holding the attention of persons in quest of sites for high-class homes, and an unusual number of lots of that plat are being acquired for the purpose named.

Recent purchases in the tract include that by Aaron Waldheim of 200x530 feet, comprising two lots 240 feet east of Skinker road, through the Weisels-Gerhardt Real Estate Co. One of the lots was owned by Albert M. Keller and the other by W. H. Ludwig, the former having been acquired yesterday. The lots are to be improved with a house to be given by Waldheim as a wedding present to his daughter, Miss Helen Waldheim, whose engagement to Edwin G. Platt was recently announced in the Post-Dispatch. Plans for the home, which is to be 90 feet wide, are being made by Barnett, Haynes & Barnett, architects.

Thomas L. Mauldin of the Lund-Mauldin Shoe Co., yesterday purchased through the George F. Bergfeld Real Estate Co., 100x530 feet in the tract, beginning 850 feet west of De Baliviere avenue. He is having plans drawn for a residence of a handsome type to be erected under the auspices of the Bergfeld company.

Other Homes Projected.

As a site for a commodious home, Urban Hirsch has purchased 100x530 feet in the Catlin tract, the sale having been made by the St. Louis Union Trust Co. for a client.

Theodore Samuels, vice president of the Samuels Shoe Co., recently acquired, through the Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co., 100x530 feet, beginning 600 feet east of Skinker road, as a site for a home, the plans for which are being prepared by the T. P. Barnett Co. The former owners of the lot were Misses Mary H. and Nancy Reed.

Contracts recently have been executed through Albert T. Terry & Co. for two lots in the Catlin tract, but the names of the purchasers are withheld pending passing of the deeds. Negotiations also are virtually concluded through Terry & Co. for another lot in this tract, the purchaser having plans for a fine home, construction of which will be launched as soon as titles can be acquired.

All the lots in the Catlin tract have a uniform frontage of 100 feet by a depth of 530 feet. Prices paid in the foregoing instances have not been made public.

As the north boundary of Forest Park, the Catlin tract was originally purchased by a group of St. Louisans, including W. K. Bixby, former Ambassador David R. Francis, Edward Mallinckrodt, Festus J. Wade, Lorenzo E. Anderson, Frank Ruf and others, as eligible sites for homes of a high class. The transaction was effected by Moses Greenwood, the price paid for the tract being $1,000,000. This was before the World's Fair here in 1904. The lots are being sold at prices ranging from $130 to $200 a front foot, according to location. The tract w[illegible] used for the Pike, [illegible] side show of the exposition.

Only High-Class Homes Permitted.

Only houses of a high type can be erected in this addition, owing to the restrictions which require the cost of each building to be not less than $12,500. Many imposing homes already have been erected on the tract, including those of Gussie Busch, F. O. Watts, A. J. Siegel, Walker Hill, Charles Levy, Edward L. Lortz and Herman Schuere. With the interest now taken in the tract the indications are that all the available lots soon will be sold to home-builders.

Before its upbuilding on a high residential plane gained headway the Catlin tract was sought by professional realty operators as a subdivision for large apartment buildings. It is of extraordinary depth, thus making it practicable to treble its frontage by the extension of two or more streets through it. The subdivision project failed because of insurmountable building restrictions which safeguarded the property against encroachment.

The Southmoor Realty Co. announces the sale of a lot facing the north drive of Southmoor to C. E. Mack. Another lot was recently purchased by M. G. Levinson. Negotiations are pending for two other lots in Southmoor, while homes recently erected there include those of John M. Hessing and O. B. Barrows. Southmoor is situated south of Forest Ridge and faces Pennsylvania avenue.

A broader demand is developing for lots as home sites, especially for ground in the West End available for homes of a high order. This is taken to mean that much home-building is in contemplation.

DEALS FOR CRIPPLED CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL SITE RAPIDLY CLOSED

The Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co., acting for a committee of the Imperial Council of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine of North America, has purchased the site for the Shrine's hospital for crippled children at approximately $150,000.

The purchase order was given on April 2 and by the ensuing Tuesday night 10 of the 11 essential parcels had been secured and the last one was purchased on Thursday.

The property is on the east side of King's highway, covering the half block from the north side of Clayton avenue to the south line of McKinley avenue. It has a frontage of 380 feet on King's highway, 345 feet on McKinley avenue and 353 feet on Clayton avenue. It is immediately south of Washington University Medical School and Barnes Hospital. Henry R. Weisels and Thomas S. Gerhart, both members of the Shrine, were delegated to purchase the property. St. Louis obtained this hospital through the efforts of a committee from Moolah Temple, the chanrman of which was John E. Bishop.

It is estimated that the hospital will cost more than $1,000,000. It will contain 150 beds, and the equipment will be of the very latest types for an institution of that character. It will be maintained by the Shriners of the United States exclusively for crippled children up to the age of 15 years, irrespective of creed.

The Weisels-Gerhart company negotiated the sale of the site for the Jewish Hospital at King's highway, Forest Park boulevard and Parkview place, the site and buildings for which will represent an outlay of $1,250,000.

BOOM IN HOME BUILDING IS MANIFEST IN WEBSTER

That there is a building boom in Webster Groves is evidenced by the many new homes under construction in that suburb. The demand for high-class building lots, according to M. E. Coggeshall, real estate officer of the Webster Groves Trust Co., has almost absorbed the market's offerings. Coggeshall reports his firm has sold five residence lots the past week and also has contracts for several nice homes.

He reports the sale of a five-acre tract in South Webster, which sale was made by E. J. Burgard of their organization, for the account of W. S. Vaughn.

TWO RESIDENCES AND LOT SOLD BY THE DICKMANN COMPANY

The Joseph F. Dickmann Real Estate Co. reports having sold 3421 South Grand avenue, lot 75x150 feet, on which is a nine-room house, for the Knights of Columbus to Henry Wolf. Also the seven-room home at 4215 John avenue, lot 30x125 feet for J. G. Luse to Dr. J. A. Smith.

The Dickmann company also sold for William C. Uhli, lot on the south side of Flora boulevard to J. A. Kuhn, as a site for a bungalow to cost about $20,000. The lot, 50x150 feet, is about 200 feet east of Thurman avenue.

TWO PIECES OF COUNTY ACREAGE SOLD BY WANSTRATH AGENCY

George J. Wanstrath reports having sold for Caroline Geantil a two-acre tract on Price road, south of Olive street road, and for Anna C. Bermingham a 2½-acre tract adjoining, to Edward R. Albin Jr.

He also reports having sold 2559-61 Warren street and 2611 Parnell street for Anna J. Pruet to Jacob J. Deifer. 2740 Gamble street for Ellen Knackstedt to Ida Berin and 4215 De Soto avenue for John A. Schroer and wife to Joseph and Bertha Haden.

KAIME TEAM WINS PENNANT IN REAL ESTATE BOWLING LEAGUE

The Kaime's team won the pennant of the Real Estate Bowling League by defeating the Wanstraths three games on the final night of the season. The Wanstrath team was leading the league by one game, with the Blake and Kaime teams tie for second place.

The annual banquet of the league will be held on the night of April 30 at the American Annex.

TWO RESIDENTIAL TRACTS IN WEBSTER GROVES ALMOST SOLD

James C. Morfit, agent for Algonquin Park, Webster Groves, reports that of the original 44 lots in that tract, all have been sold except eight.

Algonquin Park is just south of Algonquin Club.

Morfit also reports that of the original 39 lots in New Helfenstein Park there remain only four unsold.

Both of these subdivisions are restricted residence sections.

SIX-FAMILY APARTMENT SOLD TO H. C. UTHOFF FOR $40,000

The Dyas-Shelp Realty Co. announces the sale, for T. L. Horn, of the Bolten Apartment, 5625 Pershing avenue, to Harry C. Uthoff, for $40,000. The property is a six-family building, each suite containing four rooms and sun parlor, with six garages, bringing in a gross rental of $6500 a year.

The Dyas-Shelp company will retain the management of the property.

GILL GIVES HISTORY OF REALTY PROGRESS

Westward Growth and Increase of Values in St. Louis Described in Article.

"St. Louis grows west a mile every 10 years."

"St. Louis real estate, on an average, doubles in value every 15 years, in addition to the income or rent derived therefrom."

These two outstanding points are made by McCune Gill, vice president of the Title Guaranty Trust Co., in an article which is published as part of an advertisement by the Olive Street Terrace Realty Co. today, on the last page of this section of the Post-Dispatch.

Gill's article, which might be called a sermon on St. Louis real estate, is written from the text, "One generation passeth away and another generation cometh, but the earth abideth forever," and the facts upon which it is based are taken from records in the possession of the Title Guaranty Trust Co.

Starting with the early days of St. Louis, when property now worth millions could scarcely find a buyer at any price, Gill roughly sketches the city's westward growth and shows the tremendous increases in real estate values that have been occasioned by this growth and the city's development.

By way of illustration, he outlines the history of the present sites of the National Bank of Commerce, the Planters Hotel and Cupples Station; of the southwest corner of Broadway and Washington avenue, of Stoddard Addition, which is now traversed by "automobile row;" of Henry Shaw's realty investments of Henry Clay's farm, of the Halpin corner at Grand avenue and Olive street and of the land east of King's highway and south of Lindell boulevard.

Gill's article contains indications throughout that in the minds of a great majority of the people, ground on the outskirts of the city has always been "too fart out" and the "price too high," but that the comparative few who had faith in the city's continued advancement, and the courage and foresight to buy, were generously rewarded.

Gill's concluding reference is to the northwestern part of the city, where the General Motors plant and other great factories occupy the former camping ground of the Indians during their visits to Gov. Clark. The development there, he predicts, is only a beginning which will soon push the city out over the adjoining region, with consequent increases in values that will be a repetition of what has taken place in the older sections.

The article contains much of interest not only from a real estate point of view, but also from the standpoint of the city's general development.

Four Sales by Bush-Burns Company.

The Bush-Burns Realty Co. reports sales for the week including a nine-room house in Parkview, five-room bungalow at 5137 Maffitt avenue for F. W. Moyer to Dr. Brown; 4826 Cupples place, four-room bungalow, to Floye Graf, and double flat on Sidney street, west of Nebraska avenue, for F. W. Utlaut to Mary Stumpf.

Three Sales by Terry Company.

Albert T. Terry & Co. report the sale of a lot in Skinker Heights for the Skinker Realty Co. to Thomas W. White, also 120-foot front lot on Cecil avenue for Mrs. M. C. Blossom, and 3968 Cook avenue, eight-room house, for a client to Isaiah Saddler and wife.

APARTMENT BUILDING ADJOINING PARK SOLD

Price for 3-Story Structure at Skinker and Pershing Reported to Have Been $100,000.

Charles Kurlander and Henry D. Harfield have purchased a three-story apartment building at the northeast corner of Skinker road and Pershing avenue, adjacent to Forest Park, Washington University and Parkview, for a price reported to be $100,000.

The building comprises 12 apartments of six rooms each, including a living room 15x20 feet, a dining room, two bedrooms, kitchen, pantry and maid's room. The interior work is of mahogany while the exterior is of brick, terra cotta, Carthage stone and granite. The lot has a frontage of 130 feet on Skinker road by a depth of 87 feet 9 inches on Pershing avenue. The gross rentals of the building aggregate $18,000. The sale was made for the account of Le Grand Jones Investment Co., represented by James C. Campbell and Le Grand Jones, associated, who will have charge of the property.

The Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. announces the sale of the three-story four-family apartment building, 5227-29 Waterman avenue, to Washington University through Robert S. Brookings, its president.

The building is an ornate structure, the first floor having six rooms and bath, upper floors nine rooms and bath. The building is equipped with steam heating plant, hardwood floors, lot 50x175, with garage.

The property was purchased for investment and to provide for the extension of the Mary Institute property controlled by Washington University, as a future contingency.

The Weisels-Gerhart R. E. Co. will hereafter manage the apartment.

The Gradwohl Laboratories, Pasteur Institute of St. Louis, has purchased a large three-story building at 3514 Lucas avenue. The transaction was effected by Howard Gambril & Co. The building will be used for bacteriological and X-ray examinations for physicians. The Gradwohl Laboratories also control the Pasteur Institute of St. Louis, which is a corporation operating for the purpose of giving antirabic virus for the treatment of hydrophobia.

R. B. H. Gradwohl is director of the laboratories.

The diamond light doors, the bookcases, the red fireplace the ivory and gray of the color scheme, the rich, dull gloss of the floors, give to the living and dining rooms an air distinctly Colonial.

RESIDENCES FOR SALE

Showing a portion of Maryland Terrace—Note the varied architecture; no two homes are alike. See how they set back 62 feet from wide drives. The lots are 190 and 220 feet deep. There can never be any congestion. In Maryland Terrace you solve the home question. And living here is not expensive.

Just Completing Two West Maryland Terrace Homes for Particular People
(Also Have a Home, Now Occupied, for Sale)

Drive to Maryland Terrace today and inspect these beautiful, wide, one-room deep homes. Truly modern—pleasing in architecture, splendidly arranged. These homes will please you. Reasonable terms if desired.

SPECIAL PRICES ON MARYLAND TERRACE LOTS

If St. Louis is to be your permanent home, you should consider now the advisability of purchasing ground on which you can later build. Good, desirable building sites in the Washington University district are becoming alarmingly scarce.

We are still making special prices on Maryland Terrace lots.

You can secure choice locations, pay cash or take advantage of our terms. You can build now or build later. These lots will positively double in value.

COME TO MARYLAND TERRACE TODAY

Inspect the homes which we have for sale. Drive through its wide streets, note how the houses set back 62 feet from the wide drives. They do not crowd the sidewalks. Take plenty of time and study the architecture of the different homes, no two alike. Talk to your friends who live here; ask them if they would again move into the congestion of the city and have their families live amidst its noise, dirt and smoke.

Drve to Pennsylvania avenue (western boundary of the campus). Marland Terrace extends west on both Maryland and Westmoreland drives. The University car comes to our front door.

The Davis Realty Development Company
Second Floor 816 Olive Street

From your front, side and rear porches in Maryland Terrace you have real privacy. There the richest elements of home life are enjoyed. You have wonderful lawns, real yards, plenty of room. And you can build in Maryland Terrace as reasonably as anywhere else. Secure your homesite now, at present low prices.

"The Earth Abideth Forever"

A Commentary on St. Louis Real Estate

By McCUNE GILL

Vice President Title Guaranty Trust Co.

(Copyright, 1921, by Olive Street Terrace Realty Co.)

A long while ago, in a distant clime, it was stated to be a general principle, that "one generation passeth away and another generation cometh, but the earth abideth forever." And this principle is still of the utmost importance, here and now.

The Past St. Louis

A man named Hugh L. White bought a lot in an undeveloped part of St. Louis. He took it for a debt of $5000. He thought so little of the lot that he tried to sell it several times. The purchasers didn't think much of the lot either, for White always got it back. His grandson now receives a net rent of $18,000 per year from this same lot, with nothing to do but to tell the lessee where to send the check. The lot was (and is) at the Southwest corner of Broadway and Washington Avenue.

A woman, Mrs. Anne S. Lucas, prevailed upon her husband to buy a tract of land "on the hill" back of St. Louis and to build a house there. Her friends warned her against moving so far from town, as the Indians that lurked about the mill pond might scalp the family any night. They didn't, however, and never will, for the mill pond is filled up and Cupples Station is built on it.

An old Frenchman named Francois Guinelle was employed to fill a lot at Fourth and Pine Streets. The bill was $60. The owner offered to give Guinelle half the lot in settlement. He refused. The lot, on which stands the Planters Hotel, is worth $60 a day now.

Major Stoddard, who represented the United States after the Louisiana Purchase, owned a tract of ground out in the country and employed two real estate men named Leffingwell and Elliot to sell it for him in lots. There were some who doubted whether this Stoddard Addition would be worth more than ten or fifteen dollars a foot. Others, however, bought lots at the sale, lived on the property for years and finally sold it for $300 a foot to the automobile companies that have located west of "Leffingwell's Avenue." St. Louis real estate, on an average, doubles in value every fifteen years in addition to the income or rent derived therefrom.

Only Land Wealth Remains

In the old days there were three kinds of wealthy people—bankers, steamboat men and land owners. The bankers are now forgotten, and the steamboat business has disappeared, but the families of those who invested in land are still enjoying ever-increasing returns on their "unearned increment."

Capt. Scudder, an old river man, traded his steamboat line for real estate. What he sold is worth nothing; what he bought has doubled in value several times.

Has it ever occurred to you, as you have enjoyed the beauties of Shaw's Garden, to inquire as to where the money came from to create and perpetuate this greatest of all gardens? What supplied and supplies the funds necessary to search out the rare orchids and tree ferns of the tropics and bring them here for your delight? Henry Shaw's Garden is due to one thing—his faith in St. Louis real estate. For example, he bought a lot on Seventh and Locust Streets. His friends told him the price he paid, $12,000, was too high. His garden now gets $10,000 a year net income from it. He also bought, for a very small consideration, several abandoned farms from some Frenchmen in the Prairie des Noyers. This property, which he called the "Tower Grove," extended from the present King's highway to what is now Grand Avenue. The only road in those days was the road to Manchester, now Vandeventer Avenue, where the entrance to his farm can still be seen.

The trustees under his will have sold all his farm land except the garden and have thus realized hundreds of thousands of dollars, with which to build the new greenhouses and to maintain the garden in its present state of perfection.

Henry Clay's Farm

Henry Clay, the statesman and orator, owned a large tract near St. Louis. In 1846 he tried to dispose of it for $120 per acre. He couldn't sell it, because nobody thought it was worth that much. His son, James B. Clay, later subdivided it and named one of the streets Clay Avenue, for himself, and two others Ashland and Lexington Avenues, for his father's home, "Ashland," at Lexington, Ky. This time the property brought $1000 per acre. It is worth $10,000 now, which increase has enured to the benefit of the purchasers of the lots.

As late as 1881 a young druggist named Thomas Halpin, decided to buy a lot on the southwest corner of Olive Street and Grand Avenue, at the end of the Olive Street horse car line. He paid $7000 for it. This seemed a terrible price, especially as it had been only a few years since this was the city limits, and just across Grand Avenue, then little more than a country road, had been the woods known as Lindell Grove, where Camp Jackson had camped—and decamped. Halpin bought the lot, however, on the installment plan. He soon paid off the mortgage, and it was not long until his $7000 investment had grown to $70,000, and is now worth over $170,000.

When Forest Park was established the owner of the land east of the present King's highway and south of Lindell wanted $2000 an acre for it. The city refused to pay this "exorbitant" price. It is now worth twenty times that figure, and for just one reason—St. Louis grows west a mile every ten years.

William Clark's Homes

All of us are familiar with some of the career of William Clark, who was with the Lewis and Clark Expedition, and for whom Clark School and Clark Avenue are named. Clark was Governor of the Missouri Territory when it was admitted as a state. He lived first on Main Street and then at Broadway and Olive Street. This latter lot, which was then worth very little, is now carried on the books of the National Bank of Commerce at over a million dollars. Clark's duties as Governor included the making of treaties with the Indians. He found that while he could entertain a few braves at his town house, the large delegations, including numerous ponies, wigwams, squaws and other belongings, must be accommodated elsewhere. So he bought a large tract out on the road that ran across the Natural Bridge. He paid about five dollars an acre for it. Here he had his Indian friends camp, around the beaver ponds and springs called by the French the "marais castor." Here he met the delegates in what is still referred to as the "council grove," from which Council Grove Avenue takes its name. Many famous treaties were signed at this "Castor Hill," by which Missouri and the Western States were relinguished to the paleface. Later the tract was broken up and became the country homesites of prominent St. Louisans. David Goodfellow, William H. Glasgow and David R. Francis had homes there, as did also Chas. Semple, Dr. Bircher and Jefferson Clark. These large places have now ceased to be used as such, as they are directly in the path of the city's future development. Indeed, it is one of the most significant facts in that development, that on the very tract where the Indians grazed their ponies, and cooked at their camp fires, there now stand the great plants for the manufacture of automobiles, gas ranges, electric lights and sleeping cars. And this development, which is just beginning, will soon extend the city out over this region, and the increase in values previously experienced in the older sections will be repeated here.

* * * *

Thus do we see that the principle stated long ago, in a distant clime, is still applicable—here and now. For although enterprises may fail, and personal securities become worthless, the investor in land, which is both safe and of constantly increasing value, finds that it is, indeed, "real" property. For "the earth abideth forever."

ONE DECADE OF ST. LOUIS PROGRESS

(From Greater St. Louis, Chamber of Commerce Bulletin.)

The following figures comparing progress ten years ago and today, give evidence of the prosperous growth of St. Louis:

	1910.	1920.
Assessed valuation	$564,500,000	$ 777,500,000
Total resources, banks	388,409,020	631,166,475
Deposits, banks	283,416,824	434,074,842
Postoffice receipts	4,539,185	8,627,671
Total volume of business, manufactured	328,000,000	1,682,957,145
Number of public school pupils	95,568	106,991
Total St. Louis foreign trade	51,500,000	100,000,000

Every item of this growth has added to the value of Real Estate—put money into the pockets of the LUCKY OWNER OF LAND.

St. Louis has entered a new era of progress, which will advance realty values much more rapidly in the next ten years than they have increased in the last ten.

THE MIRACLE CITY

From Collier's Weekly

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI . . . A new city on the Mississippi. Forget what you have been thinking about it. Learn that it is growing now like a green bay tree.

Busy as a hive. A new industry a day. Providing homes for 10,000 new families. New docks. New bank buildings. A fine new Chamber of Commerce.

The Present St. Louis

In the hands of men and women with loving loyalty to the old city and unlimited faith in the new. Beautiful churches. School buildings that have been copied from Canada to Chihuahua. Play for everybody. Opera in the open air with 1200 seats absolutely free. One of the best libraries in the world.

. . . .

The American city miracle of our day is St. Louis, Not Detroit.

. . . .

Today St. Louis has the aliveness you breathe in Oakland, Cal.

. . . .

The city has long been the American leader in hardware, woodenware and shoes. By the expansion of recent years it is now the leader also in the making of many kinds of machinery, such as piston rings, in barbers' supplies, in stoves, in street cars, in drugs, in chemicals, in horses and mules, in carpets and curtains. Two million square feet of loft space has been added since 1914 and still there is not enough.

. . . .

The river is coming back to its own. St. Louis has joined with New Orleans to continue the improvement begun by the Federal Government as a war measure. Both cities are constructing docks, loading devices and barges to suit Mississippi navigation in 1920 rather than 1850.

Within ten years, I venture, single tows of half a dozen trainloads each will move down and up the lower river almost like ferryboats in New York Harbor.

. . . .

Whatever the causes, or however they worked, none can dispute the result. In three years the population has grown more than in the seven years preceding.

More noteworthy than the gain in members is the gain in business. Only Detroit has experienced any such leap forward, and in St. Louis the movement has not been a concentration of one industry, but a panic-proof diversification.

It has included the bringing to America of a new eminence. St. Louis is the present world's fur market.

. . . .

It is a new St. Louis—built out of what was good in the old, by a faith resolute to meet a city's favorable destiny halfway

St. Louis as City of Opportunity

By WHEATON C. FERRIS

Never was there a greater opportunity than NOW for making money in St. Louis Real Estate.

Many fortunes have been built from the increase in the value of land in and around St. Louis during the last fifty years, by people who began with moderate means and small monthly savings, gradually accumulating a few pieces of ground which, because of the sure, steady growth of St. Louis, increased in value and made substantial profits for the investors.

The Future St. Louis

One of the hundreds of instances which could be cited was published in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch some time ago. The Post-Dispatch says "Henry W. Driemeyer, 51 years old, of 6147 Suburban Avenue, amasses $30,000 as a street car motorman—made money in real estate investments—now director of Hodiamont Bank—saved every penny he could—put this into a lot in a corn field in Horton Place—six months later sold it for $450 profit. Then followed that idea to let one piece of land pay for another."

This fortune and hundreds of others were made from the growth of old St. Louis. It is impossible for the average St. Louisan today to visualize the immense profits that are going to be made during the next few years by the wonderful growth of NEW ST. LOUIS—the Miracle City.

Some small idea of what is happening in St. Louis today may be had by recalling the remarkable growth of Detroit several years ago, when many persons of moderate means made large fortunes by the increase in value of small pieces of land which were bought on easy payments.

It's a Pity

It seems a pity that more people who need the money and could use it to greatest advantage are not getting some of the enormous profits which St. Louis land is now creating.

The man or woman who buys a little piece of St. Louis now, is becoming a preferred stockholder, with absolute security, in St. Louis itself, a miracle city, the greatest money-making industrial organization that America has known for many years. I wish it were possible to compel every citizen in St. Louis to become a stockholder in his own city by buying a little piece of St. Louis Real Estate, and in that way share in the profits and the prosperity which he is helping to create.

I would give my right arm to possess eloquence to arouse the average citizen of St. Louis to the wonderful possibilities of profit and prosperity, by becoming an actual owning member of this miracle city, by acquiring a piece of it. All of the philanthropies and all of the charities the earth has ever known, have never accomplished as much good as could the man who might be able to persuade the people of St. Louis to take advantage of the present wonderful opportunity to share in this miracle of prosperity—St. Louis, the miracle city.

1000 Per Cent Profit

The business men of St. Louis are spending thousands of dollars through the Chamber of Commerce to advertise St. Louis to the world; but to my mind, the great need today is to advertise St. Louis to its own citizens—to bring them to a realization that ten years of hard labor could not repay them for their losses if they neglect to become a shareholder in the present miraculous prosperity of their home city.

In old St. Louis—old, slow, easy-going, slow-growing St. Louis—there were many instances shown on the public records and cited in the public press, of persons who bought lots that a great majority of the people thought were "too far out," and the price "too high," but which were afterward sold at large profits. As a single illustration, an old copy of the St. Louis Republic relates that lots were sold in cornfields lying west of Grand Avenue at $15 a foot, and that these same lots were resold sometime later at ten times that price.

But those profits were made before St. Louis was really awake, before our old town had become the miracle city—before the astounding growth of the last few years had begun. What the profits will be in new St. Louis, our wildest imaginings would probably underestimate, and it is a pity that most of these profits will go into the pockets of newcomers who are awake to the wonderful possibilities of new St. Louis. It is a pity that people of moderate means here at home, the people who can save only a few dollars a month, will get only a very small share of these miraculous profits, because they lack the vision to look into the future—they lack the understanding to realize what is happening in St. Louis today—they lack the courage to take advantage of the opportunity to buy land and become a shareholder in their own home city, and reap for themselves a share of the profits which its astounding growth will create.

Money Makers

It is a pity that so many people of St. Louis lack confidence in their own home city—lack even enough confidence to save and invest a few dollars a month in the safest and best investment on earth—good land—and are therefore not going to share in the greater prosperity of the miracle city. But the money makers—those who are awake, who have vision and courage—have confidence—will reap all of the profits. Not all of them will be rich men; a few of them will be persons of small means, or moderate means, who, like the motorman, will save their pennies, will put those pennies to work by buying land in and around the new St. Louis, and will grow rich and richer without effort on their part, merely taking advantage of the present unusual conditions of the miracle city.

14 YEARS OF SERVICE

For fourteen years the Olive Street Terrace Realty Company has been persuading St. Louis people to save money and invest it in St. Louis real estate. During the last three years our customers made more than $264,000 in profits, which does NOT include the increase in value of land bought from us which has not yet been resold by our customers.

We sincerely believe that this amount is nothing compared with the profits our customers will make during the next three years.

We have 9000 customers—a large number of whom have been doing business with us for 10, 12 and 14 years, because they learn from experience that they make money by using our expert knowledge of St. Louis Real Estate.

EXPERT ADVICE

Every piece of property we offer our customers has been selected by experienced real estate men after a survey of the whole city, and is in their judgment a piece of property most certain to make a profit for the purchaser. As evidence of our own faith in our selections, we have in every instance first bought the property with our own money, for our own investment, knowing that whether or not we sold it as a subdivision, we could be certain of a good profit on the increased value of the land—and during our 14 years' experience in St. Louis we have never yet had a failure.

Recently we purchased a large tract of land near the new northwestern industrial district, which we have named KENWOOD-HOMESITES. Its location in a good neighborhood of prosperous home owners—its proximity to the new industrial district, where 25,000 people will want homes near their place of employment—its convenience to the new loop—good street car service—good automobile roads—assure investors of a quick and certain profit.

KENWOOD-HOMESITES

We have recommended hundreds of pieces of property to our investors, and they have made money by following our advice. We believe that our present offering—KENWOOD-HOMESITES—is the best ground we have ever offered our customers. We advise you to buy in this tract now, before prices advance, and can assure you of a substantial profit; the growth of St. Louis, the miracle city, in the next few years will certainly contribute more to your prosperity than you ever dreamed possible.

GIVING AWAY FOUR AUTOS

Real Estate Company Presenting the Cars to Customers for Co-operation.

The Olive Street Terrace Realty Co. will give away four Essex automobiles in connection with the sale of Kenwood-Homesites, its new subdivision in the northwestern industrial zone.

The cars will go to customers of the company, for co-operation, in a series of four contests. These contests are open to anyone desiring to enter. There is no limit to the number of persons that can compete, and every contestant has an equal chance with every other one to win.

Each winner will be permitted to select either a roadster or a touring car, the price of each being the same, $1775; or that amount of money can be applied on a sedan or other higher priced type of Essex car.

The first automobile will be given away within the next few weeks, and it is expected that the other three will be awarded a few weeks apart. The awards will be made by a committee composed of Charles S. Blood of the Liberty Central Trust Co., O. E. Kaiser of the National Bank of Commerce, James Bloodworth, manager of the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Co.; James Calhoun, vice president of the Seidel Manufacturing Co., and Arthur Jennings of Washington University. The committee will have access to the records of the Olive Street Terrace Company, and will investigate the co-operation given by each contestant.

The contestants are not asked to do any work to win the automobiles. They are merely requested to give the company the names of a few of their friends who they think might be interested in making money. Besides the chance to win an automobile, they are paid liberally for their co-operation, and are also permitted to participate in a contest for $25,000 in other prizes.

All of this is additional to the PROFIT which the customer is certain to make from the investment of a few dollars a month in the best and safest of all investments—good REAL ESTATE.

A large part of the success which the Olive Street Terrace Realty Co. has achieved during the 14 years it has been in business in St. Louis has been due to the co-operation of its customers, which it has gained by SERVICE and by SHARING PROFITS.

The only service the company is in a position to render is to make profits for its customers, but in its long succession of land deals it also has always given to its customers, in one form or another, a large share of its own profits; not as a philanthropy, but because this liberality, if it should be so called, has paid good returns.

The biblical phrase, "give and it shall be given unto you," has been found by this company to be a splendid business axiom.

Recently the company awarded $20,000 in prizes to customers who assisted it in the sale of its Southampton property, the money being provided for out of the company's profits.

The $25,000 to be given away in connection with the sale of Kenwood-Homesites will come from the same source. The four Essex automobiles are additional, special prizes, which will bring the total value of the Kenwood-Homesites prize distribution up to $32,100.

To learn just how you may secure one of these automobiles, and also compete in the $25,000 contest for prizes ranging from $2000 to $100 each, send your name and address to the Olive Street Terrace Realty Co., Boatmen's Bank Building. Use the adjoining blank.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

As we have no information bureau, it is impossible to answer queries by mail or telephone. Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand.

FLORA.—Inquire among the hardware dealers for the machine in question.

INQUISITIVE.—Consult the priest at the St. Alphonsus Rock Church on the subject.

B. F. A.—Address Marie Corelli, the novelist, at Mason Croft, Stratford-on-Avon, Warwickshire, England.

EDWARDSVILLE.—The sun is farther away from the earth in summer than it is in winter. In June it is about 94½ million miles from the earth while in December it is about 91½ million miles away.

DEVOTED READER.—You can make ice cream sodas at home by buying soda water and combining it with ice cream. Chocolate sauce to be served with ice cream may be made as follows: 1 square unsweetened chocolate; 1 cup sugar; 1 tablespoon butter; 1-3 cup boiling water; ½ teaspoon vanilla. Melt the chocolate, add the butter and pour the water on gradually. Bring this to the boiling point, add the water, let boil 5 minutes, cool slightly and add the vanilla. Tutti frutti may be made by chopping up various fruits and making a sirup of them by adding sugar and water, bringing to a boil. Pineapple and other fruit flavorings are made in the same manner.

MRS. JARVIS.—Textiles may be made fireproof by mixing equal parts by weight, of commercial white copperas, Epsom salts and sal ammoniac mingled together with three times their weight of ammonia alum. This mixture soon changes into a moist pulp or paste that must be dried by a low heat. When dressing the material add one-half part of this combination to every one part of starch. For light woven fabrics it may be made as follows: Eight parts, by weight, ammonium sulphate; 2.5 parts ammonium carbonate; 2 parts borax; 3 parts boracic acid; 2 parts starch; or 0.4 parts dextrin, or 0.4 parts gelatin; 100 parts water. Saturate the fabric with the mixture which has been previously heated to 86 degrees F., then dry the fabric. It can then be calendered in the ordinary way. The cost is only 2 or 3 cents for about 16 yards of material.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(Prepared by a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

B. B. D.—If you deeded the property to your children they now own it, so that you cannot borrow on it.

A. D. H.—The Revised Statutes of Missouri for 1919 cover Missouri laws as regards real estate titles generally.

R. D. M.—We are not familiar with the laws of Minnesota. Your claim for injuries sustained in 1913 is barred by limitation.

BUD.—Interest allowed on pawned articles is 2 per cent per month. Send your receipt to one of your Kansas City friends with instructions to get the watch and mail it to you.

A READER.—The company cannot place your stove under the first mortgage, nor can they hold any furniture under the first mortgage after you tender them the $7.50 balance due thereon.

A READER, J. F.—In case of death the War Risk Insurance would go to the heirs of the deceased party. If you desire to collect in a lump sum make application to the Insurance Bureau stating your reasons.

GARY.—Ten per cent of a married man's wages are subject to garnishment in the State of Missouri. This legally applies to a common-law marriage.

RIVER.—A person committing a crime on the river near Cairo might be prosecuted in the Federal Court here but not in the State Court. He could be prosecuted in the county of Missouri opposite the place where the crime was committed.

JOHN.—It is against the rules for a family to cook, eat and sleep in back of a grocery and confectionery store, the rooms not being partitioned off. If you have given notice of your intention to vacate the house, then change your mind, notify the landlord that you wish to remain. Put asbestos around the pipe to keep it from sweating.

VIRGINIA.—You cannot have your marriage set aside on the ground that your name was not given correctly. You should have to reside in Missouri one year before filing suit for divorce. If your divorce is granted you could go into another state and marry. Under such circumstances the couple could not be brought back on desertion charges.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

(Answers prepared by a physician of authority. Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given. Questions that cannot be publicly discussed, if showing evidences of sincerity, will be answered when accompanied by stamped envelope.)

READER.—There is nothing you can do, so far as we know, to change the condition of your voice or to hurry it while it is changing.

B. C. B.—Cocoa butter massage for enlarging the busts is advocated and is harmless to try, but we doubt if the result hoped for will be obtained. The massage should be as ordinarily practiced, moistening the hands with the oil.

ANXIOUS MOTHER.—Your milk is lacking in richness and you say the amount is limited. We think, therefore, that your baby would do much better artificially fed, although so far he has done well in weight. We would suggest the following modification for the next month: Milk containing fat 3.00, sugar 6.00, protein 1.00. Of this give two and a half to four ounces at a feeding at intervals of two and one-half hours, nine feedings in 24 hours. See that the baby has plenty of cool water during the day. The Walker-Gordon Laboratory in St. Louis modifies milk and delivers it in bottles ready for nursing.

LARD-HEAD.—A greasy or shiny nose is common in young people who are anemic or scrofulous. The general health should first receive attention and the best hygienic condition maintained. The following application for mopping the nose will be found useful: 1 dram each of zinc sulphate and sulphuret of potassium; 1 dram precipitated sulphur; 4 ounces rose water. Mark "For External Use." The oiliness may first be removed by wiping with 2 drams of boric acid in 4 ounces of alcohol.

MOTHER.—Just at this time yeast is enjoying a popularity for many purposes, both nutritional and therapeutic. It no doubt has both properties and may be used for either, where indicated. It is not by any means essential in either, however, and should not be so regarded. It does have a corrective tendency in a number of disorders, without doubt, and its employment at such times is of advantage. It contains vitamines, but so does other food. If this were not true yeast consumption would be absolutely essential to our diet. Naturally the fact that it does contain this essential element to our well-being is featured by those who are engaged in selling it. So far as diet is concerned, the general mixed diet of meats, fruits, vegetables, etc., will give to the body the vitamines necessary to health.

We shall remember thee.

In loving remembrance of dear husband and father, Charles B. Leighton, who died April 8, 1920, and his dear father, John B. Leighton, died April 4, 1920.

In loving remembrance of my dear husband, William Groschke, who departed this life April 13, 1919.

When evening shadows are falling,
And I am sitting alone,
To my heart there comes a longing
If William could only come home.

Sadly missed by WIFE.

In memory of Mr. Louis Griemel, who departed 12th day of April, 1920:

Our thoughts do wander
To that place so far away,
Where we laid our dear father
Just one year ago today.
From our hearts but sweet the memory
As we think of you each day.

Sadly missed by
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my dear wife and mother, Lena Bowers, who departed this life four years ago, April 3, 1917.

A loving mother, true and kind;
No one like her in earth we find.
God called her home; it was His will,
But in our hearts she lingers still.
For all of us she did her best.
May God grant her eternal rest.

Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND DAUGHTERS.

In loving memory of our darling mother, Elizabeth Carlin, who died April 13, 1920.

Just one year ago you left us,
How we miss you, Mother, dear,
And remember all your kindness,
As we drop a silent tear.
For all of us you did your best;
May God grant you eternal rest.

Sadly missed by her sons, daughters, grandchildren and all who loved her. Requiem mass at Sacred Heart Church, Wednesday, April 13.

In memory of our dear daughter, Mable May Parks, who departed this life one year ago today April 9, 1920:

We saw her suffer, heard her sigh
With aching heart and weeping eyes;
We saw her sinking hour by hour
Yet we could not stay death's awful power;
But now she calmly sleeps at last,
All pain, all aches, all suffering past;
Gone but not forgotten.

Sadly missed by father, mother and sister.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Katherine Bachmann, who died nine years ago today, April 9, 1912:

In loving remembrance of our only son and brother, John J. Rauner, who departed this life one year ago, April 6, 1920.

One year is gone since you passed away,
We saw you suffer, heard you sigh,
With aching hearts and weeping eyes
We saw you sinking hour by hour.
It could not stay death's awful power,
But now our darling boy calmly sleeps,
All pain, all sufferings past.

Sadly missed by
HIS BROKEN-HEARTED PARENTS AND SISTERS. (c)

In loving memory of William F. Luedemann, who departed this life two years ago, April 10, 1919.

Today recalls sad memories
Because it took from us away
A dear one just two years today.
With recollections of his life with us,
Though ofttimes the tide of sorrow rush
Across our hearts at thought of our great loss,
Yet for his sake our grief we'll hush.
Still memory holds him ever dear
And draws his spirit presence near.

Sadly missed by
WIFE AND DAUGHTERS.

THERE is a "time" and "place" for everything. Now is the "time" and ours is the "place." Your dollars now will buy here "100 cents." Don't let them tell you the prices are "still high." You have seen this "bird;" he stops the "wheels of progress," telling you "it can't be done." The "crash in high prices" are here. Your dollar now buys more than 100 cents here. We can save you 40 to 60 per cent here; $15, $18, $20 and $25 will buy you a spring suit here. "We are with you" for 10 years; have led the way fighting for low prices, assisting thousands to "help keep up that prosperous appearance," which "means everything today." We have saved thousands of dollars for the clothes-buying public. "We're out of the high-rent district." "What the Drummers' Sample Clothes Shop means to you." These fine garments are made by the manufacturers for display or modeling purposes for traveling salesmen; they are made much better than the regular goods; after they show them off we buy them at a big discount; we give you the benefit of our immense buying capacity; this policy enables us to save you money. All we ask you is to "go shopping around" first and come here last, and we will certainly get your "dough." "Buy more, pay less." Vandeventer, Market, Sarah, Manchester, Chouteau and all other lines transfer to our door. We again announce our "Trade-In Sale" Department. We will make you a liberal allowance on your old clothes for new ones. "Abrams," "The Place to Buy Clothes," 926 S. Vandeventer av., near Chouteau av. (c)

THE "Guy" who avoids responsibility in "life" and inclines to work along the lines of the "least resistance" is usually always down and out. We have taken it upon "ourselves" to aid thousands to "come back" and better their condition in life by looking "prosperous" at all times. "Dress up," "look the part;" men "make good;" we have led the way to that prosperous "saving and prosperous looking habit" to thousands of people, "dressing them up" at little or no cost to them. Buy our uncalled-for clothes; "start anew;" we are "calling you." What you save when you spend your dough is your profit. Install the "Abrams System" of clothes buying and save. We have in "store" for you high-class suits; you can afford to wear two or three suits a season for the price of the customary one by purchasing our uncalled-for garments from our cleaning department; garments are tailor made, and from the best manufacturers; $10 to $20. Can you wear 34, 36, 40, 46 to 50 sizes? Also English and plain models. Vests, 50c; pants, $2 to $3.95; coats, $5 to $10; uncalled-for Stetson hats, 95c to $1.50. Open Sundays till 12:30. WARNING
TO MOTOR CAR BUYERS

Do not buy any so-called 1921 models of Buick cars until you are sure about the factory serial number. This should be on a plate in plain sight on the frame.

If, for any reason, this number is not available, insist on having the motor number and, if you are in doubt at all, telephone us for verification, as we have complete records of every Buick Car.

If the number is covered up, blurred or marred in any way, you will be safer in not purchasing.

AUTOMOBILES—MISCELLANEOUS

How Many of Your Friends Have Driven Their Car a Year?

The great majority of the cars you see on the streets are more than a year old, yet many of cars offered by the Newell Reconditioned Car Department have had less than a normal year's service. Every car is repainted and reconditioned, and is priced today to represent the maximum value possible for the money.

In place of the trials and tribulations of a cheap new car you will have the comfort, satisfaction and dependability of a high-grade motor car—and the cost will be the same.

More than fifty cars from which to choose. Monthly terms can be arranged.

HARDING GETS TWO PROPOSALS IN RAIL WAGE CONTROVERSY

Security Owners Favor Regional Conferences, Unions Urge a General Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—President Harding has before him two separate and distinct proposals for settlement of the dispute between the railroads and their employes. One proposition, that from S. Davies Warfield and Darwin P. Kingsley, representing railroad security owners, is that he use his good offices to bring about regional conferences between representatives of the carriers and their men. The other, submitted by B. M. Jewell, on behalf of the five railroad mechanical unions, is that he bring about a general conference.

Warfield and Kingsley believe that one outcome of the conferences they have suggested would be the formation of a regional railway board in each of the four groups into which the carriers have been constituted by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Such boards, it is explained, would be composed of representatives in equal numbers of railroads and the men. The men would refer disputes which could not be adjusted by direct negotiation between the carriers' managers and the employes. Should the regional boards fail to adjust the differences, the disputed points would go to the railroad labor board at Chicago.

In giving further consideration today to the general railroad situation, President Harding conferred with L. E. Sheppard, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors. Sheppard is understood to have advised against any general reduction of employes wages.

SEWER ASSESSMENT IS UPHELD

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 9.—Division No. 1 of the Supreme Court, in an opinion written by Judge Woodson, today held that the St. Louis Malleable Casting Co. must pay a sewer tax bill for $9168.86 in connection with the construction of a sewer in Baden Sewer District No. 2 of St. Louis. The casting company had attacked the validity of the proceedings by which the district was formed and the sewer built, but lost in the Circuit Court of St. Louis, whose decision was affirmed by the Supreme Court. Tax bills issued for the construction of the sewer, to the George G. Prendergast Construction Co. totalled $65,744.67.

WILL PRESS DAYLIGHT SAVING

Oliver F. Richards of 4612 Maryland avenue, chairman of the Daylight Saving Plan Committee, said last night that efforts would be made to bring the daylight saving bill before the new session of the Board of Aldermen, April 20.

The Board of Aldermen adjourned Friday without considering the bill, following the failure of the committee which handled it to report it out. Approximately 1100 organizations, 41 associations and more than 80,000 persons had signed petitions for turning the clock up one hour during the spring and summer.

OPEN CHARGE AGAINST MAN WHO TOLD ELWELL MURDER STORY

Murder Charge Against Roy Harris Withdrawn After Being Recorded.

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 9.—Roy Harris, whose confession of complicity in the murder of Joseph B. Elwell, New York sportsman and card expert, has puzzled the Buffalo and New York police for two days, had a first degree murder charge placed against him for four hours tonight. The charge was placed opposite his name on the police blotter of the Niagara Street Station at 6 o'clock. At 10 o'clock Police Chief Higgins announced the charge would be withdrawn and the man would be held on an open charge.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Former Gov. Whitman tonight visited the 70th street apartment in which Joseph B. Elwell was murdered. He said he wished to familiarize himself further with the place before questioning Harris in Buffalo tomorrow.

Mrs. Walter Lewisohn, who was in a dinner party Elwell attended the night before he was killed, arrived from Europe today on the steamer Aquitania. When newspapermen attempted to interview her, her husband, who met her at the pier, refused to allow them to see her.

GIRL, 13, AND WOMAN FRIEND ARRESTED IN DEPARTMENT STORE

Child Says She Is "Little Mother" for Five Brothers and Sisters—Theft of Goods Charged.

Theresa Farelo, 13 years old, who said she was the "little mother" for five brothers and sisters at her home, 910 Wash street, her father being dead and her mother a patient at the Isolation Hospital, was arrested yesterday at a department store where employes had said she had taken three pairs of silk stockings, a shirt waist and some dress goods. With her the detectives arrested a woman who could not speak English.

Through the girl, the woman said she was Mrs. Jennie Spano, 30 years old, a widow and mother of four children, living near Tenth street and Franklin avenue. She had two pairs of stockings and seven pairs of children's socks taken from the same store, police say.

The girl admitted taking the articles, saying she had been working in a factory, but had been unable to make ends meet and had taken the things because she had nothing to wear. She was placed in the House of Detention and the woman locked up.

DIRECT FRENCH DELIVERY OF AMERICAN CABLES IS SOUGHT

Negotiations in Progress for Similar Privilege French Companies Now Have Here.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Negotiations are in progress with France to obtain for American cable companies the right to deal direct with the French public, it was announced today at the State Department. The Government is attempting to put American cable companies operating in France on the same footing as French companies in the United States, it was explained, business organization and chambers of commerce having urged such action.

Under present French regulations, American companies must receive, deliver and collect for messages in France through local cable companies under Government supervision.

The matter was up during the recent international conference, and has since been pressed by Ambassador Wallace at Paris.

REGISTERED MAIL IS STOLEN FROM KANSAS CITY TRAIN

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 9.—That several pieces of registered mail were in a pouch ripped open last night on a Missouri Pacific train bound for Atchison, Kan., was the statement made here late today by postal inspectors.

No estimate of the value of the packages taken would be given by the officials, who said they were still checking up. It was stated that among the parcels were two registered from Berlin, Germany, and consigned to Stockton, Kan. One or more registered parcels shipped from New York also were in the pouch, it was stated. The authorities were proceeding on the theory that the pouch was slit open before the train left Kansas City.

SOLE IMPORTERS

Every woman should know what this mark means

WHEN you reach in your vanity-case or hand bag, and with a quick dab from your dainty compacte, renew the fresh charm of your skin, do you realize to whom you are indebted for this handy little invention?

It is only natural that the study of skin colorings and textures has reached its zenith in the century-famed ateliers of Dorin of Paris. There, poudre and rouges, of exquisite softness and refinement, have been perfected for different kinds of coloring—for the many types of brunettes and blondes.

Here, also, was invented the idea of compressing these poudres and rouges of inimitable fineness into handy little compact placques—so that you could have always with you your favorite poudre and rouge.

You must be on your guard

So popular did this idea become that the name "Dorin" has been loosely applied to any compacte. Unscrupulous dealers and manufacturers have even gone further, and imitated and counterfeited the famous Dorin label. So Dorin of Paris gives you this warning:

In addition to his own label on the top of the box, he asks you to look also on the bottom of every box for the little round label that carries the name of F. R. Arnold & Co. This firm has been selected as the sole importer of Dorin's poudres and rouges. Only by looking for this label can you feel sure you are not being imposed upon by a substitute or a counterfeit.

Send today for this sample offer

As an aid in selecting the tints that will emphasize your particular kind of beauty, we have prepared a booklet, "What Is Your Coloring?" It defines the various types of beauty and recommends harmonizing combinations of poudre and rouge for each type.

For 25c in stamps or coin, this booklet, together with two miniature compactes (La Dorine Poudre and Dorin's Rouge) will be mailed you. Tell us the color of your eyes, hair and skin, so that we can select the exact shades for you.

Or send 10c in coin and you will receive this booklet with two Dorin packets, one of poudre and one of rouge en poudre (loose powder form). Remember to send description of your coloring.

Address your letter to F. R. ARNOLD & CO., Sole Importer, 18 West Twenty-Second St., New York.

Eminent Food Authorities give the real reason for the remarkable nation-wide popularity of Karo—the great American syrup

(Important to all parents)

IN millions of homes in America hardly a day goes by that Karo isn't served at some meal. This has built up the wonderful sale of more than two hundred million cans last year. There must be a reason for this—even apart from the use of Karo as a table and cooking delicacy. And now food experts are telling us what this is.

Do you know what Dextrose is?

You cannot live long without Dextrose, the great energy food. Most foods you eat—such as bread, starchy vegetables and all forms of sugar—have to be changed into Dextrose before your system can use them as energy foods. There is a large percentage of Dextrose in Karo.

So Karo may almost be said to be a predigested food. These are scientific facts, supported by the very highest medical and food authorities. Send for the free booklet mentioned below and read the facts.

Is it any wonder that children who get plenty of delicious Karo are full of life and bounding energy!

Give your children plenty of rich nourishing Karo—on cakes or bread. Or let them make pure home-made candy with Karo, and have it in the house whenever they want some wholesome, delicious fudge, taffy or caramels.

The moderate price you pay for Karo is quite as tempting as its satisfying flavor. Compare Karo for price and flavor with other syrups. If you are not satisfied return the balance of the can to your grocer and get your money back.

Your Protection

Do not be deceived by cans containing syrup that might look like Karo. The name "Karo" is on every can of original Karo—look for it and be assured of full weight cans and highest quality.

FREE A booklet every parent should read. Tells all about the wonderful food value of Karo; explains the meaning of Dextrose and why children thrive on it. Sent free with the beautifully illustrated Cook Book of 64 pages. Write Corn Products Refining Co., Argo, Illinois.

BLUE Karo
The standard table syrup. Also for cooking, baking and candy-making. Light brown color, delicious flavor—a heavy-bodied syrup.

RED Karo
The ideal Syrup for every use—for cooking, baking, candy-making and preserving. Because of its honey-like appearance many prefer it as a spread for cakes, biscuits, breads.

GREEN Karo
Flavored with highest grade real maple sugar. Very moderate in price—absolutely pure. The makers of Karo are the world's largest users of the highest grade maple sugar—over a thousand tons used annually.

Make your skin "A skin you love to touch"

A BEAUTIFUL skin, soft, smooth, faultlessly clear—any girl can have this charm.

For your skin is constantly changing—each day old skin dies and new takes its place. Give this new skin the right treatment, and see how soft and lovely you can keep it.

If your skin is very sensitive and easily irritated, use each night this special treatment:

DIP a soft washcloth in warm water and hold it to your face.

Now make a warm water lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and dip your cloth up and down until the cloth is "fluffy" with the soft, white lather.

Rub this lathered cloth gently over your skin until the pores are thoroughly cleansed.

Rinse first with warm, then with clear, cool water and dry carefully.

THE very first time you use this treatment it will leave your skin with a slightly drawn, tight feeling. Do not regard this as a disadvantage—it is an indication that the treatment is doing you good, for it means that your skin is responding in the right way to this method of cleansing. After a few treatments the drawn feeling will disappear and your skin will gain a new, healthful sense of softness and smoothness.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter, and begin this treatment tonight. A 25-cent cake of Woodbury's will last for a month or six weeks. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York and Perth, Ontario.

Lulu Balks at Stepladders

I WASN'T much surprised when my maid Lulu finally balked. She was heavy and awkward and always afraid of stepladders.

"I'se awfully sorry, ma'am," she said, "but I done got to leave you-all."

You see the time had come round again to wipe the dust off the picture moldings and over the doors and windows.

"Now see here," I said to Lulu; "I wonder if we can't compromise. I don't blame you for being afraid of ladders. I don't like them myself. But suppose we get a Premier Electric Cleaner. You know it has attachments for reaching everywhere."

Lulu's teeth glistened. "Wouldn't that be gloriful!" she exclaimed.

So she stayed. Lulu does more and better work with Premier in two hours than she could do in two days with dangerous old stepladders and cloths. Of course once in a while I polish the woodwork with a rag.

And of course there's no comparison when it comes to rugs, floors and upholstered furniture. The rubber-fingered brush—the distinctive feature of the Premier—is a marvel for going after dirt, grime, dust, hairs, pins and ravellings. Lulu was getting worn out with the everlasting sweeping and cleaning—which didn't half do the job anyway.

"That sho' am some Premier!" says Lulu.

The Premier Vacuum Cleaner is the one with the revolving rubber-fingered brush. It is air driven and cleans the surface of the heaviest rug, without the least injury to the most delicate fabric. It's no wonder the servant likes the Premier. It not only cleans rugs, but also woodwork, backs of pictures, lighting fixtures, upholstery and mattresses.

There is a great difference in cleaners. Before buying any cleaner you owe it to yourself to have a TEN POINT DEMONSTRATION of the Premier—First Among Cleaners—in your own home. 'Phone the distributor named below to have your nearest Premier dealer make this demonstration tomorrow.

It will surprise you.

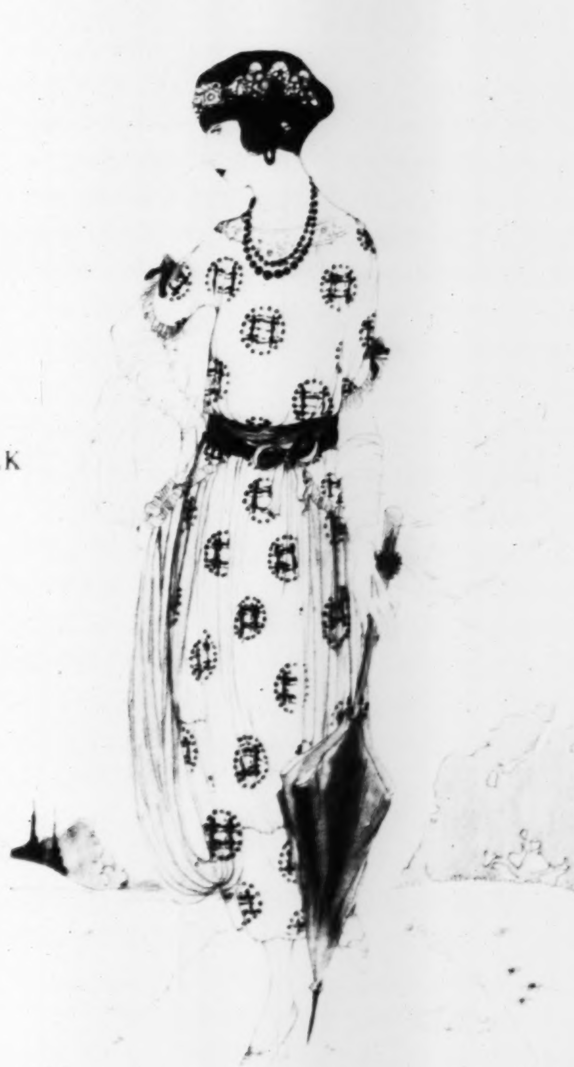
SPRING DEMANDS THE LOVELINESS OF SILK

THE way of a maid in the Spring is certain to lead to such delightful creations as new sunny-day frocks, sports suits with just the correct degree of swagger, dance dresses of youthful fluffiness, négligées caressingly soft and lingerie of exquisite daintiness. And all of these, so they be of approved smartness, will be sure to follow the way of Cheney Silks, for never were silks—Crêpes, Satins, Twills, Bengalines, Taffetas—conceived in greater loveliness of texture, pattern and colour.



Black and white is an exceedingly wise choice for an afternoon frock, and in this one of Cheney Twill its smartness is emphasized by trimming of navy gray Crêpe Chenette and black velvet ribbons.

Stores with a reputation for fine merchandise will be quite sure to sell Cheney Silks, either by the yard or in garments ready to wear.

Head of Christ Carved on a Bean Pod

THE above enlargement of a carved head of Christ, cut in the pod of a Florida bean in 1895, by a Guatemalan prisoner and now being exhibited by Mrs. Oliver Harriman of New York, is said to be one of the most striking examples of the almost lost art of miniature carving in existence today and is attracting wide attention in art circles of the East. The carving is the actual size of the circle surrounding the letter "T" at the opening of this paragraph, being about one-half inch in diameter. A portion of the pod has been carved with a rim, to afford a background.

This tiny bit of sculpturing is the property of Mrs. H. Willis McFadden of New York, who purchased it from a Spaniard and who, a short time before the death of Cardinal Gibbons, showed it to the prelate. The Cardinal and Bishop Burch both acclaimed it as a work of exceptional power and beauty.

When art experts examined the miniature under a magnifying glass, they were so lavish in their praise and in their estimates of its probable value, that Mrs. McFadden has kept the carving in a safety vault since then.

Investigation into its origin shows that it was carved by a Guatemalan under sentence of death in Spanish Honduras. Before being led out to execution, he gave the carving to one of his jailers. The latter in turn handed it to a friend, who passed it on to a relative, Senor Navia. The latter first exhibited the carving in Spain in 1905, when he had been married a short time to Sonia Nordstrom, a Norwegian girl and

SLEEP IS THE MOST IMPORTANT THING IN THE WORLD, SAYS THIS DOCTOR

"Silly old proverbs" blamed by him for a widespread misconception about the necessity of getting all the restful slumber we possibly can—Why plentiful sleep is more essential than food for health, success and life itself—Helpful advice to people who suffer from insomnia.

An Expert's Comments on the Function of Sleeping

TO SPEND more energy—especially nervous energy—in a day than one can restore in a night's sleep is to be headed for physical bankruptcy.

The physiological fact about sleep is that we need all we can get, and should take all we can use.

To make children get up before they have had enough restful sleep to thoroughly refresh them is a foolish, health-destroying crime against the child and an insult to nature.

To get enough to replenish the vital forces—there's the whole philosophy of sleep in a nutshell.

Nothing in the drug store or in the optical shop does so much good for tired, overworked eyes as sound sleep.

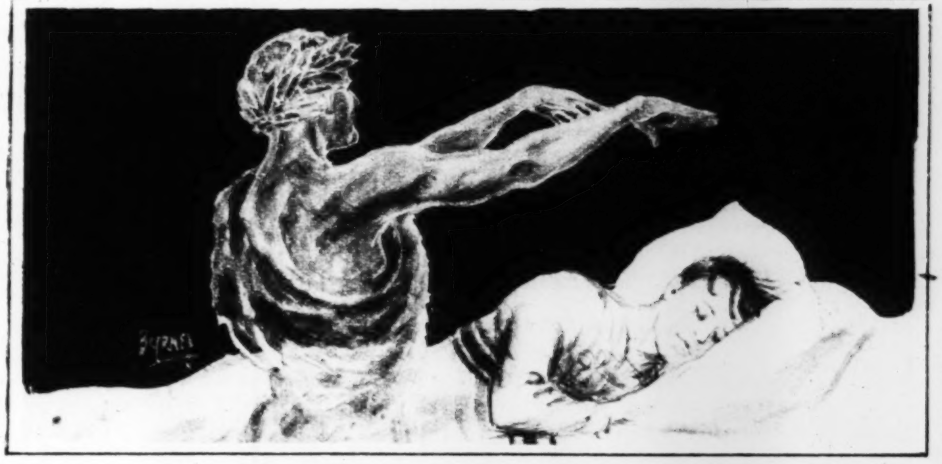
The most dangerous things about insomnia are the remedies used to club it into insensibility.

To have an occasional wakeful night is an evidence of intelligence. Hardly a normal man or woman but will sometimes have experiences that cause a period of wakefulness. Only human clods sleep undisturbed, through every sort of storm and stress.

None sleep quite so soundly as those who have earned it by the sweat of their brow.

To city-bred ears and nerves, the country is the noisiest place in the world.

Separate beds for every sleeper are as necessary as separate dishes for every eater.



HERE is a doctor who will have to be suppressed, if we would rescue from the rubbish pile a number of the best-known proverbs handed down by our forefathers. Not only does he revile those proverbs and the conduct based upon them, but he gives a lot of plaguy scientific reasons, too. What he says has a most convincing ring, which will perhaps make his attack upon certain ancient maxims still more offensive. But while some of the old-fashioned elders (especially those with a New England background) may squirm, this man will be hailed with delight by the younger generation.

For Edwin F. Bowers, M. D., has written a book ("Sleeping for Health," Britton Publishing Co.) in which he ridicules the idea that there is anything commendable, or "smart," or profitable either to health or purse, in denying one's self the full amount of sleep which the body craves.

"We need all the sleep that we can get," he declares flatly, "and should take all that we can use."

In an early chapter of this interesting little volume he says:

"Modern conditions, with their anxieties, cares and hurries, are causing much nervous instability—directly traceable to lack of proper sleep. Never before was there a time when people needed to sleep so long and so 'hard' in order to build up vitality wasted in our intensive methods of living than right now.

"The man who continuously loses in the amount of sleep he requires is laboring under a handicap that will diminish his chances of success in life. The woman who habitually is disturbed in her rest, and in its duration, will make a failure of her children.

"We need all the sound, restful, refreshing sleep we can get. Sleep builds health—health brings wealth, beauty and happiness."

Dr. Bowers states that until recently even scientists regarded sleep as a purely negative process. When we slept it was believed that bodily functions ceased and that we were busy doing nothing. So sure were people that time spent in sleeping was a kind of theft of producing power, that "a certain odium has crept into our conception of sleep," he says, and cites the term "sleepy-head" as one which carries a definite measure of reproach. Continues this doctor:

"We are steering clear of those bewhiskered old saws that extolled the wonders and advantages of early rising to a heavy-eyed race, and we are taking a lesson from old Mother Nature in learning to follow our instincts. * * *

"We now know that sleep, far from being the 'death of life,' is one of the most important of all living functions—the thing that makes life possible."

And a little later he says that sleep "instead of being the waste of time and the necessary evil that we fatuously think we deserve medals for curtailing, is the most important thing in the world—more important even than food." And then he states that men have gone 63 days without food and a week without water, but that they usually die in less than 10 days if totally deprived of sleep. The victims of Chinese torturers, so it is said, rarely keep their reason after the fifth or sixth day of their enforced wakefulness. Again we quote from the doctor:

"Most of us think of the up-and-doing chap as an aggressive, fighting-jawed individual who arises early enough every morning to wake the robins up for breakfast. Always we think of a hero as a lithe young fellow who gets along on a minimum amount of sleep.

"All our asinine old proverbs pin figurative ribbons of honor on the poor dolt who 'short changes' himself on sleep to win the fatuous approbation of whomever happens to find out how saving he is with this commodity.

"We have heard about Napoleon, Frederick the Great, Frederick Schiller, Charles XII, the Duke of Wellington and John Wesley so often that we have come to believe that the greater and more intelligent a man is, the less sleep he requires.

"We have accepted that toothless, doddering old precept

'Nature requires five,
Custom takes seven
Laziness takes nine,
And wickedness eleven,

as gospel truth.

"We figured that Virgil and Horace, Franklin and Priestley, Buffon and Parkhurst, and scores of other notables in the world of art, literature and science did their best work on a very moderate amount of sleep. Therefore, why should anyone need more?"

Two of the doctor's interesting chapters are entitled "Why Do We Sleep?" and "What Sleep Does," and from the latter chapter the following extracts are taken:

"Sleep substitutes, for the destructive processes of active life, constructive measures. It reverses the downward trend that accompanies waking life. It lifts us back to the top of that physiological toboggan down which we commence to slide the moment we get up.

"It recharges the exhausted body batteries and fills the organic furnace with fresh fuel, for the 'anabolic' or building-up processes are in excess of the 'katabolic' or breaking-down processes during sleep.

"It is during sleep that the final transformation of food into tissue is effected—that the finished product of digestion is finally converted into new muscle, brains, blood and nerve cells.

"This explains the fattening influence of sleep, and shows why the dietitian, in attempting to reduce an overly-corpulent patient to reasonable proportions, first cuts down his hours of sleep.

"Loss of sleep is really a form of starvation, not to be made up by increasing the amount of food taken into the system. 'Endurance racers' prove this in an interesting and convincing manner. Those engaged in six-day bicycle races and other half-witted forms of diversion eat four or five times as much food as the ordinary man. Yet the end of the contest finds them hollow-eyed and cadaverous. Loss of sleep—even more than their physical exertions—has prevented them from transforming food into tissue.

"It is this positive reconstructive quality in sleep that explains why babies, whose chief business in life is to grow, spend from 16 to 18 hours out of every 24 in sleeping, a capacity which gradually diminishes as maturity is approached, until it finally settles down around the average of nine hours.

"The deeper the sleep the quicker the recuperation, and the more effectively all the vital processes of repair are carried out. The lighter and more disturbed the sleep, the slower the recuperation from fatigue and the longer it takes to effect repair."

True reconstructive sleep, declares the author, "also restores the oxygen balance in the tissues. This has a most important bearing upon our state of health." He says that of the total intake and outgo of oxygen during each 24 hours, the ratio varies about as follows: In waking hours, 60 per cent is given off and 40 per cent taken in, while in sleeping hours, some 60 per cent is taken in as against 40 per cent given off. He summarizes the necessity of sleep, and plenty of it, in these words:

"Actually, the sleep period represents the time required to restore the oxygen balance in the tissues, recharge the organic batteries, build up the broken-down tissue and oxidize and otherwise get rid of accumulated fatigue poisons."

Dr. Bowers says we "may be sure that 'Good night and pleasant dreams' has a deeper significance than most of us realize. For a sleep with pleasant dreams is beneficial, like a pleasant visit from a friend. We know that if the emotions are pleasantly stimulated by dreams the digestion and assimilation of food proceeds more favorable. All the vegetative processes are carried on more harmoniously. Pleasant dreams create a feeling of restfulness and well-being that result in an improved state of mind and body."

But bad dreams and nightmares produce exactly the opposite effects and the author declares that "anything and everything that conduces either to dreamlessness or to pleasant dreams makes for health and physical resiliency. And everything that disturbs sleep or that causes unpleasant dreams lowers our vitality, depletes our store of vital energy and tends to make our miserable lives shorter and decidedly more miserable."

Dr. Bowers observes that light sleepers generally appear to be all right, but that he "has yet to meet a person who has been for years a persistent light sleeper who did not have some organic or nervous defect." And he repeats that the final conversion of food into nutritive material is effected mostly during sleep, and that the sounder and more restful the sleep the more quickly and the more effectively this transformation is effected.

He declares it is safe to say that no food, in itself, contains any soporific or hypnotic quality. "As a matter of fact, a whole barrel of lettuce, flanked by a bushel of onions, doesn't contain sufficient hypnotic to put a flea asleep. And the same is true of milk."

The author cites irritability, nervousness, inability to concentrate, progressive weakness and deficient physical tone as definite pathological conditions produced by loss of sleep.

More serious effects due to a deficiency of the proper kind of sleep include mental and bodily exhaustion, anemia, a lowered resisting ability (making people more predisposed to contract tuberculosis or any contagious disease) and intermittent action of the heart, while the increase in sleeplessness is given as a chief predisposing factor in the increase of arterio-sclerosis.

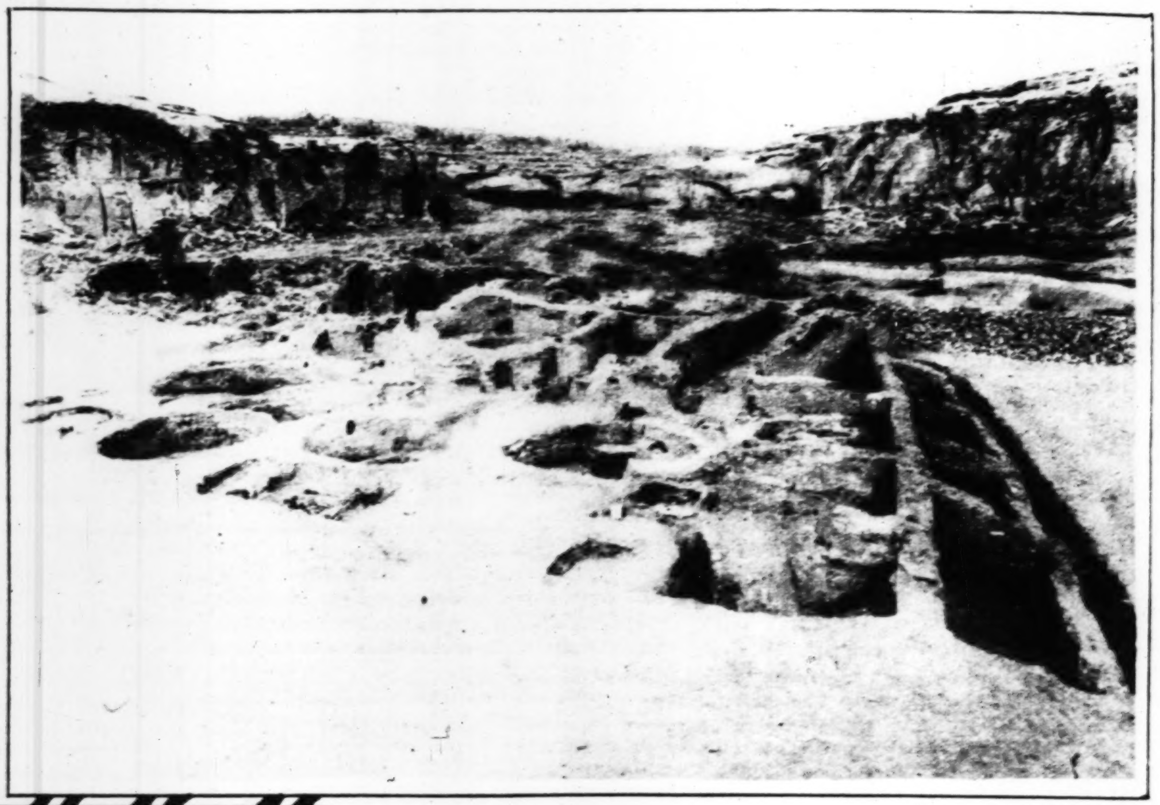
Active exercise, such as a brisk but not too fatiguing walk before retiring, "will sometimes work wonders for either a human sloth or a brain abuser," he declares. A warm bath before retiring, a wet pack, a cold cloth at the head or the back, or other measures tending to promote elimination and equalize the circulation, will usually give satisfactory results, too.

"For those of sedentary habits who are troubled with cold feet, a hot footbath or, better still, a cold footbath, with vigorous friction following it, and the wearing of a warm pair of bed stockings, will often induce sleep," says the author.

If everybody had proper sleeping conditions "and a clear conscience," says the doctor, "the sum total of happiness and health would be marvelously increased."

Apartment House of a Thousand Rooms, Relic of Vanished Race, Is Unearthed

Distinctive type of structure, heretofore unknown to scientists, is discovered by workers from the School of American Research at Chettro Kettle, New Mexico, and affords a novel study both in pattern and solidity of construction. : : :



General view of the excavated section of Chettro Kettle.

By ROBERT H. MOULTON

GREAT community structures and religious sanctuaries, which challenge the admiration and constructive ability of our modern civilization, are being slowly unearthed by archeologists operating in what is known today as Chaco Canyon, New Mexico. Centuries ago these buildings were occupied by a race which has fallen into oblivion. In recent years the desert sands have been swept aside, revealing one wonder after another. The greatest wonder of all, however, came to light only a few months ago, when forces working at Chettro Kettle, under Edgar L. Hewitt, director of the School of American Research at Santa Fe, excavated an apartment house containing 1000 rooms.

In enduring, residential architecture the unknown people who constructed the building attained to levels not surpassed by the architects of the ancient world. The apartment, which has been entirely buried for centuries, would occupy two large blocks if set down in a modern American city. Its great curved front extends for 700 feet. In its walls are 50,000,000 pieces of quarried stone, not to mention thousands of logs, poles and slabs, which were cut in distant forests, transported by man power and set in their respective places with the aid of implements of stone. The building, archeologists are satisfied, was erected, not by unwilling workers, who labored under the lash of priestly or kingly taskmasters, but by a virile people, who took pleasure in what they were doing.

While other monuments in Chaco Canyon have been unearthed by historians, and also by vandals, in past years, Chettro Kettle has remained untouched. So far as known, not a specimen from it is to be found in any museum. The excavating was begun last spring and proceeded during the summer months. Work will be resumed this summer and will be continued for at least five years. The plans contemplate a study of the physiography of the region, a careful examination of the ruins and a thorough study of the architecture, art, economic resources and ethnological relations of the ancient inhabitants. In short, the undertaking is to uncover such facts as are obtainable concerning the extinct community of which Chettro Kettle is a part, and to produce, as far as such facts warrant, a picture of the life that was lived ages ago in this remote place. Today, no written word of history exists concerning the 10,000 persons who called Chaco Canyon home a thousand or more years ago. Even the name by which they were known is lost. Perhaps somewhere in the ruins something of the blood, language and cultural potentialities of these remarkable people survives, to become available in the evolution of the American race.

Hewitt is satisfied from his observations at Chettro Kettle that he is studying a people that matured in culture without serious interruption, that ran its course to the summit of its civilization and then went into oblivion. He believes that the people never cultivated more than 3000 acres of land at any one time and never numbered more than 10,000. Evidences of decline such as one sees in modern towns or pueblos in New Mexico and Arizona are not visible here.

The first step taken at Chettro Kettle last spring was to examine the area surrounding the ruin for refuse heaps and burial places, which, unless excavated first, might be lost under the debris from the buildings. A large oval mound a few yards to the east of the walls was divided from end to end by a broad trench on its longer axis, going down to the undisturbed soil. A similar trench on the short diameter cut it into quarters. In addition, large sections on the east side of the mound nearest the pueblo were completely excavated, minutely examined and removed. The stratification of the mound from its beginning was thus laid bare, not only for the information of the archeologists doing the work, but for study by anyone else who may wish to undertake the reading of the story it has to tell. The successive layers were fairly clear, all carrying plentiful deposits of cultural remains, bone implements, potsherds and the usual refuse of domestic life. The archeologists are satisfied that the mound was not used as a place for the burial of the dead. It yielded much material for study, but little that was suitable for museum display.

In determining the proceeding at Chettro Kettle, it was assumed that many unfamiliar factors had to be reckoned with—an assumption which has been fully confirmed as the work has advanced.

The most favorable approach seemed to be by way of the southeast corner, which was almost completely buried, suggesting a minimum of danger to workmen from shattered walls. It was at the end of one wing, presenting the only clearly exposed corner of the ruins. It was one point of origin of the great ridge, formerly supposed to be a buried wall, that sweeps in a bold curve from this point to the west end of the site, 700 feet away.

Examination of the corner, the archeologists believed, would reveal several important aspects of their problem. Therefore, an area of 90 feet square was laid off for excavation. Upon completing the excavation it was found that the curved front was a building with a massive central axis and rooms on either side. It may have been two stories in height in places. The central wall is pierced by doorways all securely closed with masonry, originally affording communication between the rooms on the inner court and those facing outward. The exterior rooms are without outside openings on the level that remains.

Outside this series of exterior rooms is a trench

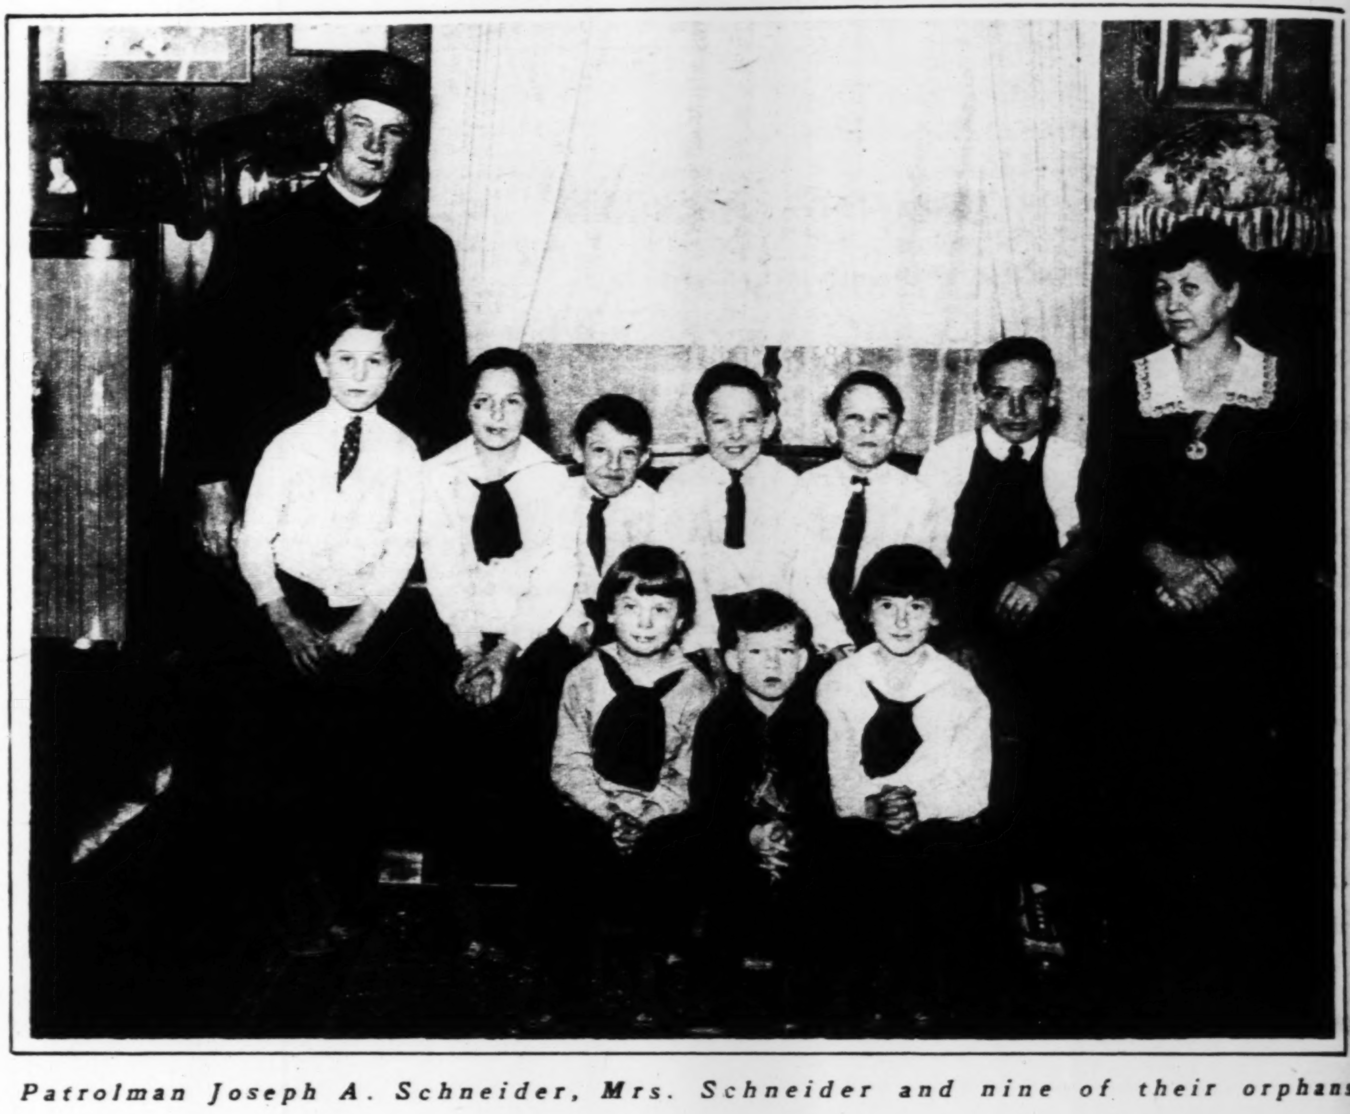
Most Remarkable Family in St. Louis

Ten children, happy and riotous and all of them orphans or "half" orphans, await the nightly home-coming of Patrolman Joseph A. Schneider, after his quiet day directing traffic at 12th and Locust Streets—Mrs. Schneider explains why they have such a brood, and how they manage it on a modest income. :-: ˙-:

By Marguerite Martyn.



Patrolman Joseph A. Schneider, Mrs. Schneider and nine of their orphans.

"THE busiest man in St. Louis" was the caption at one of the big picture theaters recently which announced a picture in action of Joseph A. Schneider, who directs the traffic at Twelfth and Locust streets, and the audience, almost before the picture flashed into view, signaled its recognition and, by its quick, resounding applause, seemed to express the sentiment that the caption might have added "The best-known," or "the most popular man" in the city.

It is due to something more than the fact that Schneider is stationed at the greatest traffic center in the city that his picture is instantly recognized. Other officers share the detail with him, but he is better known than others because of a more conspicuous personality. He is a tall man, with a ruddy face, set off by silver gray hair, who would of himself stand out noticeably in any parade of Chief O'Brien's finest or handsomest. But it is his versatility at a place where the utmost versatility is needed, his ability to crowd movement, activity, gesture, into a given space of time, to look four ways at once, keep both thumbs in motion, keep up a constant verbal flow of directions, greet acquaintances from any of the four directions, detect any error or infraction of the rules, referee misunderstandings, keep everybody moving and look out at the same time for everybody's interests and welfare, that he has become a familiar figure to pedestrians and motorists alike.

Yes, we all think we know Officer Schneider. Thousands who pass the corner daily get to thinking, as he seems to single each one out for some special attention, that they are his special proteges, forgetting that thousands of others come in for the same personal recognition and attention. Thousands of us think we know this public institution and no doubt thousands of us, as we flash past him, hurrying homeward every evening, breathe a little inward prayer that when he finishes his daily stint he may retire to the peace and quiet that should surely be the most treasured reward of one working at so nerve-racking a task.

Which thought and which prayer, I, for one, have just come to know, are entirely wasted upon this versatile personality. I have just found out what, I dare say, will be news to thousands who think they know him, that Officer Schneider, when he goes home, does not seek utter quiet and solitary relaxation. No, he prefers to go home to a little five-room flat, crowded with 10 (TEN) healthy, happy, and therefore riotous and clamorous, children.

That he prefers to do this, that he prefers this noisy household, relatively less exciting than the Twelfth and Locust corner, perhaps, but most exciting compared to what the average tired working man prefers; that he PREFERS this lively household is said advisedly, for he has no children of his own. The 10 are all orphans, or half orphans, all dependent, to whom, as a matter purely of choice, he has assumed the role of adopted father—or uncle. Those having fathers living are encouraged not to forget that fact, and with them he assumes only the second best title, uncle—Uncle Joe.

Perhaps to say that Officer Schneider "prefers" the large family needs a little qualification. It is Mrs. Schneider's preferences which rule the situation. When he has gone home and found his wife has increased the size of the family with one or two or three additions—one day he found unannounced an installment of twins, 8 years old, and another brother, 6—he has been known to put on a bit of a storm.

"Woman, woman, how many more?" he has exclaimed, sinking into a chair, for a moment flabbergasted and pardonably so, as who will not agree?

But we have Mrs. Schneider's word for it that in a little while he has become so attached to each child that when times get hard and the cost of living soars overwhelmingly and the prospect of the salary increase from $125 a month to $150 dwindles to $145, which increase continues to be a prospect waiting on the Governor's signature, and it comes to a discussion as to which child shall be abandoned, he becomes just like any other father, unable to say which he would most willingly give up, and so he keeps them all.

When I heard of the remarkable family, I asked Officer Schneider to tell me about it. To be sure, it was at an inopportune moment, when we had to keep hopping a step to the east, north, south or west to keep our toes from under the tires of the cars whirling around us, which might account for some impatience. He said:

"Aw, go out and ask the wife. She can tell you all about them."

So I went out to 1362A Goodfellow avenue and found "the wife," a surprisingly young looking, comely woman, of whose exclusive attention any husband might well be proud, with dimples in both cheeks, pretty blonde hair, charmingly moulded figure and a bland, placid manner.

It was nearly noon, and seven of the younger children who attend the school near by would soon be flocking in for luncheon at the long table, on which a white cloth was already laid in the kitchen. There would not be much time to talk—but the foster mother's placid manner did not betoken any fuss or hurry.

"We never had any children of our own," said Mrs. Schneider, "but in all we have taken 13 children into our home. Our oldest child, who came to us when she was 9, grew up, was married from our house and two years ago, at the age of 22, she died." A shadow of sorrow crossed her face. "Two of our boys are now traveling salesmen, making good money. They still come home to us for holidays.

"Our 18-year-old boy has just recently enlisted in the Marines. Our 16-year-old is in the second year of high school and is making $8 a week as a messenger after school. So, soon we will have left at home only nine children. And," she added gravely, a little shyly, as if confessing a fault, "I should like to have an even dozen."

"But why? And where? And how?" The interviewer's questions crowded over one another, after she had recounted the names and ages of four girls, 12; two, 10, and one, 8 years of age, and the six boys, one, 18; one, 16, three, 12, and one, 6.

"Why do I take them?" she responded. "I suppose people do think I am weak in the upper story, but there has been some good and unavoidable reason why I should take each of them. When you have adopted one child, people seem to assume you will take another, and they bring you homeless children whom you just cannot turn away.

"Five of our children now are wards of the Board of Children's Guardians, who board them with me for $15 a month, each. The allowance has just recently been raised to $15. It was formerly $10. Then $12. Each child the board expects to leave here only until somebody can be found to adopt it. But time goes on and the board finds homes for other children and seems satisfied to leave these with me. I never would willingly give one up unless I was convinced the new parents would be perfectly satisfied with the child—for it does a child no good to be shifted about. He soon gets to thinking nobody cares for him. I never would willingly see any child sent to an institution. There they are raised by the clock and come out as if they had been trained in a penitentiary. A good offer was made for my baby, my 6-year-old, Alfred, who came from the Children's Guardians. Now, he is a very strong-willed child, full of pep and lovable, but he needs a firm hand. I felt certain he would not prove satisfactory, just at first, in a new environment, and I shouldn't want him back after my training had been undone. And he just must not be cast adrift. He has a most pathetic history. Two of his brothers and three sisters died in one week of diphtheria. Then his mother died. The father went on living alone with this one remaining child, when he was taken to the hospital with measles. Before he had recovered from that he was seized with scarlet fever. The father was already crazed with grief and this was the last straw. They took him to an insane asylum, where he still is.

"I talked it over with my husband, and I decided that

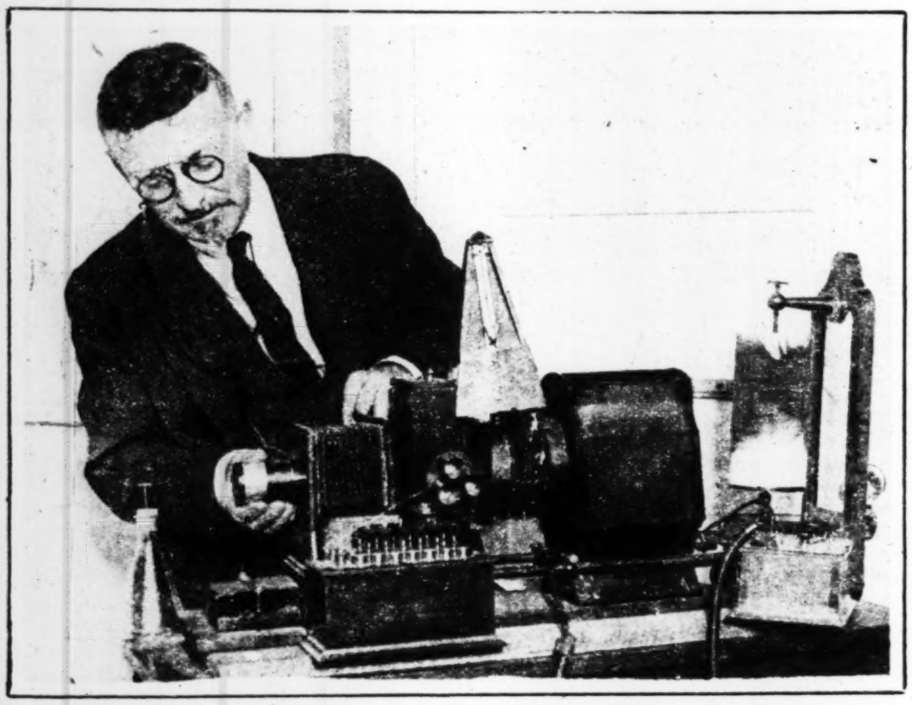
Can the Blood Test, Accepted by Courts, Really Decide Matter of Parentage?

Scientists give a large majority in saying that it cannot and local students of the matter refuse to take as final the decision in the Vittori case at San Francisco, where a test was made such as is now suggested in the Stillman affair -o-



Dr. Albert Abrams of Stanford University and the machine by means of which he makes blood tests through electrical vibrations. His findings in the Vittori case of disputed parentage were accepted by a San Francisco court.

CAN the parentage or race of a human being be determined by a blood test? In at least one case a scientist and the courts have held that it can. In a vague sort of way the general public seems to believe such a thing entirely practicable. But according to what seems the preponderance of scientific opinion in this country, it cannot.

Since the Stillman divorce case has been occupying so much attention, hints have been dropped that the blood test might be attempted to ascertain the true parentage of little Guy, the presumed youngest son of James A. Stillman, the banker, whom the financier disavows.

The confidence of the general public in the ability of science to do almost anything nowadays is revealed by the matter-of-fact way in which this suggestion of obtaining evidence is accepted. But however flattering this confidence may be to the profession, scientists turn the cold shoulder of disbelief to any such "proofs." A curt statement, not of incredulity, but of absolute denial of the reliability of such a test, is the reply of the medical profession.

St. Louis pathologists and bacteriologists who have been asked concerning the matter are practically a unit in stating that no definite proof has ever been advanced of a blood test being final. In spite of the fact that the courts have accepted evidence of the sort, they hold that science has not yet accepted it.

One scientist who not only upholds the reliability of such tests, but who has invented an apparatus for the purpose of making them, is Dr. Albert Abrams, professor of pathology at Stanford University. In the Superior Court of San Francisco, on Feb. 17 last, his testimony was received as final by Judge Graham in the Vittori case and the parentage and support of little Virginia Vittori was charged to Paul Vittori, who had declined to recognize the child as his own.

Moreover, in a case in Chicago, a woman who sought to show that she had no negro blood in her veins applied to the courts for recognition of such a test. And evidence obtained by this means has been advanced by attorneys in two or three other cases where color was at stake.

Regardless of the fact that Judge Graham, in handing down his decision in the Vittori case from the bench, expressed the belief that scientific endeavors along the line of blood analysis had been given great impetus, scientists, as a whole, are still skeptical.

"Nothing definite has ever been handled on the point by scientific literature," said Dr. Charles W. Schery, City Bacteriologist, when asked concerning the point, "and while we can readily decide between human blood and the blood of animals, by a biological test, that is about as far as we can go positively. So far, the test of the different elements in the blood would not prove conclusively anything about parentage. The test showing whether a person is of black or white descent is, to my mind, extremely doubtful. As for the electrical test, which figured in the Vittori case, I have heard of no definite proof of its results."

The electric test, to which he refers and which was developed by Dr. Abrams, is made by a machine which that scientist has devised and the test comes through what he calls electronic vibration. His method has never been fully described here and is not known to local scientists. But photos of his device show that he uses a metronome, similar to that which is utilized in music, and it is supposed that he sends electronic vibrations through the blood to be tested, which serves as a sort of connecting link. Blood, reduced to a highly fluid state, would furnish a conductor for the electric current, it is pointed out, and it is presumed that the vibrations of the current stir up pulsations in the metronome. Dr. Abrams explained his methods partially in court, showing that similar vibrations were set up by the blood of parent and child and that, when specimens of the blood of each in the Vittori case were tested the vibrations were in unison. His opinion was accepted in the matter.

But in none of the pathological laboratories in St. Louis is his view taken of the case. Moreover, Dr. Downey L. Harris, a well-known authority on such matters, referred to the fact that the matter had been brought up before the medical profession and that a general conclusion had been reached that such tests had not been proven as yet.

"In a recent number of the Journal of the American Medical Association," he said, "an editorial was published after many inquiries had been made by the medical profession. This editorial represented the views of a majority of the profession. And it refused to accept such tests, as made at present, as final."

In one or two cases in the South, where litigation has arisen over parentage, the blood test has been invoked, and, so far as is known, no definite proof of negro blood in a supposedly white person has ever been found by this method. Yet the test has been passed upon, in a general sort of way, with the other evidence.

I just would not give this baby up. This meant that we should have to adopt him and the allowance from the Children's Board would cease. You should have heard the baby (he was only 4 years old then) pleading his own case to the Judge. 'I live with my uncle, and he's a good uncle, and I want to stay with him,' he said. 'Your uncle? How's this? I thought this child was a dependent. Who is your uncle?' asked the Judge. 'Sure, you know my uncle. Everybody knows 'my uncle,' the baby insisted. And with that he got down from the Judge's desk and gave such a good imitation of the traffic officer that the Judge did admit he knew his uncle. Of his own accord, the baby has begun calling himself Alfred Todd Schneider, and calling me mother, though the others call me Aunt Lou, and he remembers his father, so he calls my husband Uncle Joe.

"Mr. Schneider is never any more willing to give one of them up than I am," she went on. "He enjoys them. I always tell him he is just my oldest child. The other afternoon I was detained late at the dentist's. I came home and found a note on the door. 'We have all left home.' I found the flat empty and a note on the table: 'This is no kind of a hangout. We have all left.' Everything was clean as a pin in the kitchen, but there were plenty of indications that all the food I had prepared before I left had been eaten. So I knew it was some joke. Later in the evening I heard them coming. I turned out the lights and hid. Then you should have heard them wondering what had become of me, before I showed myself. They had all had their supper, cleaned up the kitchen and hubby had taken them to a show.

"How do I manage on the $75 the board pays?" she repeated my question. "Only by hard work and keeping to a strict working schedule. I do all the sewing for the girls and make the boys' shirts and caps. I do all the cooking and all the washing and ironing. I try to make the $75 go as far as possible toward providing for all the children, but, of course, I must draw a good share from my husband as well. No, he doesn't get anything extra for traffic work," she replied to this inquiry. "Indeed, the extra wear and tear on his clothes in all kinds of weather rather reduces his surplus, though I try to keep his clothes in repair. When the inspector demands that he get a new overcoat, which costs $90, or a new dress coat, which costs $75, or a new pair of trousers, which cost $18, I sometimes call them up and argue with them and convince them that with some new binding here or some darning there I can make them presentable a while longer.

"It is only when I fail to keep to my schedule and get behind with my work that I have any trouble with my system of management," she continued. "I went away on a visit for two weeks and left my mother in charge of the house. Before I left I cooked a ham and lots of other things and washed everything in the house. When I got back there was a two weeks' washing awaiting me. I started in one morning at 6 o'clock and washed straight through till 11 that night, only stopping to cook the meals. Next morning I didn't get as early a start as I should have with the ironing, but I kept on until suppertime. After supper I thought I would iron along until bedtime. Well, as the pile grew smaller I was tempted to keep on and on, until I had finished. Just as I'd finished the last piece I heard what I knew was the morning paper thrown at the front door. It was 4 o'clock. I knew what my husband would say when I heard his alarm clock a few minutes later. He always gets up about 4. So I told him I had got up early to read the paper. He was suspicious and presently made me confess that I hadn't been to bed at all. 'Woman! Woman!! Woman!!!' That was all he could think of to say."

Proudly she exhibited photographs of her charges, many of them snapshots taken on outings at the home of Mr. Schneider's father in Webster Groves, in the Meramec hills and at a farm belonging to Mrs. Schneider's uncle. The flat is remarkable for orderliness, though not lacking in all the knick-knacks of draperies, pictures, ornaments, dear to the feminine heart. There were several of those "folding" pieces of furniture, and yet, where so many occupants were stowed away at night remained a mystery, until the sleeping porch was displayed. At the rear of the house, extending all the way across, a roomy screened and curtained porch sheltered three beds. "The boys sleep here," explained Mrs. Schneider, "and they consider it in the nature of a punishment when, because of illness, or for any other reason, they have to sleep indoors.

"Trouble in training them? Strange to say, the most trouble I ever have had has been with the twins," she said; "keeping them from fighting. Many a night, after pleading and crying over them, I have had to go out and lie between them, outside the covers, to make them stop fighting. But they are getting to be big boys now and get along much better together.

"I always say I can manage my children, as long as they tell me the truth. I insist that they tell me no stories. As long as a child tells you the truth you can reason with him and help him correct his faults. If he does not tell you the truth, you are almost powerless."

The noon bells had rung and a troop of children came noisily up the stairs. Little girls in Red Riding Hood capes and boys in neat knickerbockers and clean shirts or middies. The "baby," 6 years old, true to his foster mother's description of his character, pushed the others out of the way and climbed forthwith into her lap to give her a vigorous hug.

There would not be much time to talk—but the foster mother's placid manner did not betoken any fuss or hurry.

"We never had any children of our own," said Mrs. Schneider, "but in all we have taken 13 children into our home. Our oldest child, who came to us when she was 9, grew up, was married from our house and two years ago, at the age of 22, she died." A shadow of sorrow crossed her face. "Two of our boys are now traveling salesmen, making good money. They still come home to us for holidays.

"Our 18-year-old boy has just recently enlisted in the Marines. Our 16-year-old is in the second year of high school and is making $8 a week as a messenger after school. So, soon we will have left at home only nine children. And," she added gravely, a little shyly, as if confessing a fault, "I should like to have an even dozen."

"But why? And where? And how?" The interviewer's questions crowded over one another, after she had recounted the names and ages of four girls, 12; two, 10, and one, 8 years of age, and the six boys, one, 18; one, 16, three, 12, and one, 6.

"Why do I take them?" she responded. "I suppose people do think I am weak in the upper story, but there has been some good and unavoidable reason why I should take each of them. When you have adopted one child, people seem to assume you will take another, and they bring you homeless children whom you just cannot turn away.

"Five of our children now are wards of the Board of Children's Guardians, who board them with me for $15 a month, each. The allowance has just recently been raised to $15. It was formerly $10. Then $12. Each child the board expects to leave here only until somebody can be found to adopt it. But time goes on and the board finds homes for other children and seems satisfied to leave these with me. I never would willingly give one up unless I was convinced the new parents would be perfectly satisfied with the child—for it does a child no good to be shifted about. He soon gets to thinking nobody cares for him. I never would willingly see any child sent to an institution. There they are raised by the clock and come out as if they had been trained in a penitentiary. A good offer was made for my baby, my 6-year-old, Alfred, who came from the Children's Guardians. Now, he is a very strong-willed child, full of pep and lovable, but he needs a firm hand. I felt certain he would not prove satisfactory, just at first, in a new environment, and I shouldn't want him back after my training had been undone. And he just must not be cast adrift. He has a most pathetic history. Two of his brothers and three sisters died in one week of diphtheria. Then his mother died. The father went on living alone with this one remaining child, when he was taken to the hospital with measles. Before he had recovered from that he was seized with scarlet fever. The father was already crazed with grief and this was the last straw. They took him to an insane asylum, where he still is.

"I talked it over with my husband, and I decided that

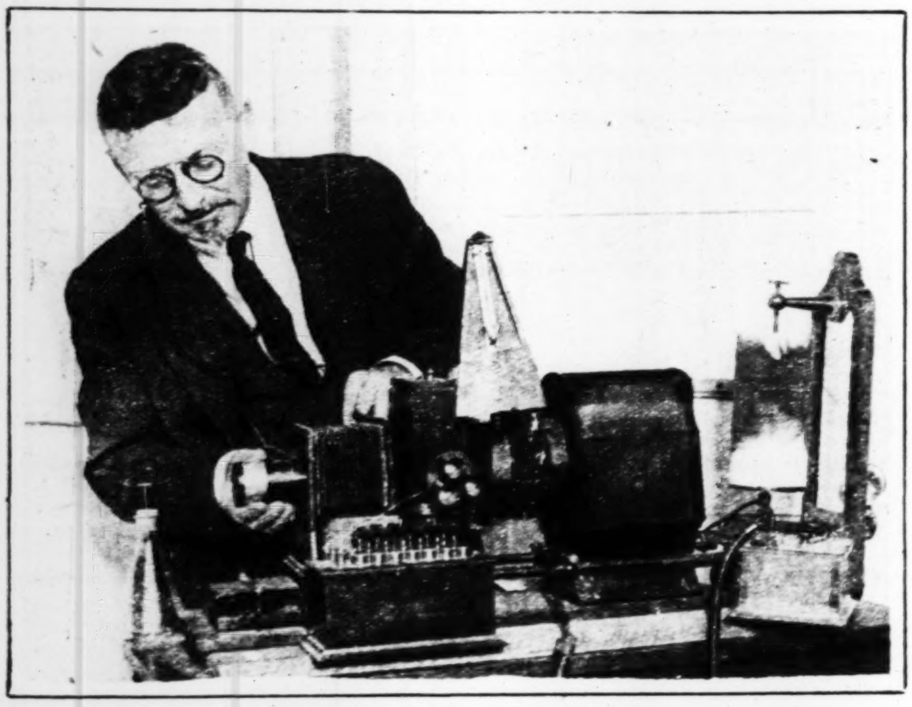
Can the Blood Test, Accepted by Courts, Really Decide Matter of Parentage?

Scientists give a large majority in saying that it cannot and local students of the matter refuse to take as final the decision in the Vittori case at San Francisco, where a test was made such as is now suggested in the Stillman affair



Dr. Albert Abrams of Stanford University and the machine by means of which he makes blood tests through electrical vibrations. His findings in the Vittori case of disputed parentage were accepted by a San Francisco court.

CAN the parentage or race of a human being be determined by a blood test?

In at least one case a scientist and the courts have held that it can. In a vague sort of way the general public seems to believe such a thing entirely practicable. But according to what seems the preponderance of scientific opinion in this country, it cannot.

Since the Stillman divorce case has been occupying so much attention, hints have been dropped that the blood test might be attempted to ascertain the true parentage of little Guy, the presumed youngest son of James A. Stillman, the banker, whom the financier disavows.

The confidence of the general public in the ability of science to do almost anything nowadays is revealed by the matter-of-fact way in which this suggestion of obtaining evidence is accepted. But however flattering this confidence may be to the profession, scientists turn the cold shoulder of disbelief to any such "proofs." A curt statement, not of incredulity, but of absolute denial of the reliability of such a test, is the reply of the medical profession.

St. Louis pathologists and bacteriologists who have been asked concerning the matter are practically a unit in stating that no definite proof has ever been advanced of a blood test being final. In spite of the fact that the courts have accepted evidence of the sort, they hold that science has not yet accepted it.

One scientist who not only upholds the reliability of such tests, but who has invented an apparatus for the purpose of making them, is Dr. Albert Abrams, professor of pathology at Stanford University. In the Superior Court of San Francisco, on Feb. 17 last, his testimony was received as final by Judge Graham in the Vittori case and the parentage and support of little Virginia Vittori was charged to Paul Vittori, who had declined to recognize the child as his own.

Moreover, in a case in Chicago, a woman who sought to show that she had no negro blood in her veins applied to the courts for recognition of such a test. And evidence obtained by this means has been advanced by attorneys in two or three other cases where color was at stake.

Regardless of the fact that Judge Graham, in handing down his decision in the Vittori case from the bench, expressed the belief that scientific endeavors along the line of blood analysis had been given great impetus, scientists, as a whole, are still skeptical.

"Nothing definite has ever been handled on the point by scientific literature," said Dr. Charles W. Schery, City Bacteriologist, when asked concerning the point, "and while we can readily decide between human blood and the blood of animals, by a biological test, that is about as far as we can go positively. So far, the test of the different elements in the blood would not prove conclusively anything about parentage. The test showing whether a person is of black or white descent is, to my mind, extremely doubtful. As for the electrical test, which figured in the Vittori case, I have heard of no definite proof of its results."

The electric test, to which he refers and which was developed by Dr. Abrams, is made by a machine which that scientist has devised and the test comes through what he calls electronic vibration. His method has never been fully described here and is not known to local scientists. But photos of his device show that he uses a metronome, similar to that which is utilized in music, and it is supposed that he sends electronic vibrations through the blood to be tested, which serves as a sort of connecting link. Blood, reduced to a highly fluid state, would furnish a conductor for the electric current, it is pointed out, and it is presumed that the vibrations of the current stir up pulsations in the metronome. Dr. Abrams explained his methods partially in court, showing that similar vibrations were set up by the blood of parent and child and that, when specimens of the blood of each in the Vittori case were tested the vibrations were in unison. His opinion was accepted in the matter.

But in none of the pathological laboratories in St. Louis is his view taken of the case. Moreover, Dr. Downey L. Harris, a well-known authority on such matters, referred to the fact that the matter had been brought up before the medical profession and that a general conclusion had been reached that such tests had not been proven as yet.

"In a recent number of the Journal of the American Medical Association," he said, "an editorial was published after many inquiries had been made by the medical profession. This editorial represented the views of a majority of the profession. And it refused to accept such tests, as made at present, as final."

In one or two cases in the South, where litigation has arisen over parentage, the blood test has been invoked, and, so far as is known, no definite proof of negro blood in a supposedly white person has ever been found by this method. Yet the test has been passed upon, in a general sort of way, with the other evidence.

I just would not give this baby up. This meant that we should have to adopt him and the allowance from the Children's Board would cease. You should have heard the baby (he was only 4 years old then) pleading his own case to the Judge. 'I live with my uncle, and he's a good uncle, and I want to stay with him,' he said. 'Your uncle? How's this? I thought this child was a dependent. Who is your uncle?' asked the Judge. 'Sure, you know my uncle. Everybody knows my uncle,' the baby insisted. And with that he got down from the Judge's desk and gave such a good imitation of the traffic officer that the Judge did admit he knew his uncle. Of his own accord, the baby has begun calling himself Alfred Todd Schneider, and calling me mother, though the others call me Aunt Lou, and he remembers his father, so he calls my husband Uncle Joe.

"Mr. Schneider is never any more willing to give one of them up than I am," she went on. "He enjoys them. I always tell him he is just my oldest child. The other afternoon I was detained late at the dentist's. I came home and found a note on the door. 'We have all left home.' I found the flat empty and a note on the table: 'This is no kind of a hangout. We have all left.' Everything was clean as a pin in the kitchen, but there were plenty of indications that all the food I had prepared before I left had been eaten. So I knew it was some joke. Later in the evening I heard them coming. I turned out the lights and hid. Then you should have heard them wondering what had become of me, before I showed myself. They had all had their supper, cleaned up the kitchen and hubby had taken them to a show.

"How do I manage on the $75 the board pays?" she repeated my question. "Only by hard work and keeping to a strict working schedule. I do all the sewing for the girls and make the boys' shirts and caps. I do all the cooking and all the washing and ironing. I try to make the $75 go as far as possible toward providing for all the children, but, of course, I must draw a good share from my husband as well. No, he doesn't get anything extra for traffic work," she replied to this inquiry. "Indeed, the extra wear and tear on his clothes in all kinds of weather rather reduces his surplus, though I try to keep his clothes in repair. When the inspector demands that he get a new overcoat, which costs $90, or a new dress coat, which costs $75, or a new pair of trousers, which cost $18, I sometimes call them up and argue with them and convince them that with some new binding here or some darning there I can make them presentable a while longer.

"It is only when I fail to keep to my schedule and get behind with my work that I have any trouble with my system of management," she continued. "I went away on a visit for two weeks and left my mother in charge of the house. Before I left I cooked a ham and lots of other things and washed everything in the house. When I got back there was a two weeks' washing awaiting me. I started in one morning at 6 o'clock and washed straight through till 11 that night, only stopping to cook the meals. Next morning I didn't get as early a start as I should have with the ironing, but I kept on until suppertime. After supper I thought I would iron along until bedtime. Well, as the pile grew smaller I was tempted to keep on and on, until I had finished. Just as I'd finished the last piece I heard what I knew was the morning paper thrown at the front door. It was 4 o'clock. I knew what my husband would say when I heard his alarm clock a few minutes later. He always gets up about 4. So I told him I had got up early to read the paper. He was suspicious and presently made me confess that I hadn't been to bed at all. 'Woman! Woman!! Woman!!!' That was all he could think of to say."

Proudly she exhibited photographs of her charges, many of them snapshots taken on outings at the home of Mr. Schneider's father in Webster Groves, in the Meramec hills and at a farm belonging to Mrs. Schneider's uncle. The flat is remarkable for orderliness, though not lacking in all the knick-knacks of draperies, pictures, ornaments, dear to the feminine heart. There were several of those "folding" pieces of furniture, and yet, where so many occupants were stowed away at night remained a mystery, until the sleeping porch was displayed. At the rear of the house, extending all the way across, a roomy screened and curtained porch sheltered three beds. "The boys sleep here," explained Mrs. Schneider, "and they consider it in the nature of a punishment when, because of illness, or for any other reason, they have to sleep indoors.

"Trouble in training them? Strange to say, the most trouble I ever have had has been with the twins," she said; "keeping them from fighting. Many a night, after pleading and crying over them, I have had to go out and lie between them, outside the covers, to make them stop fighting. But they are getting to be big boys now and get along much better together.

"I always say I can manage my children, as long as they tell me the truth. I insist that they tell me no stories. As long as a child tells you the truth you can reason with him and help him correct his faults. If he does not tell you the truth, you are almost powerless."

The noon bells had rung and a troop of children came noisily up the stairs. Little girls in Red Riding Hood capes and boys in neat knickerbockers and clean shirts or middies. The "baby," 6 years old, true to his foster mother's description of his character, pushed the others out of the way and climbed forthwith into her lap to give her a vigorous hug.

BRICKS AND BEANS

By JOHNSTON McCULLEY

PETER SMITH worked eight hours a day, six days a week, for 25 cents an hour, and on the wages thus acquired he maintained himself, Mrs. Peter Smith and three little Smiths, two of whom were old enough already to kick out shoes and wear out stockings and go to school. He lived with his brood in a two-room shack that fronted on an alley behind a factory, and, from the front door one had a view of old tin cans and broken bottles.

He was vitally interested in bricks and beans.

John Henry Benburker worked an average of two hours a day, six days a week—except when there was a board meeting and his hours of toil were lengthened —and enjoyed an income of about half a million a year for the two hours a day. For the extra labor of board meetings he was paid overtime with nice, new gold pieces. On this income he maintained himself, paid alimony to a lady sojourning in Italy, and kept the wolf from the door of his son, Lawrence Benburker, a fastidious young gentleman who could tell the vintage every time after the first sip, granted that it was early enough in the day. John Henry Benburker lived in a marble mansion fronting on a broad boulevard, and a special watchman kept undesirables away.

And John Henry Benburker was vitally interested in bricks and beans.

It stands to reason that two gentlemen such as Peter Smith and John Henry Benburker, as far apart as the poles, socially and financially, yet having a certain interest in common, should develop a situation. They did not disappoint.

* * * * * * * * *

On this certain Saturday it was an hour after nightfall and a fine drizzle was falling as Peter Smith, his arms carrying a burden of bundles, hurried down the alley toward his home, stumbling over bottles as he walked, and often kicking tin cans out of his path.

Twenty yards from the shack there descended upon him from out the darkness a boy of 8 and a girl of 6—his son and daughter. They always met him in this manner when he returned from work, and they always knew when he was approaching, for Peter Smith was a man who whistled when the day's labor was done.

Since his arms were full of bundles and he could not pick them up—an occurrence of each and every Saturday night—they contented themselves by clinging to the tail of his coat and shrieking their glee. This daily homecoming of their male parent was an event with young Peter Smith and little Miss Mary Smith. They never saw him in the morning, for Peter Smith was up and away before they were awake, having made it a practice to walk the five miles to the brickyard where he worked and thus save 30 cents a week carfare.

It would have been more pleasant, of course, to have lived nearer the scene of his daily toil, but months of thought and mathematical computations had convinced Peter Smith that the difference in rent, added to the cost of moving, would outweigh the saving of car fares and the cost of shoe leather expended. It was his joyous belief, born of necessity, that a walk of five miles every morning, before beginning a day's hard work, kept a man in excellent physical condition.

John Henry Benburker always was speaking of wishing to remedy his physical condition, but he never attempted following the prescription of Peter Smith. Benburker pranced around the golf links three afternoons weekly—save on those days when he felt fatigued and stopped at the ninth hole to send his caddie back for his car.

"Tanny?" demanded little Miss Mary Smith this Saturday evening, as she tugged at her father's coattail.

"You bet!" Peter Smith replied heartily.

"Red tanny?" she persisted.

"Red tanny and yellow tanny," Peter replied.

"Two sticks?" demanded his son and heir.

"You bet! Two big sticks of tanny, but you must let baby sister say whether she wants the red one or yellow one."

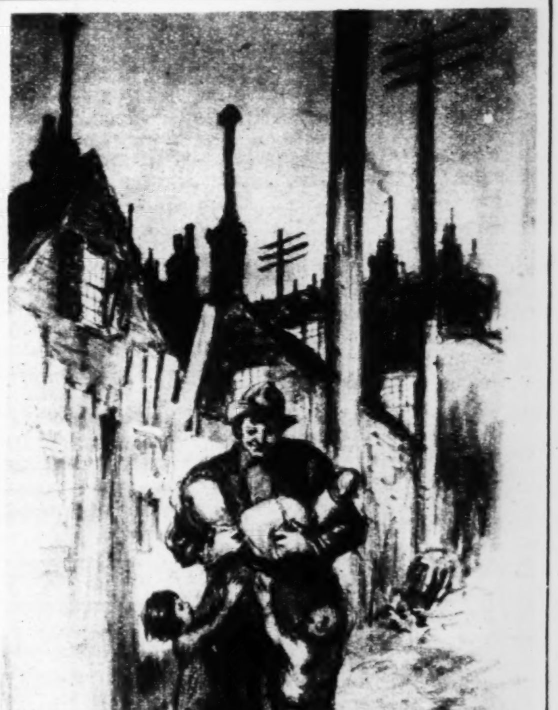
"Red!" the baby announced.

"Good enough! You'll have to wait until we get into the house."

"Got meat?" the boy demanded.

"You bet we have, son—meat for Sunday. And an egg apiece for breakfast—what do you think of that? An egg for mamma and an egg for sister, and an egg for you and an egg for me. I bought four—what do you think of that?"

"Baby?" suggested his young daughter.



Twenty yards from the shack there descended upon him out of the darkness a boy of 8 and a girl of 6.

"Babies don't eat eggs," said Peter Smith, and under his breath he added: "Thank heaven!"

"Go ocean?" his son demanded.

Peter Smith did not answer, for two reasons; one of which was that they had reached the front door of the shack, and the other of which was that a man always likes to defer the telling of bad news. Mrs. Peter met them at the door, her face the abiding place of smiles, for Mrs. Peter loved her husband and clung to him—something John Henry Benburker's spouse had not done.

Mrs. Peter relieved him of his bundles, putting them on a shelf in one corner of the kitchen; and while Peter removed the grime of labor from face and hands, she busied herself with the preparation of the evening meal. The baby cooed from a cot in a corner; the other two children pranced around the table and watched the food being put in place.

Ten minutes later the Smith family was busy eating. It was not to be expected, of course, that they would fare sumptuously on Saturday night. It was thoroughly understood that Saturday night's meal was composed of scraps and leavings of the week, and that was absolutely all right, since the day following always was a feast day, when there was meat. Leavings and scraps can be made into a delicious thick soup when there is an economical Mrs. Peter Smith to preside over the stove.

Supper being over, Peter Smith filled and lighted his pipe and puffed in contentment while Mrs. Peter did the dishes. The aroma that drifted from Peter's pipe might not have pleased an expert tobacco tester, but the stuff with which the pipe was filled made smoke, and the bag it had come in bore a tobacco revenue stamp, so it must have been all right.

The baby was asleep now, and young Peter and young Mary were silent in the enjoyment of an inch of stick candy each. The grocer at the corner always gave Peter Smith two sticks of candy on Saturday night, when Peter purchased the week's supplies, for Peter always paid cash. An inch of a stick on Saturday night, another inch after breakfast Sunday, and the remainder on Sunday afternoon—that was the program.

The dishes having been washed and put away, Mrs. Peter went into the front room and sat down across the table from her husband.

"Any news?" she asked.

She smiled when she voiced the question, but a close observer would have noticed that the smile was wistful.

"No news," Peter replied.

This was a part of the regular program, too. No news meant that Peter still retained his job, since there had been no cut-down on men at the brickyard; news would have meant disaster.

"How is everything at the grocery?" Mrs. Peter asked.

Peter puffed slowly at his pipe before he replied.

"Beans," he said, finally, "are doing the skyrocket act. Beans now are 13 cents a pound. And I can remember when my old mother used to buy them six pounds for a quarter, and better beans at that. Meat or beans—we've got to have one or the other. I got some meat for tomorrow—you saw what it was. Pretty poor stuff and not much juice in it, but maybe you can stew something along with it and make it do. If beans only would get cheaper"——

"Well, why don't they?" Mrs. Peter asked.

"I don't know. Maybe they're scarce—crop failed or something like that. Or else the rust is handling 'em. You never can tell. 'Taint the grocer's fault—he has to stand a raise in price the same as we do—don't make as much profit as he used to, he says—and I believe him."

"It's pretty hard to get along," Mrs. Peter observed.

"Well, we're better off than a lot of others at that. I'm strong and can work, and the kids ain't sick, and you're all right. We got a place to live, and the kids go to school, and we eat. Of course, we could do with a lot more—but we're getting along all right.

"Things have got to get better for you, some time," Mrs. Peter said.

"Sure they will!"

"I don't suppose—that is"—— Mrs. Peter stammered and stopped. The children ceased eating candy and looked up in expectation. Peter put his cold pipe down on the table and lowered his eyes and played with his belt.

"I'm—afraid not—not tomorrow," he said.

Mrs. Peter sighed.

"It's too bad!" she said. "But that'll come later, I suppose."

"Sure! The summer's young yet!" said Peter.

His son plucked him by the sleeve.

"No go ocean?" he asked.

"Not tomorrow, sonny. Now don't cry about it! We'll get there some Sunday this summer, and then, sonny, we'll all have a great time. Mamma will have a lunch put up, and we can all wade, and maybe I'll buy you some peanuts and some stick candy—brown and white and yellow and red stick candy. But not tomorrow, sonny. Papa hasn't got the money to spare tomorrow."

His son turned away and remained silent for some five minutes; his young daughter, not exactly understanding, but feeling sure there was some disappointment afoot, whimpered that she was sleepy. Mrs. Peter put the children to bed and then returned to her husband.

"I do so hope we can—some Sunday this summer," she said.

"We'll do it, maw—don't worry!"

"It'll do the children so much good—just one day at the seaside. But it costs"——

They knew what it cost. There was a dollar for fares in the first place, and certainly at least 20 cents for amusement. The summer before they had taken their son to the beach for a day—their daughter at that time had been too weak to go because of a slight illness. And their son never had forgotten it, and he wanted to go again.

And this summer they could take the daughter, too, and the baby. They felt sure that a day at the beach would do the baby a world of good.

You see, there are ways and ways for a family to spend a day at the beach. A family may go in a motor car and sit on the veranda of a fashionable hotel, and eat an expensive dinner, and return home in the cool of a moonlight night in the motor car. Or a family may go in a crowded train and spend the day sitting near the edge of the water in the hot sun, wading a bit now and then, eating a luncheon carried from home that is attacked by ants and sand fleas as soon as it is opened, and returning tired but happy in another jammed train.

"Not married, are you?" inquired John Henry in some alarm.

The Smiths had gone the latter way, making the outward trip on the very first train and returning by the very last. Their son had slept all the way in. But they had remembered the day's trip with keen enjoyment.

Why, think of it! Just to have a sight of the ocean and see the waves roll in, and watch the breakers dash, and glimpse well-dressed gods and goddesses spending money and riding in automobiles, and read the flaring banners before the side-shows and guess as to what one would see if one were rich and could enter!

That was a day. But it cost $1.20 at least.

"The children have set their little hearts on it," said Mrs. Peter. "And it would do them so much good! We surely must manage to do it, Peter! A dollar seems such a little bit of money, and yet"——

"Now, don't get pessimistic, maw. A dollar's a dollar! We'll manage it, all right. Maybe I can get an evening's extra work somewhere—or they might raise our wages. If only beans wasn't so blamed high"——

* * * * * *

It was 2 o'clock in the afternoon of Monday, and John Henry Benburker, just returned from luncheon, was wondering whether to drive out to the country club, when his son and heir was ushered in.

"'Lo, dad!" said the son and heir.

"Hello, Lawrence! What's on your mind—more money? Got a new chorus girl, or is it a race-track tip?"

"Well, it's a shocker, dad!" The son and heir sat down beside his father, tossed his hat on a table near by, and deftly extracted a monogrammed cigarette from a gold case embellished with diamonds. "It's a thriller—a regular stem-winder of a jolt!"

"Not married, are you?" inquired John Henry in some alarm. He had a momentary vision of having to buy off some adventuress. He wouldn't mind the purchase price in that event, but he was afraid of notoriety.

He wasn't the stage-and-novel variety of rich parent. He never admonished his son for being a spendthrift. He had made up his mind years ago to give the boy everything that he wanted, since the boy was the only relative he had in the world. He had formed a trust fund already for the boy, and if the boy killed himself by high living before his father died the fund would go to a university.

That boy of John Henry Benburker's could do as he pleased and have as much money as he liked to do it with!

"No, I am not married," the son and heir replied, grinning, "but I am going to be—I think."

"Not getting soft on one of those chorus girls, are you?"

"You're way off, dad. I'm thinking of a decent girl."

"Um! Been attending a religious revival, or something like that? This sure is a jolt!"

"That's only jolt the first, dad. Here's jolt the second—you know the girl and approve of her, and she's said she likes me better than any of the crowd, and I've cut out half a dozen chorus girls for her, and we're ready to tie up in about four or five months, as soon as she can have her dressmakers rush her some clothes."

"Four or five mo—— Rush her clothes, you said? She sure must be crazy to marry you! What is all this—a joke? What's the name of the young lady?"

"Irene."

"Not—not Irene Grailey?"

"Correct, dad."

"My boy! My boy! The daughter of my old friend! The greatest little girl in town? Why, if you two marry you'll combine the two biggest fortunes in this end of the country! Great! Hah—I guess there is real stuff in the Benburkers. They've been trying to tell me you're going to hades with your wine and your chorus girls, and that you'd not be able to pull up when you'd scattered your wild oats. How I'll gloat at 'em over this! Pulled up and reformed and going to marry the greatest little girl in town! This sure is a shocker! Shake hands, my son! I'll give a million to your first baby!"

"I'd rather have something right now, dad."

"Well, what is it? I'm in a mood to hand you almost anything this afternoon."

"It isn't just a roll of bills, dad. I—I want to buy something, and if I do I'll have to pay cash down—and it is some little sum. I never asked you for so much all in one lump."

"What do you want to buy?"

"A yacht—a little cruiser, dad. Bennie Sterner has one, and he's got to let go of it. Only had it in commission a couple of months—good as new. Got caught in the market and has to sell."

"I know something about that getting caught in the market," observed Benburker, chuckling.

"He paid seventy-five thousand for her, dad. I can get her for fifty thousand cash down. Deal must be closed by noon tomorrow. I'll fit her up a little better and name her the Irene. See? Wouldn't that be great? I could take Irene and her mother and a couple of chaperons and some of the other fellows and girls on a cruise before the wedding—and we could take our honeymoon in her, too. But it's fifty thousand cash down, dad. I don't believe I ever asked you for that much in one lump before."

"I believe not. And you never had such a good excuse for asking it, son. Well—you can have your yacht. Tell Bennie to drift in here tomorrow morning at 11 and we'll close the deal."

"Thanks, dad. Even if you have got a few millions, that's quite a bit to ask you to pay right off like that."

"Oh, I'm not going to pay for it!"

"Wh-what?" the son and heir gasped.

"Give me your close attention, son, and I'll teach you a lesson in finance. You want a yacht and it costs $50,000. You get the yacht, and it doesn't cost the Benburker family a cent."

"But"——

"Just a little lesson, son. Where does your fond father get his money?"

"Stocks, bonds"——

"In the first place, son, I mean. Where do I get the money with which I purchase stocks and bonds? Where is the foundation? No wise man puts a foundation on stocks and bonds. The foundation of a fortune can be built safely of one class of things—commodities used by the great mass of people every day. Now—where do I get my money?"

"Bricks and beans!"

"Correct, son—go to the head of the class. I get my money from bricks and beans. My companies control the bean market, and my companies control the brick market in this neck of the woods. They have to come to us when they build buildings or fill their stomachs. You want $50,000, eh? One moment."

Still chuckling, John Henry Benburker turned to his desk and figured for a moment with a gold pencil on an ivory tablet.

"Here we are, son," he said. "I have 5000 men working in my brickyards. For 10 weeks I'll cut every man's wages 1 cent an hour, or eight cents a day—that's all. That's only 48 cents a week each. They'll never miss it—and the rèport will be spread that the retrenchment is for only a few weeks because of a poor market—rather keep all the men at a few cents less than fire a third of them and let the others have their regular wage. See? Very simple. That'll be $4.80 per man for the 10 weeks. Five thousand men—that'll be $24,000 even. There's half your yacht."

"Great guns!" the son and heir exclaimed.

"Simple little lesson. What's 48 cents a week? Nothing! They'll never miss it. Now for the rest of your yacht. I'll just pass the word that beans are to be raised 1 cent a pound until 3,000,000 pounds have been sold. What's a cent a pound? Nothing! When that amount has been sold, we'll cut cut back to the old price—maybe. We'll explain that there's a shortage this year. Nothing easier! Three million pounds at a cent a pound—$30,000.

"Add that to the twenty-four thousand from the brickyards. There you have $54,000, my beloved son—your yacht and four thousand over for any little improvements on her you may desire to make. There you are! We buy the yacht, but we don't have to dig in our own bank roll for her. And the joke is that nobody is hurt. What's 48 cents a week to a man of ours? And what's a stingy cent a pound on beans?"

"Great guns!" said the son and heir again.

* * * * * *

This Saturday night there was no drizzle, and the air was balmy, and the grocer had not forgotten to give Peter Smith two sticks of candy for his children, yet Peter Smith had to make an extra effort to whistle when he reached the mouth of the alley.

As on every evening, so this evening, boy and girl ran giggling to meet him and cling to his coat-tails.

"Tanny again!" Peter said, speaking quickly, so that his offspring could not ask questions. "A yellow stick for son and a red stick for sister. And some nice corn meal for mamma to make batter cakes out of! Won't that be dandy for breakfast in the morning?"

He had been walking rapidly, and now they were at the front door of the shack, and Mrs. Peter saluted her husband with a kiss and began taking the bundles from his arms. Again she prepared the supper while Peter hurried into the corner of the kitchen and began washing his face and hands.

Often during the meal Mrs. Peter glanced across the table at Peter, and she knew that something had gone wrong, and fear clutched at her heart, but she kept up a conversation with the children until supper was ended.

Once more Peter lighted his pipe and gave the children their candy; and presently Mrs. Peter sat across the table from him.

"Any news?" she asked.

"Yes," said Peter in a hoarse voice.

"Peter! You're—you're not"——

"No, I'm not fired," said Peter. "But they have cut wages a cent an hour for a few weeks—doing that to keep on all the men during the slack season, they say. Do you know what that means, Mary? It means 48 cents a week, and that's mighty close to half a dollar. And a half-dollar buys us beans for a week. And beans"——

"What is it, Peter?"

"Why, beans have gone up again, Mary. They're 14 cents a pound now, and may go higher, so the grocer says. Shortage of the crop, I guess."

"Then we can't"——

"Not—not tomorrow, Mary," Peter Smith said, and he got up and paced to the door and back, forgetting to puff at his pipe. "I'm—I'm awfully sorry."

"I know, Peter. It isn't your fault."

"And the summer is young yet," he said. "Maybe I can get something to do a couple of evenings. It'd take only a little more than a dollar, but a dollar—gosh! Wages down and beans up! I suppose it wouldn't make much difference to some folks"——

"Now, Peter! Don't you begin worrying! Everything's all right. We're lots better off than some."

The Saturday night before he had begged her not to be pessimistic, and had explained things in this same way. Now that he was downhearted for the moment, it was the wife's duty to be the cheering one. Not such a bad philosophy, that.

"Go ocean?" their small son asked.

Peter turned his face away. Mrs. Peter answered the boy's question by changing the subject, telling the children stories until they were ready for bed.

Peter's good spirits had returned by Monday morning, and he whistled as he walked his five miles to work. He was glad that a kind employer had cut wages rather than lay off a third of the men—he might have been included in the third. What fools men were to say that employers always ground employes beneath the heels of their shoes! Of course, it was bad that beans had gone up again, but there was a reason for that, too.

Why didn't the bean growers raise more? They might have known there'd be a greater demand for beans with meat so high. It was too bad there was a shortage!

Peter Smith worked through the week as usual, and only on Saturday night as he walked home did his spirits fail again—for he knew the boy would be asking the eternal Saturday night question regarding the trip to the beach.

The children met him as usual, this time shouting with glee, and this time his attempt to keep them from asking questions availed him nothing.

"How early have we to get up?" the boy demanded.

"Goin' sea beach!" said the daughter.

Character Sketches by W. E. HILL

ONE——

Close-up of Madelyn, the heroine of "Passion's Flame," a super film based on "The Eve of St. Agnes," by Keats. Madelyn, with the sunlight behind her and her curls blowing in the wind, has been out in the orchard gathering roses and pussy willow.

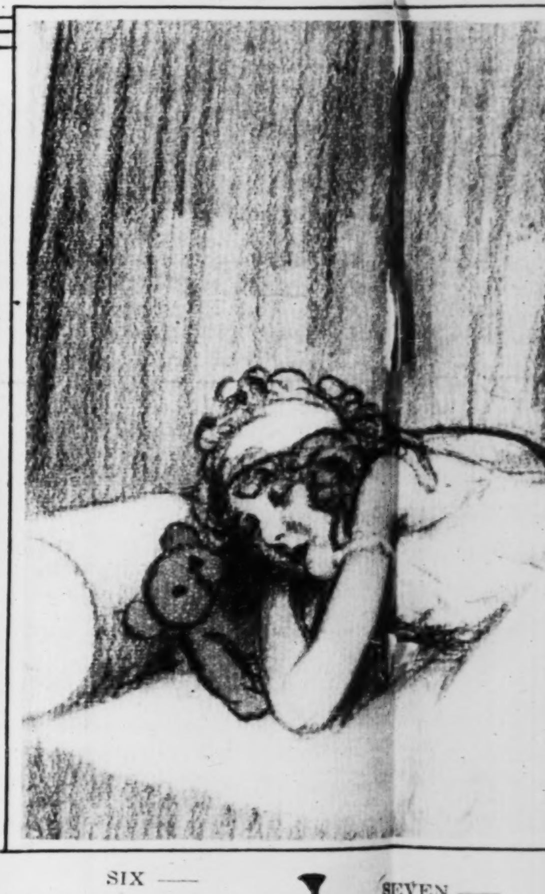
FIVE ——

No sooner said than done. Porphyro is secreted in Madelyn's chamber. Madelyn, all unconscious of the intruder, makes haste to don her nightie and hops into bed.



SIX ——

Whatever the base thoughts that may or may not have been lurking in Porphyro's brain, nothing but the noblest and purest sensations remain after one look at Madelyn asleep with one arm about her Teddy bear, the one that Uncle Lucian gave her last birthday. Madelyn is dreaming that she and Porphyro are being chased by a cow with a blue ribbon around its neck. Unfortunately this is before Mr. Freud's time.

In the mean time Mr. Frank Porphyro, Madelyn's beau, unable to keep away any longer, arrives on the scene. His chagrin upon hearing that Madelyn has retired for the night is so great that an elderly lady, who really ought to have known better, takes it upon herself to pilot him to Madelyn's chamber. If he is a good boy and behaves himself, she will hide him away where he can peek at Madelyn while she sleeps.

SEVEN ——

Porphyro just had to wake her to tell her how cute she looked. Being a heavy sleeper it took him some time to bring Madelyn to. Even then she did not realize that Porphyro was standing there. She thought at first it was Santa Claus till she stopped to recall that this was St. Agnes' Eve, and not Christmas Eve. "What's the matter—is it time to get up?" she finally asked [illegible] a dazed sort of way.

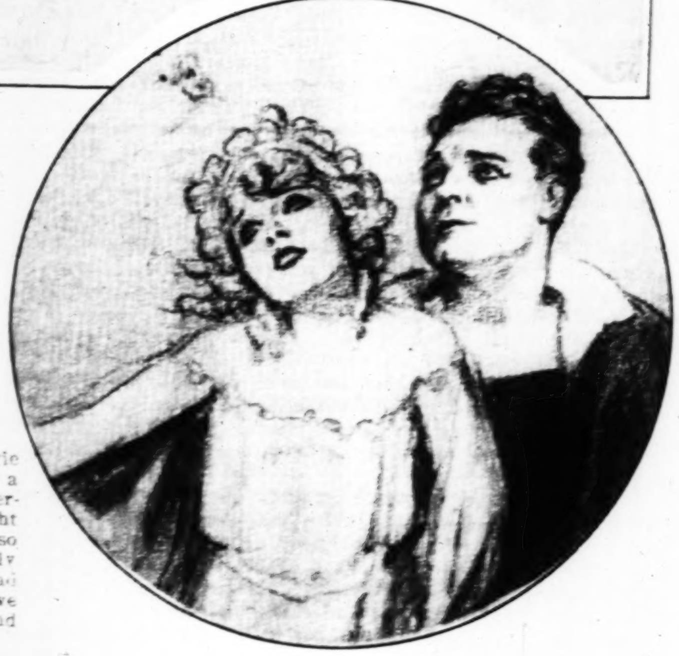
Madelyn was awfully glad to see Porphyro, and when Porphyro told her about the little home in the South he had fixed up for her—cut-back, showing the little home—she was perfectly willing to get right up and go away with him.



NINE ——

And so, to quote the movie caption, "with the dawn of a new day those two, the eternal man and his mate, sought a new nest—a nest ever so tiny, perhaps, but radiantly beautiful in that true love had entered there. And so we leave them in their new-found happiness."

OVERLOOK HOUSE

By WILL PAYNE

TO ANY casual observer that Saturday afternoon Overlook House stretched its gray bulk above the sea in wonted serenity and security. Even to an observer indoors the leisured movements of the household would have appeared to be going forward in the accustomed way—as though whatever vicissitudes might visit a world outside, within these walls, food, amusement, repose and all the incidents of creature cheer and comfort would continue to flow smoothly and amply.

To one observer, especially, nothing about the house seemed amiss. Mrs. Crane, returning from her prescribed drive with Mrs. Loughman—who had been dropped at her own house on the way back—found her home in its familiar aspect. No idea of finding it otherwise ever entered her head—any more than one naturally expects to wake up in the morning and discover that the sea has dried up over night. Spacious, secure, cushioned for her at every angle, she had come to accept it as one accepts a fact of nature.

Her husband met her in the hall—bland to her, as usual, and with little attentions and touches of affection, like helping her off with her coat himself instead of leaving it to a servant. She was always aware of that—of his strong and watchful protection over her. Sometimes she laughed over it, fondly, to herself, and sometimes even said to his picture, "My old lover!" Mostly she said it to his picture, for romantic or sentimental demonstrations of affection—such as addressing words of that import to her—seemed never to occur to him; seemed fairly to embarrass him; which also, fondly amused her.

He asked her about her drive; regretted that the wind was so boisterous. She asked him if he had finished up his business with Danforth; reminded him that he must get out of doors before dinner time. Then she went upstairs, following the prescribed regime, to have her afternoon nap—during which, by the Judge's order, everyone must keep still on the second floor. If one were to fall dead one must come downstairs to do it during mamma's afternoon naptime. Even as she slept, or dutifully tried to, he held a hand over her. Today she saw, or heard, nothing whatever to indicate a variation in the usual household order. Of course, she must be told about Lester Hilton; but she would best have her nap first, lest that prevent her from sleeping.

The grounds, as viewed from the house, wore their wonted aspect; but beyond the house's vision—namely: behind the screen of loose rock down by the coffee pot—there was a variation. Louis, the gardener, and three strange men were busy down there with a long, dark, inert object and a stretcher. And Samuel Thorp, his pale eyes bulging with excitement, was looking on.

After Mrs. Crane retired for the nap, her husband and his son and Peggy Loughman and Ted Pennell gathered in the farther end of the living room, as the Judge had directed. Judge Crane himself was looking very sober as he deliberated for a moment before speaking. He sat upright in a big armchair, both feet planted squarely on the floor; and the others sitting near, naturally waited for him to speak, because again he seemed the chief sitting in judgment.

"I think we can probably get this business all straightened out," he began, with deliberation; "but first I want to show you, as near as I can, how it stood in my own mind." He looked at Ted and Peggy, side by side on the settee as he said that, as though it was necessary for them, especially, to know how it stood in his mind.

"Edith has been telling me something," he went on. "It seems this Thursday that Katey disappeared, she went up to Stony Cove to meet her husband. What for, doesn't matter now; but she went up there to meet him in the forenoon. She didn't want to be recognized, so she borrowed Katey's hat and cloak. Seems Ted overtook her on the road with his car and brought her back here."

"That's it!" Ted exclaimed to Peggy. "It was Edith in my car—not Katey. But I couldn't tell you, because she told me not to."

"Yes," said the Judge, with some dryness. "It was Edith in the car—not Katey. But to understand how it stood in my mind you must know that I heard—later on—that Ted had Katey out somewhere in his car and brought her back here some time before noon. We heard, too, that Ted had been taking her to dances and so on—running around with the girl."

Ted was going to speak, but the Judge cut him short, saying: "That will come up later. That's what we heard, you see—Ted running around with her and fetching her back here to the house from somewhere or other some time before noon that Thursday. Well"—the Judge grinned faintly—"Benjamin never did approve of Katey. Benjamin's got stricter ideas than a Bishop and Katey wasn't much subject to discipline. Now, somewhere around noon, or not much after noon, that Thursday, Benjamin saw Katey slip into Ted's bedroom."

"I didn't know it!" Ted exclaimed.

"That will come later," the Judge reproved. "He saw her slip into your bedroom. He didn't know whether you were in there or not; and naturally he didn't like it. He'd already heard of your running around with the girl—seems it was talked about among the servants. Being a discreet kind of person, however, Benjamin kept his mouth shut. He told me afterwards that he kept watch a few minutes and Katey didn't come out, and then he had other business to attend to; it was getting on toward lunch time. He had to go downstairs."

The Judge frowned regretfully for an instant and added: "Probably Benjamin was right all along, and the girl shouldn't have been kept here. She was heedless and insubordinate—always more or less of a commotion in her wake, you know, like the churned water in the wake of a power boat. But servants aren't easy to get up here nowadays and mamma sort of liked the saucy baggage, so Katey stayed on. Probably that was a mistake. . . .

"Well, Benjamin had that incident on his mind—the girl slipping into Ted's room; he kept an eye out for her as much as he could along with his other duties; but she didn't appear. There were some clothes in Ted's dressing room that needed pressing anyway, and after a while Benjamin went up there to Ted's room.

"It was along about 3 o'clock in the afternoon that I went up to my den. I'd picked up the mail on the table in the hall and was going up there to look it over. I'd just fairly got into the room, when Benjamin came in after me—about as agitated, I reckon, as a proper butler could ever be. He told me that Katey had been killed, was dead in the room next to Ted's. Of course, that knocked me into a cocked hat; but he said it was so, and I went in there with him, and there she was, dead.

"Ted's bedroom and the one next to it—like the rooms across the hall—are in a suite, you know, with a dressing room and a bathroom between them, opening into both of them. Benjamin had gone into Ted's room, you see, to get the clothes out of the dressing room—and also, with that incident of Katey in mind, to take a little look around. He didn't see anything unusual in the bedroom, but no doubt he was looking pretty sharp, and when he went into the dressing room he noticed a good-sized spot on the rug that looked as though it might have been scrubbed not a great while before. Then he went into the bathroom and looked in the hamper where dirty towels are thrown and there he found a wet towel, twisted up. When he unfolded it he saw it was dirty, as though it had been used to scrub the rug, and although it seemed to have been rinsed, it was still bloody.

"Of course, he looked closer than ever then. He didn't find anything more in the dressing room or in Ted's room, but he remembered that in the adjoining room there's a window seat—the top lifts up, you know; it's really a long cedar box that's used to put spare bedding in. He looked in the box and lifted up some spare bedding, and there was Katey's body, with Ted's revolver beside her. That's what I saw when I went in there with Benjamin. I examined the revolver and saw that one chamber had been shot off. And Katey'd been shot through the heart. She'd been struck and choked, too—the mark was on her throat—and her hair was mussed up. There wasn't any doubt that she was dead. . . .

"As I said to Dan a while ago, what I thought of, before everything, was my wife. You all know she ain't been very well lately, even for her. I thought very likely the shock of that would kill her. Anyway, I didn't mean that she should have the shock. That's what I thought about. Well, we locked the doors and considered what to do. Of course, we couldn't leave her there. It would be only a question of a few days at most until she'd be found. It was clear enough that we'd have to get her out of the house—the sooner the better. As it happened, mamma was lying down then and everything was quiet on that floor. Benjamin and I talked it over and it seemed we might just as well get her downstairs then as ever. He went down to the basement and locked the doors of the storeroom and laundry. Then we got a clear coast and carried her to the elevator and so down into the laundry, where we laid her on some dirty clothes."

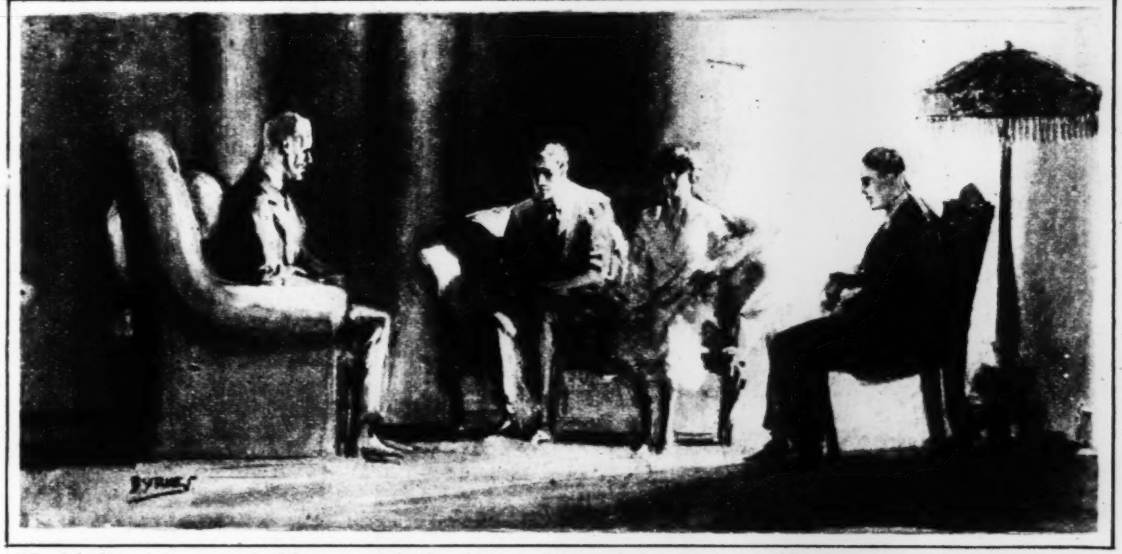
The Judge paused an instant, with a faint smile for the weakness. "We wanted to cover her up. There wasn't anything there but dirty clothes."

At that point Danforth drew a hand down his cheek. Sam Thorp had said it was Ted Pennell's coat that lay over Katey—which, perhaps, had made a huge difference.

"Then I went upstairs," the Judge continued, "and telephoned for McKeon to come over here right away. I was a good deal on tenterhooks, not knowing what might break loose at any time, and I didn't dare leave the house. So McKeon came over here—Benjamin watching for him and slipping him up to my den. I put it up to him that it was part of his job to help me get the girl buried. It seemed safe enough to me—and to him, too. He came over that night with a closed car. Fortunately, his wife knows how to drive and has good nerves, so she drove the car—which saved bringing a chauffeur into it, and the fewer people there were in it the better. He took the body home and bought a coffin next day and issued a death certificate and got the girl buried. . . .

"I'm telling you all this," said the Judge, after a moment, "so you can see how it stood in my mind." He looked over at Ted, hardily, and continued: "Probably it's only fair to say that something else was more or less in my mind, too. I'd never seen very much of Ted until the last three or four weeks here. It's true that in a way I've known him a good while—coming and going; bobbing into sight for a short time and bobbing out again, as I might say. I knew him as a youngster who was my wife's nephew and of whom she was fond, but we never had occasion to get really acquainted.

"I thought he was a likeable youngster, so far as I could see; and in a general sort of way my impression



"I think we can probably get this business all straightened out," he began with deliberation.

Presently the bandaged woman's low and earnest voice ceased. Ted, with downcast eyes, reached out for Peggy's hand in humility. "I know, Edith," he said, "and I will."

was that he was a pretty lazy, aimless sort of youngster, who hadn't anything particular on his mind except to amuse himself. Probably it's more my fault than Ted's that we hadn't got better acquainted. Especially when I knew how my wife felt about him, I ought, no doubt, to have taken more pains to get really acquainted. But as long as I was thinking of him as just a good-natured, lazy, aimless young man it didn't strike me that getting acquainted was much worth while.

"I'm not trying to make you uncomfortable, Ted, or to excuse myself; but I want you to get this thing as it stood in my mind, because I think it's important to you that you should. When this bombshell burst and the circumstantial evidence was laid before me, there wasn't anything in my mind about you that particularly resisted the first thought. If you were drifting along where the drifting was easiest, with no other idea than to stuff yourself with cookies—why it didn't seem particularly unreasonable that you'd been angling for a very pretty parlor maid. That's what such young men pretty commonly do. It didn't seem unreasonable to me that you'd had the girl out somewhere and brought her back to the house and that she'd slipped into your room to see you and that you'd got into some kind of a row and scuffle in there. Of course, I didn't pretend to know exactly what had happened, and I didn't really care to know. Some kind of a row and scuffle, it seemed to me. Benjamin told me that for some time your revolver had been lying in plain sight on top of the chest of drawers in your dressing room—where you'd happened to drop it, I suppose. Say you'd been treating Katey rough and she caught up the gun and you grabbed her hand and the gun went off. As to exactly what had happened, I didn't care particularly. I thought you'd been naturally panic stricken and hid the body in the first place you thought of and scrubbed the blood off the rug.

"But, of course, I was wondering what you were going to do. You didn't show up for dinner that Thursday night. When I saw there was no place for you at the table I asked mamma about it, casually, and she said you'd telephoned that you wouldn't be home that night. I've forgotten who it was she said you were with—some of your young men friends. I was grateful to you for having the forethought to telephone to her, and my notion was that you'd very likely skip out in the morning—on some pretext or other. If you did, I thought, my mind would be easy.

"But next forenoon you showed up again, cool as a cucumber, apparently. I watched you out of the tail of my eye more or less and I concluded that you were nervier than I had thought, and a tougher nut, too. It worried me a good deal—wondering what line you would take, for it might be a line that would spill the beans and let mamma in for it, after all. Of course, I thought you couldn't be such an idiot as to suppose the body would lie there indefinitely without being discovered. At any rate, I credited you with more nerve than I'd thought before.

"Once I almost made up my mind to talk to you; but I thought I'd wait a day. I thought very likely you wanted to wait a day and make preparations for leaving. I saw you around with Peggy and I thought you were waiting a little to square things up with her. Then I thought you had some designs on her, and that disturbed me a good deal. You see, I didn't care to have you know that I'd disposed of the body, for that would look like letting you off too easy. All around, it seemed best to wait a day, and I did."

The Judge rubbed his chin and added candidly: "There's something about that I don't understand yet. The next day, which was Saturday, you went to Benjamin and got the key to Katey's room and locked yourself in there and searched the room—as I looked at it, to see whether there was anything among her belongings to implicate you. Then you came to me, and as soon as I gave you a hint you asked me to send you away somewhere—a long way, for a good while—but still I didn't propose to let you know I had disposed of the body if I could help it. I don't understand yet why you searched Katey's room."

"I'll tell you," said Ted. "I told Peggy that Katey wasn't in my car that Thursday and Peggy said she was, for she and her mother had seen her. I couldn't deny that because I couldn't tell her it was Edith. Peggy was disgusted with me, and I was disgusted with myself——

"Judge, you say you thought I was lazy and aimless. I was all that. You see, I'd got to thinking about that in a different way than I'd ever thought of it before. I wanted to marry Peggy and I knew I was just a loafer. I'd flunked every real job that had ever been put up to me—college, and out there in California, and in New York. I hadn't cared much, you see; the jobs had just looked stupid to me, so I'd sidestepped 'em. I'd been a loafer. I knew it. And there was Peggy, awfully sore at me because she thought I was lying to her and didn't take this Katey affair with any seriousness. It was all a rotten mess, you see—all gone to pot. I just wanted to dig out somewhere and get a real job—a long way off.

"And then there was something else. A lot of people don't like Chet Beals, you know. Peggy don't like him, for one; and I don't deny that he probably does some pretty raw things. I knew he'd been a whole lot taken with Katey. In one way that was none of my business, and none of anybody's business. Everybody that's got good sense loathes a prig."

The young man was frowning there and seemed to find the going difficult. "It's true enough that if my sister was a pretty parlor maid, without any brains to speak of, I wouldn't want her to know Chet Beals. Of course, if I had a sister, she wouldn't be a parlor maid. But Peggy, you see—well, she was taking this Katey affair sort of as though Katey was her sister.

"I thought it pretty likely that Chet Beals did have Katey somewhere or other, and if Katey was sort of Peggy's sister—well, you see, that was a rotten mess, too. But how could a fellow do anything about it without looking like a fool and a prig? Of course, in a movie a fellow could put a pistol to Chet's breast and say, 'Unhand the maiden!' But in real life everybody that heard about it, from here to California, would roll over and die laughing. What could a fellow do, without looking like a fool?

"A week, maybe, before this, Chet Beals and I and a couple of other fellows had stopped down at Seaview. You know those little jimcrack shops opposite the big hotel. Chet bought a gold chain with a pendant set with diamonds and rubies and sapphires and so on. It looked like $50,000, if you didn't look very close, and it cost him $13.50. Some way I got a sort of a hunch at the time that it was for Katey. Katey'd take anything from anybody, from a banana to a railroad. . . .

"Well, along with my other troubles I was troubled about this Katey affair—from the way Peggy took it. I suppose it was a fool thing to do, but I wanted to know whether Chet Beals had her and whether I could do something about it. It kept running in my head and finally I got the key to her room from Benjamin. And sure enough, after I had looked around a bit, there was Chet's jewelry and a couple of snapshot pictures of him. I thought sure, then, he had her—and it seemed I ought to do something about it. But what could I do without looking like a fool that was mixing up in something that wasn't any of his business? They're both of age, you know. . . . Yet—well, I had been around with Chet a good deal and I defended him to Peggy. So there was just another rotten mess, you see—all a mess. I thought the thing to do was to dig out and get a real job and go to work at it and see if I couldn't make something of myself. That's just the long and short of it, Judge."

"Well," said the Judge, judicially, "that sounds reasonable to me now; but at the time I hadn't a doubt you wanted to dig out for another reason, and I meant to pack you off to Russia, where there's some investigation going on in the oil line. You agreed to go down to New Jersey and stay there until I sent you word, but I suppose when Peggy telephoned you to come and see her in New York you were excusable for breaking the parole. Like so many other things, you see, this case looks all one way from one side and all the other way from the other side."

All three perceived that the Judge seemed ill at ease and more than a little embarrassed—a slight and rather foolish smile appearing on his face as he struck his hand across his hair.

"All depends on the way you look at it," he repeated. "As I looked at it from that side I thought I was a pretty wise and capable old man. But as I see it from this side I was more or less just a damned fool." He turned to Danforth with candid deprecation, observing: "We were both blockheads. . . . What really happened—well, it's fairly silly.

"That poor little Katey, you know, was a great flirt. Louis was engaged to Lena, and then Katey flirted with him and set him crazy about her, and that made Lena wild with jealousy. Katey laughed at her and Lena was going to punch her head, but Katey ran away. Then Lena was laying for her. Edith saw her in the hall when Edith was going up to Katey's room, and then Katey told Edith that Lena was after her. Edith thought nothing of it at the time, for she had something else on her mind; but today, when she found out that Katey'd actually been killed, she remembered and went to Lena, and Lena came to me and told the truth.

Lena was laying for Katey and saw her go into Ted's bedroom. You see, Katey'd seen Ted's gun there and had some idea of getting it and bluffing Lena. She'd said something of the kind to Edith, who didn't take it seriously at the time. No doubt Katey did step in there to get the gun, but probably when she saw it she was really more afraid of carrying it than she was of Lena. Anyway, Lena says she waited a few minutes for Katey to come out, but as Katey didn't come out Lena started in there after her, knowing Ted wasn't there. She popped in and met Katey coming out. They had a spat, you know, and Katey said she'd go with Louis as much as she pleased. She also said something about a horse—referring to Lena's size. A fool maids' row, you know, both of them mad. Lena fell on her and choked her and walloped her and Katey broke away and ran into the dressing room for the gun, Lena after her. Seems Lena is some scrapper when her blood is up. Katey grabbed the gun and Lena grabbed Katey and the gun went off and Katey was dead. Lena was paralyzed then, and carried the body in the next room and hid it, and she's been scared stiff ever since. Seems she told Louis about it yesterday and was going to drown herself, but Louis persuaded her not to. And so far as Katey is concerned," the Judge concluded, "that is the whole fool story."

There followed a pause, which prolonged itself.

"I thought Hilton did it," said Ted, absently.

"Well," said the Judge, "I reckon Hilton did enough. Edith didn't tell me so, but I guess he did enough—to her."

"I know he did—but why?" said Ted.

"Hilton had got hold of this Katey business and was trying to blackmail me with it," the Judge replied. "He almost put it over, too, but I stood him off for a day. Meanwhile, Edith had been to Lena and discovered the truth. Hilton was drunk anyway—and half crazy. When Edith told him the truth and insisted that she must tell it to me in spite of him—which would knock the bottom out of his blackmail enterprise—he no doubt went plumb crazy and tried to choke her into promising to keep still. It's a good thing he's dead. . . .

"I've got another word to say to you, Ted. I misjudged you and did you wrong. But I'm an old codger and my mistakes don't matter much now. You're starting out and you're wanting to marry Peggy. I love Peggy myself and I think a man that wants to marry her has got to set a pretty high mark for himself. I want to say to you, give people something solid to go on so the next time anything comes up they won't misjudge you."

"I know, Judge; I know! That's all true!" said Ted earnestly.

Off on a Wagon Tour Through the Ozarks

William, the gobbler hunter, and Tillyannie decide to take advantage of the spring weather by touring for a month in their horse-drawn vehicle and a program is arranged which provides for sundry stops -o- -o- -o- -o- -o- -o-

By ALICE CURTICE MOYER-WING

“WELL, sir, ain't this the all-overest, all-firedest, purtiest weather you ever seen? Why, this here mornin', now—well, I jist kinder reckon that nature must a-laid awake all night, as it were, a-workin' on it and makin' it up special. The woods is jist plumb a-runnin' over with birds, and all of 'em a-singin' fit to bust theirselves, and the grass is a-gittin' bigger ever' minute. The cows will be a-livin' on the range in jist no time, hardly. 'Talk about your seasons,' I says to Tillyannie this mornin', 'jist talk about 'em all you want to,' I says, 'but spring has got 'em all beat plumb holler.'

“Tillyannie laughed. 'William,' she says, 'I heerd you say last summer that if it wasn't fer the heat and flies and fleas and ticks and snakes, that the hot days jist beat anything a-goin' fer weather. They made the cold water taste so good, you 'lowed. And it was so good fer the corn. Then in October and November, you reckoned that they jist wasn't no time, in season er out of season, that could git in hollerin' distance of the fall, with its peace and quiet and its hills all kivvered over with red and yeller-gold trees. And jist this past winter you said'——

“But I busted out a-laughin'. 'I reckon, honey,' I says, 'that they're all good. The Lord shore knowed what He was about when He made 'em,' I says.

“But this here spring has somehow got a-hold of me awful big, this mornin', and I'm jist enj'yin' it to the bustin' p'int. Fer, let me tell you somethin'—they ain't none of these here days a-goin' to slop back fer us to take another whack at 'em. Ain't it a plumb sight? When I go to bed at night, realizin' that I have purty nigh wasted a whole day, sometimes, it makes me sick to my stummick. And if I've been mean to the stock er anything, I feel like I ort to git up and go out to the barn and ask their forgiveness, as it were. If I was a prayin' man, and I reckon we all air, I would shore ax the Lord ever' mornin' to he'p me live the day so I wouldn't never be sorry it had come to me and so they wouldn't nobody else never be sorry ner none the wuss off fer me a-livin' in it.

“But, law-zee! That ain't what I come fer to tell you'ns about. Me and Tillyannie—well, sir, what do you reckon me and Tillyannie and Happy Hooligan has been a-doin'? Haw, haw, haw! You couldn't guess in a coon's age. Haw, haw! What do you reckon? Huh? Well, sir, we've been a-gittin' ready fer to go away on a trip. Yes, sir! Shore. Fact is, we're all ready but hitchin' the hosses to the wagon and startin'.

“Where we goin'? Oh, jist a-travelin' around. Tillyannie, she ain't never been nowheres, much, and we jist 'lowed we'd bust loose and go som'ers. Now, myself, I've been around a right smart, up to Sent Louis several times and down to Poplar Bluff, and once way off down into Dunklin County—me not a-bein' afeerd of railroads, as it were. But Tillyannie, she jist natcherly won't travel on 'em.

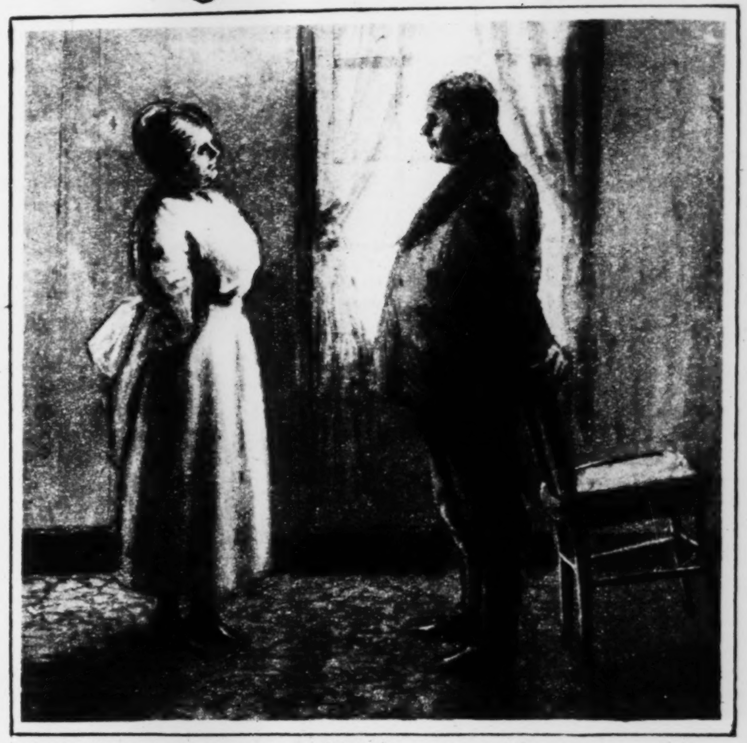
“ 'William,' she says, 'I hain't never rid on one of them there trains yet,' she says, 'and what's more,' she says, 'if I keep my senses, I don't aim to.' And when Tillyannie speaks positive like that, I know they ain't no use to argyfy, even if I wanted to, which I didn't. I'm plumb a-hankerin' to go in the wagon myself.

“But as to where we're a-goin', well, we're jist a'goin'. That's it. Jist a-goin'. When we git hongry fer a bait of fish, we'll stop and ketch 'em. I ain't never been on no train that'd do that fer a feller, have you? If we git to a town where they is a good movin' pitcher show, we'll jist natcherly stay till we've saw it all we want to. I'll be a-runnin' that there train, and it shore cain't go till I'm ready to give the signal. I ain't never rid on no train with a conductor that'd stop fer pitcher shows, have you? We'll stop and build up a log far when we want to eat, and if we git tard we'll turn the engine loose to eat grass fer a day and sleep it off. Oh, they's a heap to be said in favor of Tillyannie's favor-ite method of travelin'. And we're shore jist about ready to turn on the steam and git.

“And, say! I've got a awful big joke on Tillyannie. I ain't a-goin' to take my razor. It jist about bothers me all I can stand to shave ever' week, like she makes me. We'll be gone a month, likely, and if I ain't got my razor I won't have to shave fer a month. Haw, haw, haw! I've been a-laughin' to myself ever sence I slipped it out of the grub box, where it was all wropped up in a big package, as innercent as you please.

“And that grub box. I jist wish you could see it. They's a whole baked ham in it, all fixed up with sugar and stuff that makes the fat purty nigh the best part about it. They jist ain't nobody can beat Tillyannie bakin' a ham, er doin' nothin' else, hardly, fer that matter. And we're takin' along a skillet fer to fry the fish in, and we'll git a few wild turkeys as we go along. I can call 'em to me, if they's any in the whole country, round about, any place er anywheres at all. They cain't nobody beat me a-callin' turkeys, not even the turkeys theirselves.

“We've got a wagon kiver fer the wagon, and a feed box on the back end fer the hosses. My ax is tied on behind and ever'thing is jist plumb ready.



“ 'William,' she says, 'I hain't never rid on one of them there trains yet,' she says, 'and what's more,' she says, 'if I keep my senses, I don't aim to.' ”

“Lem Gibbs, he come over fer to give us some farewell advice. Lem is awful advisin'. And he things about things they don't nobody else ever notice, hardly. In the year 1900, I reckon he named it to me a hundred times. 'Gob,' he would say, 'it's been a hundred years sence a thing like this happened before,' he says. 'Not sence 1800,' he says. 'Jist think of all that's tuck place sence 1800. It'll be another hundred years—the year 2000—before it happens agin. This is the only plumb endin' and instant new beginnin' of a even century that you and me will ever see, Gob,' he says, 'and they'll be heaps and heaps of people that'll come and go in between that'll never see even one beginnin' er endin'. It's always been that-a way, I reckon,' he says. 'And jist think of what all will be bound to happen before the year 2000,' he says.

“And in 1912, on the twelfth day of the twelfth month, Lem, he walked four mile to talk it over with me.

“And in 1919 he was all swoggled up agin with thinkin'. Nothin' like it had happened sence 1818 and nothin' like it could happen agin until 2020. 'We've seen several strange things in the way of century figures,' he says, 'that ain't give to jist ever'body to see, Gob,' he says.

“Me and Lem was boys together and some of the old fellers still calls me 'Gob,' that bein' a nickname fer 'Gobbler Hunter,' which I was knowed by, fur and wide, count of gittin' more wild turkeys than anybody else.

“So, you see, Lem bein' the kind of feller he is, I ginerly pay some 'tention to what he tells me. He says we ort to be awful keerful how we dress when we're a-travelin' round that-a way. He 'lows that we ort to wear the wust clo'es we have so as to make people think we're too pore to have anything wuth stealin'. Says he knowed a feller once't that saved his watch and all his money, purty nigh, jist by lookin' awful pore. And he 'lowed if our hosses wasn't quite so fat it'd be a heap better fer us.

“And jist as we had got our wust things all ready fer to put on to travel in, Sam Hodges, he comes along, and he says that the way fer to dress when you're a-travelin', is to look jist as well off as you can. Says that when you look pore, people jist natcherly knows that you're a-puttin' on and that you'll likely git robbed ever' time.

“So then we 'lowed we'd try it both ways. We shore don't aim to git robbed ner nothin' if they's a way to keep out of it. We're a-goin' to keep our clo'es handy of both kinds and see which we git along the best in. Sam is a right smart of a feller, hisself. Besides, we don't want to hurt either one of their feelin's, them both a-bein' neighbors. I reckon we'll start tomorrer and wear our Sunday clo'es, it bein' Sunday, and Lem, he says they won't be no danger, nohow, till we git out of our own county, which will be about Monday. And as I was a-sayin', Happy Hooligan will be with us. That'll he'p a right smart, of course. Besides, travelin' wouldn't be travelin' without a dawg to sleep under the wagon of nights—which is another place where we've got the railroad plumb skinned.

“Well, I'll come around and tell you about it when we git back. You'ns better come along home with me and stay all night. But, gen-tull-men! Don't you do it, nuther. We're a-goin' to jist have a cold snack fer supper tonight and git started at 4 o'clock in the mornin'. That dern fool habit of our'n down there, a-axin' ever'body to go home with us, is a-goin' to give a feller a heap of bother sometimes if he don't watch out.

“But, as I was a-sayin'. I'll drap in and tell you about the trip when we git back.”

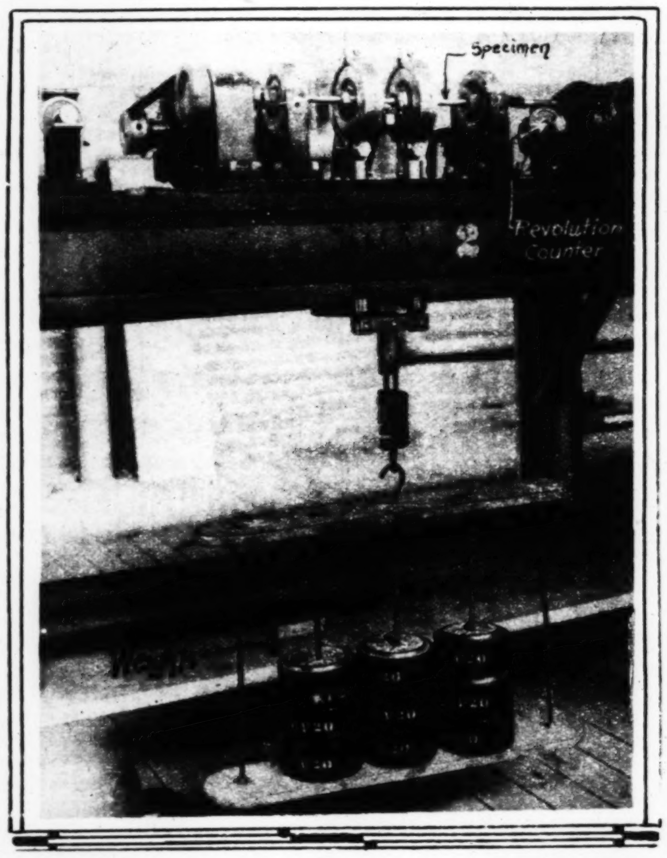
Finding Out How Steel, Just Like a Human Being, Breaks Down Under Too Much "Fatigue"

Experiments at University of Illinois will extend over 2-year period and supply data on the way that frequent, although light, loadings cause "slip lines" in metal and finally fractures — The results will be of interest to every auto owner, every passenger on elevators and every traveler by rail -o- -o- -o- -o- -o-



One of the testing machines, on which a steel rod under stress (of weights attached) revolves day and night until it collapses, or registers a total of 100,000,000 revolutions.

By E. M. FLETCHER.

SNAP! Crash! An axle breaks, one car topples over, another is telescoped, and a score of people are killed or maimed—all because a bit of steel somewhere got "tired" and suffered a "physical breakdown."

That metals, like human beings, do experience fatigue, sometimes beyond the limit of endurance, although the load they bear may itself be light, and do "go to pieces" suddenly, like overworked men, is being demonstrated by Prof. H. F. Moore, professor of engineering materials at the University of Illinois, College of Engineering, in a two-year series of experiments on the fatigue of metals.

The investigation, conducted under the joint auspices of the Engineering Foundation, the National Research Council, the General Electric Co. and the University of Illinois Engineering Experiment Station, aims at the ultimate determination of the limit of endurance of various metals, notably steel. Although hitherto the endurance of metals under a single load has been tested adequately, knowledge is still meager concerning fatigue strength under frequent loadings.

Professor H. F. Moore, in charge of unique test.

It is hoped that the present investigation will add materially to the understanding of these phenomena.

How tired, Mr. Auto Owner, is your automobile crankshaft, the steering knuckle, the springs, the axles, the engine parts?

How fatigued, Mr. Office Man, are the wire ropes of the elevator which hoists you daily to the upper regions of your skyscraper?

How fit, Mr. Straphanger, are the axles of the street car trucks which deliver you alternately at your place of business and at your home?

How weary, Mr. Commuter, are the girders of the bridges to which you so often instrust your life?

The strength of these smaller and larger pieces of steel upon which the functioning of our lives and life itself depend, we take for granted. Of course, those elevator ropes are strong, we think, if we think about the subject at all, and dismiss the matter. They were strong—originally somebody saw to that. But even a strong man is no longer strong when he has exerted his muscles to the utmost a sufficient number of times, or even when he has exerted them a little less than the utmost a sufficiently longer number of times. He reaches his limit, and so does the strongest of man-made steel.

Unlike man, steel gives no evidence of the coming breakdown. It works well and faithfully up to the fracture point, and as yet man has been unable to predict when that point is at hand. Can the approaching collapse, then, be predetermined? Can vital statistics be compiled for the lifetime of steel as for human life, so that the automobile, or rail, or bridge manufacturer can reduce his "risks" to the science evolved by the life insurance companies?

So important are these questions to the manufacturer and to the ordinary citizen that the University of Illinois has equipped a laboratory with a battery of 15 testing machines, for which it furnishes power, light and heat, together with the time of Prof. Moore for two years, and the National Research Council, the Engineering Foundation of New York and the General Electric Co. of New York have together contributed about $60,000, about half of which goes for the salaries of five men engaged in carrying on the experiments. All results obtained are open to the public.

The investigation is the outgrowth of special experiments on cold-rolled steel, made by Prof. Moore at the request of the Government during the war.

The problem presented by the wear and tear on metals from the stress of comparatively light loads many times repeated was recognized in Germany by August Wohler as early as 1860. He and his successors originated various tests, all of which have proved incomplete for modern machinery, largely because they are of too short duration.

If a bit of metal, however, escapes unscathed the modern torture chamber designed by Prof. Moore, it is given an honorable discharge, and it and all its posterity are promised a long and honorable life. From a consignment of steel submitted for testing, 20 specimens in the form of .4-inch rods, 13 inches long, are machined. The "elastic limit" of the product is then ascertained by inserting a specimen in a machine which stretches it out like a piece of taffy, until it begins to "neck down" and finally breaks off. A weighing scale records the stress required to break it, and its resistance per square inch for a single load is then computed.

A steel shaft is then inserted like an axle, horizontally, in the apparatus shown in the accompanying illustration, a load somewhat less than the maximum determined in the foregoing experiment is applied, and the rod is set revolving night and day at the rate of 1500 revolutions a minute. The conditions reproduce those of the ordinary railroad or automobile axle in motion. If the load is heavy enough the piece will break in a few minutes. The load is then graduated on the other specimens until one is found light enough so that the rod withstands the entire test of 100,000,000 revolutions lasting 45 days and nights.

"The action upon the steel in the testing machines is like a continual backward and forward bending motion," Prof. Moore explains the process. "A wire, for example, will bend double indefinitely without breaking, but wriggle it back and forth for a few times and it will snap. As a car axle stands motionless the upper part may be said to suffer tension (pulling action) from the weight sustained at each end. The lower surface at the same time is being compressed (crushing action). Make a one-half revolution of the axle and the situation is reversed—the upper part under tension is now under compression and vice versa. It is undergoing exactly the same treatment as that which snapped off the wire, an infinitely severer test than to support a single load. The behavior of the internal structure of the steel during this treatment is peculiar, as revealed by the microscope. After repeated stress, steel will snap almost without warning; while under a single heavy load it will, at most, crumple. In the former case the steel behaves as though it were a brittle metal rather than a ductile one.

How Long Will That Metal Part Do Its Work? Study the Figures

Approximate number of repetitions of stress in the "lifetime" of the structure or machine shown below:

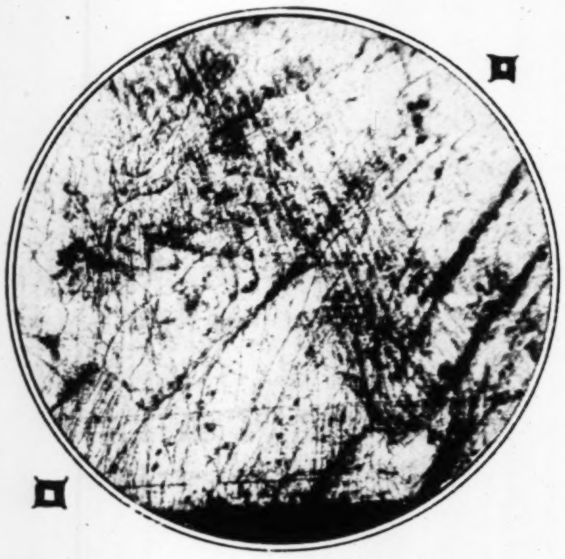
Railroad bridge, chord members...	2,000,000
Elevated railroad structure, floor beams	40,000,000
Railroad rail, locomotive wheel loads	500,000
Railroad rail, car wheel loads.....	15,000,000
Airplane-engine crankshaft.......	18,000,000
Car axles	50,000,000
Automobile engine crankshaft.....	120,000,000
Lineshafting in shops..............	360,000,000
Steam engine piston rods, connecting rods and crankshafts........	1,000,000,000
Steam-turbine shafts, bending stresses	15,000,000,000

"In view of the sharp crystalline appearance of the fractured surface, it has been supposed that the sharp rupture followed a sudden internal change from a fibrous to a crystalline structure. Microscopic study shows, however, that the structure of metals is always crystalline. Fracture under repeated stress is apparently due to minute cracks or 'slip lines' which extend through the crystals and which uniting into larger cracks act like minute hacksaw cuts, gradually eating into a machine part until it cannot longer carry its load and snaps off much as a piece of iron falls off when almost cut in two by a power hacksaw.

"The starting point for these slips may be at a point where a minute flaw or scratch exists, where there is friction and consequent wear between a shaft and a bearing, or at a rivet hole or a sharp notch. Any of these defects are negligible if the part is subjected to a few loadings, but each becomes of the highest importance in case of parts subjected to many thousand loadings.

"This progressive action of small cracks is offered as an explanation of the occasional failure of springs under light loads from cracks started by previous heavy loads. The collapse of used automobiles is a commonplace example of this phenomenon. It is important, therefore, to know the history of any piece of metal in estimating the length of its future usefulness."

The question of the effect of heat treatments has yet to be fully studied.



Smooth steel as it looks under a microscope. The fine "slip lines" running diagonally up and down are symptoms of "fatigue."

Head of Christ Carved on a Bean Pod

intimate friend of Mrs. McFadden. The latter heard of the miniature and asked to see it, then expressed a desire to purchase it. She did not realize until recently what an art treasure she possessed.

When Mrs. Harriman heard of the carving, she asked permission to see it and put it on exhibition at her home, 142 East Fifty-fifth street. Bishop M. J. Curley of St. Augustine, Fla., and Frederick Macmonnies, art expert, were summoned to view the gem. Both were enthusiastic to the highest degree.

In the 26 years that have elapsed since the likeness was produced, the pod of the bean has grown hard as ivory, which it resembles in color. The shell of the bean makes a setting for the head. To be appreciated, it has to be viewed through a microscope. The simple lines are rendered with the utmost attention to detail and the finished carving is a most dignified and saintly conception of the appearance of Christ. Experts in ivory carving, both in America and England, have examined the work and have marveled at the beauty and realism of the tiny imagery.

All efforts to trace the name of the sculptor, who doubtless expressed some of his own mental anguish prior to execution, on the countenance of the Savior, have been fruitless. Records of political prisoners are loosely kept in Central American prisons, and while some of the authorities had a recollection of the circumstance, none could or would throw light on the identity of the artist in question. All trace of the jailer was similarly lost. Senor Navia's relative did not know the name of the man who had casually given him what turned out to be an artistic treasure, so it appears as if the little carving will have to be anonymous.

Provisions are being made for the proper preservation of the carving, and it doubtless will be kept for the collection of some art gallery.

Carving of this sort, which once flourished, is practically unknown in these days. Occasionally references are seen in the daily press to some work produced in miniature by a persevering artist. One of the latest of these reports involved the carving of a cherry stone into a miniature basket, in which reposed six silver spoons, perfectly formed, but so small they had to be viewed through a microscope. It will be recalled that a well-known accomplishment among the orthodox and devout Jews of Europe was the inscribing of portions of the Talmud in such tiny script that an entire section would be written in a space capable of being placed within a bracelet or locket. When the process of making such reproductions by photography developed, however, the art fell into disuse.

Many years ago there appeared tiny medals, the size of a gold dollar, upon which the entire Lord's Prayer was stamped. But carving in miniature, with the exception of the work turned out by a certain school of Japanese artists, is practically a lost art today. The discovery of this rare bit of work, accordingly, has aroused great interest in the East.

Apartment House of a Thousand Rooms

eight feet deep, two feet wide, between heavy walls of masonry, which, for solidity, could not be excelled unless built of modern concrete. The floor is hard and smooth and shows much use. This trench, entirely unexpected, is without precedent in the ruins of the southwest. If, by further excavation, it proves to be continuous with the curving ridge, as seems almost certain, it afforded a protective passage from the extreme southeast corner of the building to the northwestern quarter, 700 feet away.

The excavation of the southern extremity of the east wing of the building is disclosed two stories below the ground. Looking down into the excavated rooms one gets a fair idea of the knowledge of construction possessed by these people who lived a thousand years ago. Partition walls are sometimes reinforced by imbedding timbers in the masonry, as concrete walls are reinforced with iron rods today. Floors and ceilings were construeted by first laying heavy supporting logs across from wall to wall. Upon these were laid smaller logs or poles, placed closely side by side. Next came thin cedar slabs and over them a layer of cedar bark. Upon this was a solidly packed layer of earth, kept hard and smooth by rubbing with smoothing stones. The views of some of the rooms show a remarkable state of preservation of both masonry and timber.

The extension of the excavation into the plaza or inner court brought many surprises. The perfectly level surface gave no sign of the labyrinth of kivas, shafts, cists and variously walled spaces which were uncovered. The kivas, crowding one another, cutting into one another, and overlying one another, have been found as far as digging has gone. Each is a variant from the conventional type of the San Juan culture area. The common characteristic is that all are circular and solidly walled. The pronounced impressions which archeologists have received from their study of Chettro Kettle are: Exuberance in the building impulse; predominance of domestic, community life; intense religious activity; mastery in building in stone; in meeting environmental conditions; dependence upon agriculture, with hunting as the secondary means of subsistence.

Archeologists are comparing the achievements of these native American builders with the much better known works of an ancient civilization in the Old World. Chettro Kettle, as excavated, presents a building which, abandoned, unroofed and in some parts exposed to the elements, stands as very few specimens of walls in any land have withstood the ages. They say that in wall masonry the Chaco builders were unsurpassed and that it may be doubted if our modern masonry will be as enduring.

OVERLOOK HOUSE - -

But the Judge pressed on: "When you found yourself in a mess you thought you wanted a real job, but you wanted it a long way off—something novel and exciting. Get all that out of your head. Going off to some new scene is just fooling yourself. It's the same world and the same you over in Russia that it is here. Hard work is just as dull over there as it is in New York. Take the job that offers, the one nearest at hand, and pitch into that."

"I'll go to New York next week," Ted declared.

"That sounds right," the Judge replied, his face lighting with the strong smile that changed it in a twinkling. "I did you wrong; but I don't want to do you the further wrong of offering you any martyr's crown. I want to offer you a long-handled shovel instead." His eyes shifted to Peggy and the smile broadened into a chuckle as he added: "This foolish little person will probably ruin you with crowns, if you'll let her."

Peggy arose, stepped over to the Judge's chair, and kissed him.

Danforth got up, too, and as he walked from the room he was thinking that Peggy had nothing to say to his going. With a deep sense of defeat he wandered out of the house, toward the stables. . . . If he had not gone so far, if he had stopped short of telling Peggy that foolish stuff about Ted's abnormal mind. . . . But he had gone that far. He wondered if she would ever forgive him for that.

Walking heavily on, he soon saw a slope-shouldered, long-necked figure in a light yellow suit—Mr. Samuel Thorp—still hanging about, alert for any further interesting developments. At once Danforth was struck with wonder. It was this mere loquacious and lying fool who had led him, an able man, off on that absurd dance—down to the very brink of the Coffee Pot! But in a moment he knew that was not quite true; it was his own jealousy that had misled him. He had lost the stake; perhaps he had lost also what he had before, her sisterly love. . . . If only he had stopped short of that last touch about Ted's degeneracy, for that would be hard to forgive. But he hadn't stopped short. He tasted the bitter thought that he and Sam Thorp were a couple of fools together. . . .

Well, he could go back to New York. He was not a mere blundering blockhead down there. When it came to oil he was an able man! He strolled on heavily.

The light was softening to sunset when Danforth returned to Overlook House. At that time three persons sat in Edith Hilton's room—Edith herself, in a reclining chair, Ted Pennell and Peggy Loughman in front of her.

Presently the bandaged woman's low and earnest voice ceased. Ted, with downcast eyes, reached out for Peggy's hand in humility.

"I know, Edith," he said, "and I will. . . . Peggy, I will!"

"And I, too!" Peggy murmured.

In that high moment Danforth stepped into the room. The moment's height shone in all three of the faces there. Its atmosphere of a great reconciliation with life and submission, hope and love, pervaded the room. Danforth was instantly sensible of that.

As the ponderous, swarthy man advanced to a chair what shone in their faces seemed not exactly to withdraw from him or shut him out, but to regard him abeyantly. He sat down, studied the rug an instant, and turned to Ted:

"You're going to New York next week?"

"Yes," Ted replied.

Danforth took his instant of deliberation and looked only at Ted as he rumbled:

"Your father is a fine man in a great many ways, but I can teach you business better than he can. Come into my office with me."

Ted's face shone anew, but there was astonishment in it, also. "You mean it?" he cried.

"Yes, I mean it. Come into my office with me," Danforth repeated.

He kept his eyes to the young man's face, but he was well enough aware of the brightness, for him, in the faces of the two women. An instant later he heard Peggy murmuring: "Good old Dan!" He felt that the atmosphere of the room included him.

Laws Could Add to Personal Comfort

TO THE EDITOR:

Here is a copy of the message I am sending to Congress and maybe they might not dast give it out to the papers so here is a copy of it.

To Congress:

Well lady and gents I realize it ain't customary for nobody only the president to send you boys a April fool message but still and all they's no law vs. anybody sending you one a specially a man that come as close to the White House as myself and might of got all the way in if I hadn't of left Washington a few minutes before the Hardings decided to make it an amusement park, at least judgeing from some of the birds that did get in I don't see how they could of barred this baby.

And besides, if you boys is anything like our last congress a message will go just as big whether it comes from me or the president or the ouija board so any way I am going to write and point out a few things that need tension that I studied them up while the president was down on the Florida golf links roughing it.

Well gents you know the old gag about people that lives in a glass house shouldn't drink out of the bottle, so the place to commence makeing reforms is right where you are at, namely the nation's capital and I don't know no way you could make a better beginning than appt. a committee to tend all the ball games in Washington this season and try and find out if the home team is really playing their best.

Presidents of coarse likes to travel because they get 10 cts. per mile, which nets them about 2 cts. profit at the present rates minus the amusement tax on an upper but if they claim they can't get along without some such kind of a ret rich quick scheme, why allow them a dime for every mile they stay on the fairway and I guess by the end of 4 yrs. they will have enough saved up to buy a 1-2 interest in a milk chocolate.

I also wished you would put up the names of the different govt. buildings in big letters so as when a man is showing his Mrs. the town she won't act like she had had him subpoenaed.

Borrow a 16 yr. old dependent child somewheres and give it to the bird that figured out the personal exemption allowance on the income tax and make him support it on $200 a yr.

Pass a rule to permit smokeing in the senate and house so as you boys won't keep asking teacher if you can leave the rm.

So much for local legislations and now we come to matters that effects the whole U. S. States and the 1st thing to do is to pass another amendmunt to the constitution and call it the 37th. amendmunt because it takes in both the 18th. and 19th. amendmunts and have this new amendmunt provide that election day is Kings X from Prohibition so as a man will have some place to hang around wile the madam is spoiling ballots.

Repeal the truants law so a person won't half to go all spring and fall without a caddy.

Repeal the law vs. the rabbit punch in boxing. This punch is a blow that lands at the base of a fighter's brain and it looks to me like the man that lands it, instead of being disqualified, ought to be give a seat in the hall of fame along with Columbus and Admiral Peary.

Along these lines it would also be a good move to pass a Federal law vs. wrestlers useing a headlock. They ain't no more use for one than on the German treasury bldg.

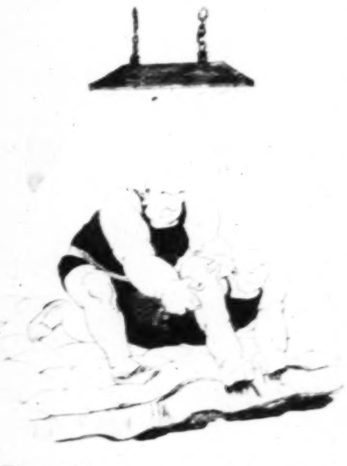
No 1-2 fare minded congress wants to show partiality towards either one of the 2 big govt. war schools so another sporting event that should ought to be layed on the shelf is the goal after touchdowns. This helps the Navy but don't do the army no good.

Pass a law vs. men wearing dinner clothes which don't benefit nobody but the Chinaman. Or if it looks like they was too much opposition to abolishing this quaint costume all together, at lease leave us have some govt. regulation so as when you are called up and ast to dinner you won't half to go through no all day battle of the Marne deciding if you will or if you won't.

Make some kind of a universal rule in regards to hat in co-ed elevators. They way it is now a man is all right if he stays in one town, but the minute he goes visiting he is all wrong.

For inst. if you are in Chicago you keep your hat on unlest the elevator is in a hotel or a dept. store.

In N. Y. City you also take them off in a apt. bldg. elevator provided the lady ain't your own wife or a relative. But in places like Washington you got to expose yourself in elevators of all kinds and when I and the madam was there and I took her on sight seeing trips to the different floors of office buildings, I discovered that I was the only gent in the car with a covered egg and felt even sillier than ever.



"They ain't no more use for wrestlers using a headlock than on the German treasury bldg."

These is a few of the needed legislations, Boys, and I wished you would find time to give them your tension, but I suppose you will be too busy monking with the words and music of a peace treaty with a country that knows, or as lease has heard rumors, that we ain't been fighting them for 3 yrs.

BRICKS AND BEANS - -

"Not tomorrow," Peter said, sadly.

Mamma say yes,' the boy responded. "She iron sister's dress."

This was a tragedy, Peter thought. Surely, Mrs. Peter had not put false hopes in the hearts of her little children! Mrs. Peter surely knew that they couldn't afford the beach trip.

They reached the door of the shack, and Mrs. Peter met them, her eyes glistening. Peter kissed her and went on into the kitchen to wash.

"Peter—I—I hope you'll not be angry," Mrs. Peter said. "I just couldn't let the children be disappointed again, and the summer is passing."

"I know, Mary—but how can we afford it? There—there! I guess we can if we be mighty careful a couple of weeks."

Mrs. Peter pressed a dollar and a quarter into his palm.

"There, Peter," she said. "Now, don't be angry. It is only for just this once."

"But how"——

"I—I got a couple of washings to do, Peter."

"Mary!"

"It didn't hurt me a bit, Peter."

"But I've told you I can't have that, Mary! You haven't been strong since the last baby"——

"I took my time, Peter, and it didn't hurt me a bit. And I'll not do it again. I wanted to take the babies so much."

Peter looked down at her, and the tears were very near coming. He kissed her awkwardly.

"All right," he said. "We'll make the most of it, then. We'll talk about it this evening, so the kiddies will be anticipating, and we'll give them the time of their lives tomorrow. I suppose we'd better get up in time to catch the first train"——

They caught the first train, and they arrived at the beach at an early hour. Hand in hand, the boy and the girl stood at the edge of the water and faced the unfathomable mystery of the ocean. Peter and Mrs. Peter sat down on the hard sand and fixed a blanket for the baby, and drank in the stiff, sea air.

Then they had luncheon, and watched the crowds that came later, and stared at the flaring signs on the sideshows; and Peter even purchased a bag of peanuts and took the boy and girl for one ride on the merry-go-round. They had planned to make the most of this single day at the beach, to gain which Mrs. Peter had worked in the heat over a washtub, while Peter worked in the clay at the brickyards to get money to buy beans.

And toward evening a beautiful small cruising yacht steamed slowly by and anchored off one of the fashionable hotels.

"Peter! Wouldn't it be great to own a boat like that?" Mrs. Peter gasped. "And to take a ride in it on the ocean! Oh, if only, some time, we could only get on one and just look around! Wouldn't it be glorious?"

"Own a boat like that?" Peter exclaimed. "Yes, I might, in about 5,000,000 years! I'll bet she cost as much as $3000! Nope, I guess I'll never buy a boat like that!"

Peter had purchased a part of that one, but he did not know. It was the Irene.

OIL PIPE LINES

THE total mileage of oil pipe lines in the United States is now about 34,000, and the "gathering systems" 11,500, making a total of 45,500 miles. At the time most of the lines were constructed, say the experts of the Geological Survey, the average cost per mile, based on the eight-inch pipe, was $6500; and the cost of the average pump station was $130,000 to $250,000. The pipe usually used is eight inches in diameter and the specifications require that they be of uniform quality of steel, with threads to make possible a perfect union at the joints and capable of withstanding an internal pressure of 2000 pounds to the square inch.

How to Increase Your Will Power In One Hour

Author of This Article Tells How He Acquired a Dominating Will Power That Earns Him Between $50,000 and $70,000 a Year

FOUR YEARS ago a man offered me a wonderful bargain. He was hard up for money and wanted to sell me some shares in a young, growing company for $1000. Based on the earnings of the Company the stock offered me was easily worth $5000—in fact, the man who finally bought the shares sold them again in five months at a profit of $4300.

The reason I didn't buy the shares was that I could no more raise a thousand dollars than I could hop, skip and jump across the Atlantic Ocean. A thousand dollars! And my income only twenty-five a week.

The second chapter in my life began a few months later, when another opportunity came to me. It required an investment of $20,000 during the first year. I raised the money easily, paid back every penny I borrowed, and had $30,000 left at the end of the first year! To date, in less than four years, my business has paid me a clear profit of over $200,000 and is now earning between $50,000 and $70,000 a year. Yet for twelve years before, the company had been losing money every year!

The natural question for my reader to ask is, "How could you borrow $20,000 to invest in a business which had previously been a failure, after being unable to borrow $1000 for an investment that seemed secure? It is a fair question. And the answer can be given in two little words — WILL POWER.

These are only a few of the many subjects treated.

When the first proposition came to me I passed it by simply because I didn't have the money and couldn't borrow it. I went from one friend to the next and all turned me down. Several refused to talk business with me at all. They all liked me personally, and they asked about the kiddies, but when it came to money matters I hadn't a chance. I was every time I talked to one of them. I pleaded with them, almost begged them. But everybody had their "money all tied up in other investments." It was an old excuse, but I accepted it meekly. I called it hard luck. But I know today that it was nothing in the world except my lack of Will Power or rather my weak Will Power, which kept me from getting what I wanted.

When I heard that the man sold those shares at a profit of $4300 it seemed that my sorrow could not be greater. That profit was just about what my salary amounted to for four years! But instead of grieving over my "hard luck," I decided to find out why I was so easily beaten in everything I tried to accomplish. It must be that there was something vital that made the difference between success and failure. It wasn't lack of education, for many illiterate men become wealthy. What was this vital spark? What was this one thing which successful men had and which I did not have?

I began to read books about psychology and mental power. But everything I read was too general. There was nothing definite—nothing that told me what to do.

After several months of discouraging effort, I finally encountered a book called "Power of Will," by Prof. Frank Channing Haddock. The very title came to me as a shock. When I opened the book I was amazed. I realized that will power was the vital spark—the one thing that I lacked. And here in this book were the very rules, lessons and exercises through which anyone could increase their will power. Eagerly I read page after page; including such articles as The Law of Great Thinking; How to Develop Analytical Power; How to Concentrate Perfectly; How to Guard Against Errors in Thought; How to Develop Fearlessness; How to Acquire a Dominating Personality.

An hour after I opened the book I felt like a new person. My sluggish will power was beginning to awaken. There was a new light in my eye, a new spring in my step, a new determination in my soul. I began to see, in my past, the many mistakes I had made, and I knew I would never make them again.

I practiced some of the simple exercises. They were more fascinating than any game of cards or any sport.

Then came an opportunity to acquire the business which had lost money for twelve years, and which I turned into a $50,000 a year money maker. Instead of cringing before the moneyed people, I won them over by my sheer force of will. I would not be denied. And my every act and word since then has been the result of my training in will power.

I am convinced that every man has within himself every essential quality of success except a strong will. Any man who doubts that statement need only analyze the successful men he knows, and he will find himself their equal, or their superior, in every way except in will power. Without a strong will, education counts for little, money counts for nothing, opportunities are

I earnestly recommend Prof. Haddock's great work, "Power of Will," to those who feel that success is just out of reach—to those who lack that something which they cannot define, yet which holds them down to the grind of a small salary.

Never before have business men and women needed this help so badly as in these trying times. Hundreds of real and imaginary obstacles confront us every day, and only those who are masters of themselves and who hold their heads up will succeed. "Power of Will" as never before is an absolute necessity—an investment in self-culture which no one can afford to deny himself.

I am authorized to say that any reader who cares to examine "Power of Will" for five days may do so without sending any money in advance. If after one hour you do not feel that your will power has increased, and if after a week's reading you do not feel that this great book supplies that one faculty you need most to win success, return it and you will owe nothing. Otherwise send only $3.50, the small sum asked.

Some few doubters will scoff at the idea of will power being the fountain head of wealth, position and everything we are striving for, but the great mass of intelligent men and women will at least investigate for themselves by sending for the book at the publisher's risk. I am sure that any book that has done for me—and for thousands of others—what "Power of Will" has done—is well worth investigating. It is interesting to note that among the 400,000 owners of "Power of Will" are such prominent men as Supreme Court Justice Parker; Wu Ting Fang, Ex-U. S. Chinese Ambassador; Gov. McKelvie, of Nebraska; Assistant Postmaster-General Britt; General Manager Christeson, of Wells-Fargo Express Co.; E. St. Elmo Lewis; Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas; and thousands of others. In fact, today "Power of Will" is just as important, and as necessary to a man's or woman's equipment for success, as a dictionary. To try to succeed without Power of Will is like trying to do business without a telephone.

As your first step in will training, I suggest immediate action in this matter before you. It is not even necessary to write a letter. Use the form below, if you prefer, addressing it to the Pelton Publishing Company, 134-H Wilcox Block, Meriden, Conn., and the book will come by return mail.
